Still, John Johnson, DPI's director of education information services, said more work needs to be done.

"The gaps are too big in terms of achievement for students with disabilities, they are too big in areas of race, students with socio-economic disadvantaged backgrounds," he said.

The state plans to start a new test in the spring of 2014-2015 school year for third through eighth grades and high school juniors. The current tests measure students' performance at only one point in the year and the new system will have higher expectations and measure progress throughout the school year.

This year nearly 42 percent of students who took the tests came from families with incomes low enough to qualify for free or reduced-price lunch, which has been increasing. The numbers are higher for minority groups: about 81 percent of black students, 77 percent of Hispanics, 68 percent of American Indians and 52 percent of Asian students are considered low-income.

The 78 percent of students statewide who showed proficient or advanced math skills is up about 5 percentage points from 2005-2006. Black students showed the largest improvement, closing the gap by 7.5 percentage points compared to white students between 2005-06 and 2011-12. It also closed by nearly 5 percent for American Indians, more than 6 percent for Asians and nearly 7 percent for Hispanics. It only closed about 1 percent for disabled students compared to nondisabled students.

Northeast Wisconsin Youth Creating Change on Global Youth Service Day

GREEN BAY, WI - On April 20, dozens of preschool students from Mayflower Nursery School, ages three to five, will take to the streets to clean up the litter and trash in their neighborhood and park. The youth join millions of other young people around the world who are creating community change as part of Global Youth Service Day, the world's largest and longest-running service event.

Over 50 organizations in Northeast Wisconsin, including schools, Universities, after-school programs, non-profits, volunteer centers, national service programs, and faith-based organizations have joined the Global Youth Service Day movement by hosting service projects for Global Youth Service Day. An estimated 3,500 children, teens, and young adults, ages 5-25, and adult allies and champions will be helping make Northeast Wisconsin a "greener," healthier, more literate and safe place to live through youth-led service projects on April 20-22, 2012. The projects address several issues ranging from health, education, human services, and environment. Young people who want to register for existing projects can do so online at www.newgysd.org/rsvp/

Now its in 24th year, Global Youth Service Day (April 20-22, 2012) is celebrated in more than 100 countries, and recognizes the positive impact that young people have on their communities 365 days a year. Organized by YSA (Youth Service America), a leader in the international youth service movement, Global Youth Service Day offers youth, ages 5 to 25, the resources and support to plan meaningful projects that improve their communities.

"Congratulations and thanks to the young people of Green Bay, WI for their work to improve their community," said Steven A. Culbertson, YSA president and CEO. "On Global Youth Service Day, the world stands in awe as we see what's possible when kids take the lead as problem-solvers."

"Young people are constantly told they are tomorrow's leaders. Global Youth Service Day is an opportunity for young people to show the world that we are making a difference right now through service projects that are created and led by youth." said Emily Garcia, regional coordinator of Global Youth Service Day and marketing coordinator at the Mauthe Center.

YSA (Youth Service America) improves communities by increasing the number and diversity of young people, ages 5 to 25, serving in substantive roles.

Kolitsch leaving others in her wake

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

University of Wisconsin – Lacrosse freshman Andrea Kolitsch wanted to make a name for herself in college and after her first season on the Eagle's swim team she is well on her way.

Kolitsch picked Lacrosse because no one in family had yet attended the school.

"I didn't look into any other school besides (University of Wisconsin) Stevens Point. My mom went to Stevens Point and I didn't want to copy her," she said.

The Bayport High School standout got her start in the swimming pool thanks to her mother.

"When I was young, my mom was a swimmer, she signed me up for swim club when I was seven and was swimming since then," said Kolitsch.

Kolitsch swims the sprint freestyle and butterfly individually and on the relay teams. She loves the sport but it does have its downside.

"It's love-hate, you get bored staring at a black line and it tests your attention span, but then when you stop its like wait this is all I know," Kolitsch said. "The social part of it is so much fun, I love everyone that I swim with. When you win all the training pays off and it's rewarding."

Kolitsch's hard work is definitely paying off. Along with All Conference honors while at Bayport she has also set the Wisconsin Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (WIAC) record in the 100-yard butterfly. She was also part of the WIAC winning relay teams for the 400-yard medley, 400-yard freestyle, and 200-yard medley.

Her relay team also received NCAA Division III All-American Honorable Mention in the 400-yard medley and 200-yard freestyle events.

Like most college freshman, the challenge of time management can be burdensome. But as a student athlete that challenge has been compounded by a swim practice schedule.

During the swim season she practices two hours a day five days a week along with weight lifting for an hour two or three times a week.

"It's really demanding, you miss a few classes. It makes you work harder because you have multiple things to practice, not only your athletic ability but your academic talent as well," said Kolitsch. "You work hard in all aspects of your life."

Cty H Rec Center Names February Members of the Month

By Kyle Casper
Recreation Supervisor

The Oneida Recreation Department on Cty H has recently named its members of the month for February. Members for each area were chosen based on their effort and level of participation for the month in one of the Department's core areas.

In the area of Sports and Fitness youth were busy logging 60 minutes in the gym to increase their level of physical fitness. For the month of February, Peter Penass was the member for the boys, reaching this goal 14 times for the month. Aja Wilber was once again the member of the month for the girls for reaching this goal 20 out of a possible 21 times for the month.

In the Arts and Crafts area William Johnson and Elianna Jiminez invented a never seen before dice goblet. It is highly desired and they are busy making more to fill orders. They created this goblet using clay slabs and finished it with a high fire gold and black glaze. When they are not busy working with clay they are exploring the world of drawing. They created nice work this month.

This month's member of the month for Social Recreation was Wakiza Washburn. Wakiza demonstrated caring this month through his actions and words. These included holding the door open for elders, saying please and thank you, helping others clean up, and willingness to show others how to play games.

The Learning Center member of the month was Trinity Wilber. Trinity demonstrated hard work and dedication on her school work. Trinity utilized the Learning Center on 8 different occasions to complete her homework and put in the time necessary each time to completing all of her homework assignments.

Do's and Don'ts to be a responsible cyclist

You may have noticed the construction of new pedestrian paths along Seminary Road and Old Seymour Road in front of the Turtle School. These trails are part of a large community improvement project to provide a safe way for people to get around the Reservation. They are open to non-motorized traffic only. They will connect the Cornelius Circle Housing Site with the Turtle Were It Ends Housing Site, the Turtle School, the Norbert Hill Center, the Duck Creek Trail, the Site One Housing Site, the Episcopal Church, the Parish Hall, the Elderly Service Building, the Assisted Living Building, the Health Center, the Elder Village site on Henry Road and the Green Valley Housing Site on Florist Drive. There are many more trails in the planning process. Drivers please remember that pedestrians have the right of way in a cross walk. Also, spring is here and people are dusting off their bikes and hitting the road. Please be courteous and share the road. Here is a reminder for everyone who uses the roadways.

Here's some Do's and Don'ts to be a responsible cyclist. By Kenji Sugahana

1. Be courteous and share the road. Being courteous gains respect and helps make the roads safer for all cyclists.
2. The law allows you to ride two abreast, but it may not be the courteous or safe option. If you hear a vehicle approaching from behind, ride single file. Don't ride three abreast.
3. If you're blocking a whole line of cars and there's a place to safely pull off be courteous and stop.
4. Don't wander all over the road. Try to ride predictably and as far right as safely as you can. This does not mean to ride in an area that is littered with road debris or places you at risk.
5. Do take the lane if it safe to do so if there is a blind corner, high-risk junction or narrowing of the road.
6. Use common sense - don't pee in people's yards or hang out across the entire road if you're waiting for a regroup.
7. Stop at stop signs and signals. By law, cyclists must obey all traffic control devices.
8. Signal your intentions if you can safely do so. If you are turning, point in the direction you plan on going. If you are slowing, put your hand out behind you.
9. If you wave a car around you, don't get impatient. Remember that it is their decision to make as to whether it is safe to pass.
10. If you're in a group, take leadership, set a good example and do your best to make everyone ride courteously.
11. Pay attention! While it is the responsibility of drivers to avoid hitting you ride defensively to minimize risk!
12. Remember the 5% rule. 5% of drivers are jerks. Don't let that 5% get to you. Take a deep breath and move on.
13. Be friendly. If someone is courteous to you and does the right thing, wave and smile. Everyone likes to be acknowledged for doing the right thing.

Here's some Do's and Don'ts to be a responsible driver.

1. Be courteous and share the road. As a driver you may think the road belongs to drivers, but nobody owns the road. By law, a bicycle is a vehicle, so treat it like one.
2. Use your turn signals and check your mirrors before making turns. Cyclists can travel faster than you think.
3. Be patient behind a group of cyclists. If you crack your window you may hear "car back." That is a signal that cyclists are telling other cyclists to go single file as they know you are behind them.
4. Pass with care. You can legally pass over a double yellow but you must do so where it is safe. You should leave enough room so that if the cyclist should fall in front of you or swerve to avoid an object, you won't run over them. If there is a collision you could be held liable. Don't "buzz" or drive as close as you can to a cyclist. It is illegal.

5. Don't drive too closely behind a cyclist as you may not be able to stop in time if they come off of their bike or adjust to a road hazard abruptly. It would be the exact same as tailgating another driver.
6. Don't use your horn when you are close to the cyclist. This could cause them to swerve towards your vehicle. Sustained use of the horn is illegal.
7. Exercise caution and be patient. Remember it is your responsibility to avoid hitting the cyclist, not the responsibility of the cyclist to avoid getting hit by you.
8. Be aware that on downhill sections cyclists can often go faster than cars through curves. Try to avoid passing on downhill sections unless you have an extended clear line of sight.
9. Remember that cyclists can legally take the entire lane. You may think that it is a selfish action, but they may be preventing a collision. They really aren't trying to slow you down, sometimes it's just the safest way for them to traverse a section of the road, for example if there is a blind curve, an area where the road narrows or where there is oncoming traffic that you may not see.
10. Be patient. A gain of 30 seconds in your arrival time is not worth seriously injuring or killing someone. A family somewhere is appreciative that their father, son, mother or daughter returns home safely.
11. Pay attention! Don't text or use your cellphone while driving. Distracted driving places all road users at risk.
12. Remember the 5% rule. 5% of cyclists are jerks. There's nothing you can do about them. Take a deep breath and move on.
13. Be friendly. If someone is courteous to you and does the right thing, wave and smile. Everyone likes to be acknowledged for doing the right thing.

CWD found in northwest Wisconsin deer

By Todd Richmond
Associated Press

Chronic wasting disease has leapt into far northwestern Wisconsin despite a decade-long battle to keep the deadly deer ailment contained in the southwestern corner of the state, wildlife officials said Monday.

Department of Natural Resources Lands Division Administrator Kurt Thiede said test results have confirmed a doe found in the wild just outside Shell Lake last fall was infected.

The discovery threatens to send a new round of shockwaves through Wisconsin's $1 billion hunting industry and further strain the Department of Natural Resources' relationship with hunters and landowners who never bought into the agency's strategies to contain the disease when it first turned up in southern Wisconsin in 2002.

``This is the DNR and the sportsmen's worst nightmare,'' said Larry Bonde, vice chairman of the Conservation Congress, a group of influential sportsmen who advise the DNR on policy. ``CWD has caused such a stir in the hunting community. The relationship between the DNR and landowners got so damaged. Now moving to a whole new part of the state, it could respark some of that discontent.''

Chronic wasting disease produces microscopic holes in animals' brain tissue, causing weight loss, tremors, strange behavior and, eventually, death. It was discovered in Wisconsin near Mount Horeb in 2002, marking the first time it had been found east of the Mississippi River. Fear of the disease dampened hunting efforts dramatically that year, as 70,000 fewer people purchased hunting licenses than in 2001.

The disease remained contained in southern Wisconsin and license sales rebounded slightly during the rest of the decade as chronic wasting disease faded from the headlines. The discovery of the infected Shell Lake doe promises to thrust the issue back into the public eye.

Looking to stave off another wave of public anger and fear, DNR officials immediately issued a statement reassuring hunters the agency didn't plan to make any changes to this fall's hunting seasons. They promised to begin an intensive sampling effort, collecting deer road kill for testing and asking bow and gun hunters within a 10-mile radius of the doe to turn in tissue samples this fall.

They also warned residents in Washburn, Barron, Burnett and Polk counties to expect a ban on baiting and feeding deer this fall.

Thiede said someone contacted the Washburn County Sheriff's Department on opening day of the November 2011 gun hunt to report a deer on private land that looked sick and had lost patches of its hair, Thiede said.

George Meyer, executive director of the Wisconsin Wildlife Federation, said the DNR must try to cull the herd in northwestern Wisconsin.

Oneida Community Integrated Food Systems

Tsyunhéhkwʌ Welcomes our Community to the coming Spring of 2012

By Jeff Metoxen
Tsyunhehkwa Director

With the beginning of our 2012 seasons we hope this finds our community looking forward to our upcoming spring, although we have had such a mild winter to this point.

Annual Seed and Plant Distribution: It will be held again in May, the notices will be posted and sent out in the coming weeks. It continues to provide us support and inspiration to see that for the last few years our annual S&P has distributed all of its contents in the first few days of operation. Last year as has been in the past few, all our products were sold within the first week.

Workshops: Our annual list of activities will be posted very soon. We are always trying to meet your needs and request through our activities, if there is something specific you would like us to consider please contact me directly.

Farm Fresh Eggs: They are available at Retail, Oneida Apple Orchard and can also be picked up at our Ag site, 139 Riverdale Drive. Production has been a little low this winter, yet we predict production will rise again for the coming seasons. We are looking to increase the number of layers we have and working on the necessary changes we and the chickens' needs for such an expansion.

Cannery: Community Day has been established as Fridays in the Cannery. When you need to use our facilities please contact them directly to schedule your appointment. The Cannery has been using the new self-contained steam jacketed kettles since their installation last year, thanks to the funding from the First Nations Development Institute. The kettles provide us the opportunity to provide an increase in the products we are able to process and provide to the Community.

Services: With another growing season approaching, remember to contact us for your tilling needs and sign up for our limited space in the Community Gardens off Highway 54 near Green Bay and our other location of Three Sisters in Green Bay. Contact our Ag Site for eligibility requirements.

For the last few years many of our articles have been providing information on our Community's Food Security and Food Sovereignty. In this article we shared updates and highlights of the work we apply to these areas.

Food Security: When all people at all times have access to sufficient, safe, nutritious food to maintain a healthy and active life.

Food Sovereignty: The right of peoples, communities and countries to define their own agricultural, labor, fishing, food and land policies which are ecologically, socially, economically and culturally appropriate to their unique circumstances.

Opening the Lines of Communication

By Mark W. Powless

On Saturday, February 25, at 10:00am, Councilman Vince DelaRosa visited Southeastern Oneida Tribal Services (SEOTS) to hold a community meeting with Oneida Tribal members. In attendance were 27 Oneida Tribal members, including some members of the SEOTS Board and SEOTS Staff. For the attendees the visit was welcomed as an opportunity to hear about the current projects of the Councilman and overall Oneida Business Committee. It was also a chance for membership to ask questions and share feedback.

Officially, Mr. DelaRosa is the SEOTS Business Committee liaison. As the liaison, the Councilman helps to ensure there is an effective line of communication between the SEOTS community and the Oneida Tribe. Recent actions of the Councilman include requesting a Milwaukee area housing assessment. The purpose, is to "provide a starting point for assessing the likely extent and nature of housing needs" for Oneida membership in the Milwaukee area.

During the community meeting, the Councilman touched on the housing issue, as well as his future office hours at the SEOTS office, increasing the ability of the SEOTS Board to improve the well-being of membership, and community involvement in the process to shape a new SEOTS building for the Oneida Tribe. Mr. DelaRosa also answered many questions and listened to the comments of attendees.

Moving forward, the Councilman will continue to hold community meetings at SEOTS and will also be available for Tribal members who wish to schedule an appointment. The next community meeting will take place on Saturday, April 14 at 10:00am. All Tribal members are encouraged to attend. For those individuals that desire a meeting with Mr. DelaRosa, appointment times are available for Friday, April 13. Please call the SEOTS office (414-329-4101) to schedule an appointment.

Recent incident raises traffic concerns in communities

By Travis Cottrell
Kalihwisaks

On March 24 a vehicle traveling in the Three Sisters neighborhood struck a child on the south end of Chief Hill Drive near the neighborhood park. The child was taken to a nearby hospital by emergency responders and was fortunate to escape the accident with non-life threatening injuries.

Although the child narrowly avoided critical injuries, the incident sheds light on a larger issue in Oneida communities. Reckless driving and speeding continues to be a major issue in Oneida housing sites.

Oneida neighborhoods house a wide variety of families made up of all ages, from newborns to elders. These areas are full of school-aged children who enjoy being outside and taking advantage of the public park areas that are present in all of the sites.

Reckless driving and speeding in these communities puts many lives in danger.

"Cars are always driving fast through the straightaway here and, yeah, the speed limit is 25 miles, but cars go faster than that all the time," says one anonymous resident of the Three Sisters housing site.

Although speeding is a serious issue it remains a part of the problem rather than the whole problem.

"I think this is an area with two problems. Cars going too fast and there are always kids just hanging out in the streets

The Oneida Thunderhawks took on the Menasha Blue Jays in a home lacrosse game on Tuesday, April 10, 2012. The T-Hawks played a sluggish first half on the offensive end, managing to cling to a one goal lead throughout most of the half. In the second half Oneida turned up the intensity and managed to pull off a 8-4 victory over the visiting Blue Jays. Oneida's next game will be played on Monday, April 23 against the Green Bay Metros.

Painkiller sales soar around US, fuel addiction

By Chris Hawley
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) ~ Sales of the nation's two most popular prescription painkillers have exploded in new parts of the country, an Associated Press analysis shows, worrying experts who say the push to relieve patients' suffering is spawning an addiction epidemic.

From New York's Staten Island to Santa Fe, N.M., Drug Enforcement Administration figures show dramatic rises between 2000 and 2010 in the distribution of oxycodone, the key ingredient in OxyContin, Percocet and Percodan. Some places saw sales increase sixteenfold.

Meanwhile, the distribution of hydrocodone, the key ingredient in Vicodin, Norco and Lortab, is rising in Appalachia, the original epicenter of the painkiller epidemic, as well as in the Midwest.

The increases have coincided with a wave of overdose deaths, pharmacy robberies and other problems in New Mexico, Nevada, Utah, Florida and other states. Opioid pain relievers, the category that includes oxycodone and hydrocodone, caused 14,800 overdose deaths in 2008 alone, and the death toll is rising, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention says.

Nationwide, pharmacies received and ultimately dispensed the equivalent of 69 tons of pure oxycodone and 42 tons of pure hydrocodone in 2010, the last year for which statistics are available. That's enough to give 40 5-mg Percocets and 24 5-mg Vicodins to every person in the United States. The DEA data records shipments from distributors to pharmacies, hospitals, practitioners and teaching institutions. The drugs are eventually dispensed and sold to patients, but the DEA does not keep track of how much individual patients receive.

The increase is partly due to the aging U.S. population with pain issues and a greater willingness by doctors to treat pain, said Gregory Bunt, medical director at New York's Daytop Village chain of drug treatment clinics.

Sales are also being driven by addiction, as users become physically dependent on painkillers and begin "doctor shopping" to keep the prescriptions coming, he said.

"Prescription medications can provide enormous health and quality-of-life benefits to patients," Gil Kerlikowske, the U.S. drug czar, told Congress in March. "However, we all now recognize that these drugs can be just as dangerous and deadly as too and you never see an adult outside watching them," the anonymous resident said.

The Three Sisters area is a unique one because it consists of a quarter-mile straightaway with homes on both sides of a narrow street as well as a pair of public parks, one at each end of the community.

The presence of young children in the roadway seems to be an issue that hasn't gone unnoticed.

"I didn't witness it but I am not surprised that a kid got hit by a car down Chief Hill. At least a few times a week I have to slow down for kids playing on the roads and curbs. So you could just see this coming," said the Three Sisters resident.

The reverberations of the Three Sisters accident reached the Oneida Business Committee. During the March 28 Business Committee meeting Chairman Ed Delgado addressed speeding in Oneida communities.

"I would like to see us come down hard on people who speed in the housing sites. Whatever the state does is their business, but we can do anything we want when it comes to addressing maintaining safe speeds in our housing sites including excessive high fines, which I would like to do, and I would like that a lot. Fine someone $500 for speeding in our housing sites," Delgado said.

Hefty fines for traffic violators are one of many suggestions that have been heard in the aftermath of the most recent accident. Other suggestions included lowering the speed limit in housing areas and constructing a series of speed bump to deter speeders.

However the most reliable ways to prevent such incidents from occurring are to drive safely and cautiously at all times as well as keeping children out of the streets and teaching them that streets are never a safe place to be.

CLARIFICATION

There was an error with information we received from the VFW Post 7784 in an article (Election Report) that was published on page 3, in the April 5th issue of the Kalihwisaks. George Greendeer was listed as the Judge Advocate. We received notification after-the-fact that Dale Wheelock is the Judge Advocate. Also, Surgeon Marty Schweiner was also inadvertently omitted from the original submission. The organization regrets any inconvenience this may have caused.

Stanchik, Donald

deceased April 8, 2012

Our father, Donald Stanchik, on Easter Sunday, April 8, 2012, was taken into Heaven by the loving arms of Jesus. He is really and truly home now. Because of Jesus, Dad has finally been reunited with Mom, but this time for eternity with the Lord. Oh how we wish we could have seen that sight. The smiles by those two must be incredible.

We can also only imagine the smile on his best buddy and son in law Kevin Drury's face as Kevin watches Dad get his first hug from Jesus. We can see Kevin trying to show Dad around, if Kevin can get him away from Evelyn even for a moment. Mom has been waiting for Dad since 1997. Now that wait is over and their reunion has just begun. We can see Dad being welcomed by other dear ones as well like his brothers before him.

Dad, you were such a gentle and kind grampa. You gave us so many good memories playing horse-shoes or croquet in the back yard. You were way too good a cribbage player. You were always winning. If you didn't get the points in your hand, no problem, you would just peg out. You taught us how to pick blackberries, walking through the woods finding asparagus and mushrooms. Dad loved the Packers, NASCAR and the Brewers. He made more than we can count, amazing, home cooked, wonderful meals we all shared with him. It was hard for you to give up some of your recipes, but you did.

Both of our parents are now in Heaven. We will keep reminding ourselves about these truths, because we can always trust God's Word and promises. Both Dad and Mom are now so happy. We will see them again just as God promised in I Thessalonians 4:13. Your love forever is with us as ours is with you. All our very precious fond memories. Always, we love you Dad, Grandpa and Brother.

Donald is survived by his children, Sheree Lewis, Mark (Rosemarie) Stanchik, Donald Stanchik Jr., Terrie Drury and Kevin (Debra) Stanchik; grandchildren Sarah, Zecheriah, Brittney, Grayce, Drew, Kayce, Erika, Nicholas, Lovey, Victor, Vikkimarie and Katie Jo, 3 great-grandchildren, brothers and sisters; Ronnie Stanchik; Ernest Stanchik; Angeline Westphal; Irene Marquard; Eleanore Firkus; Francis Weihbrecht; Gladys Weihbrecht; Theresa Holeffler; Linda Gladowski; Barbara Kolbeck; and Jean Topel as well as many other relatives and friends

In addition to his parents and wife Evelyn (Steinfeldt) Stanchik, Donald was preceded in death by his siblings, son-in-law and buddy, Kevin Drury, Raymond Stanchik, Chester Stanchik, Sylvester Stanchik, Stanley Stanchik and Carolyn Stanchik.

Visitation took place on Wednesday April 11, 2012, 4-8 pm at Lyndahl Funeral Home and Cremation Services.

Visitation will continue at the funeral home on Thursday from 1-3 pm. Funeral Service at the funeral home on Thursday at 3:00 pm.

There is no charge for obituary notices to be published in the Kalihwisaks for enrolled Oneida citizens or spouses.

Secretary Salazar and Attorney General Holder announce $1 billion settlement

WASHINGTON – Secretary of the Interior Ken Salazar and Attorney General Eric Holder today announced the settlement of lawsuits filed by 41 federally-recognized tribes against the United States, in which the tribes alleged that the Department of the Interior and the Department of the Treasury had mismanaged monetary assets and natural resources held in trust by the United States for the benefit of the tribes. The announcement followed a 22-month-long negotiation between the tribes and the United States that has culminated in settlements between the government and tribes totaling more than $1 billion.

"These settlements fairly and honorably resolve historical grievances over the accounting and management of tribal trust funds, trust lands, and other non-monetary trust resources that, for far too long, have been a source of conflict between Indian tribes and the United States," said Attorney General Holder. "Our commitment to tribes is the cornerstone of the Department of Justice's policies and initiatives in Indian Country, and these settlements will enable the tribal community to pursue the goals and objectives they deem to be appropriate while marking another step in our shared future built upon mutual respect and strong bonds of trust between tribal governments and the United States.

The Department of the Interior manages almost 56 million acres of trust lands for federally-recognized tribes and more than 100,000 leases on those lands for various uses, including housing.

"These important settlements reflect President Obama's continuing commitment to ensuring empowerment and reconciliation for American Indians," said Secretary Salazar. "It strengthens the government-to-government relationship with Tribal nations, helps restore a positive working relationship with Indian Country leaders and empowers American Indian communities. I want to commend Attorney General Holder, our Interior Solicitor Hilary Tompkins and other key officials who were involved in the long negotiations leading to these historic agreements. I look forward to working with Tribal leaders to further strengthen our government-to-government relationship based on mutual respect and a shared concern for the proper management of tribal trust assets and funds."

WI sportsmen to sound off on crane hunt

By Todd Richmond
Associated Press

MADISON, WI ~ The battle over a sandhill crane hunt in Wisconsin isn't over. In fact, it might just be starting.

The Wisconsin Conservation Congress plans to ask the public whether a hunt is a good idea at its spring hearings Monday, less than a month after a Republican bill that would have created a hunt died in the Legislature after bird lovers railed that hunters already kill enough animals.

The question promises to re-ignite a heated debate. Wisconsin prides itself on its hunting heritage. Hunting advocates argue the sandhill population is out of control and the birds devour farmers' corn seeds. But the state also is home to the International Crane Foundation, one of the world's leading crane protection organizations, not to mention throngs of people who admire sandhills.

"I'm really not surprised it's being brought up again, simply because I understand the nature of hunting in Wisconsin," said Lyn Young Lorenz of Poynette, who has volunteered for three decades to count sandhills for the foundation. "I just don't think it's necessary. If people lived near a wetland or paid attention to sandhill cranes the way I have for 30 years, they wouldn't be asking for this."

Sandhill cranes are tall, elegant creatures with huge wing spans and a call that sounds like something out of "Jurassic Park." The bird was hunted to near extinction around the turn of the 20th century, but the species has since rebounded and is now found throughout North America and eastern Siberia.

Wisconsin, Michigan and Ontario, Canada, have become important nesting grounds for what biologists call the eastern flock, a group of about 70,000 birds that migrate up and down the eastern half of the United States. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service estimated Wisconsin's sandhill population stood at about 25,000 in late October. Thousands of people volunteer every year to count them.

As the population grew, however, more Wisconsin farmers complained about sandhills eating corn seeds and fledgling stalks. Federal wildlife officials issued 55 permits to southern Wisconsin landowners to kill problem cranes last year, up from 16 in 2008.

Thirteen states have implemented sandhill hunts and the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources has said the population here is healthy enough to withstand a limited hunting season. State Rep. Joel Kleefisch, R-Oconomowoc, introduced a bill earlier this year authorizing a hunt but bird lovers ripped the proposal and Republican leaders never advanced the measure to a vote.

But while Kleefisch was drafting his bill the Conservation Congress, a group of influential sportsmen who advise the DNR on policy, was preparing a question to place on its spring hearing ballot asking people whether they support a sandhill hunt. The question will be put to the public at meetings in all 72 Wisconsin counties on Monday evening.

The referendum isn't binding on the DNR, but approval would give legislators more credibility if they decide to bring back a sandhill hunt bill next session. Even if a bill were to pass, it would likely take several years to develop rules establishing a hunt, said Kent Van Horn, a DNR waterfowl expert.

Conservation Congress officials say the question deserves a public vetting.

"The public has been asking for this hunt for a number of years," said John Edelblute, a duck hunter from Hartford who serves as vice chairman of the congress' migratory study committee and wrote the question. "I think there's going to be a lot of resistance. We'll just listen to who makes the biggest uproar. That's what we're there for. Let the public debate it."

The battle lines already are re-forming.

Bird advocates say the cranes' resurgence represents a conservation success story. Hunters can't kill enough cranes to make much of a dent in crop damage and farmers instead should treat their seeds with a crane repellent the Crane Foundation developed, they contend.

They also say Wisconsin hunters already can kill myriad species, including deer, coyotes, turkeys, bears and mourning doves, Wisconsin's official peace symbol. Gov. Scott Walker just signed a bill that authorizes a wolf hunt. If hunters want to kill sandhills, they can go to other states where the cranes are more abundant and hunting them is legal, they say.

"People in Wisconsin have a different relationship with cranes," said Karen Etter Hale, vice president of the Wisconsin Audubon Council. "We've watched the birds come back very slowly."

The Crane Foundation has remained neutral so its data and statistics are seen as objective, said Jeb Barzen, the foundation's ecology director. Still, he reiterated the foundation's stance that hunting won't solve crop damage problems and Wisconsin's crane population is leveling.

Wisconsin Farm Bureau Federation lobbyist Paul Zimmerman said farmers believe the repellent will just push the cranes into untreated fields - an assertion Barzen disputed, saying the cranes will stay in the treated fields and look for other food. Regardless, Zimmerman said hunting offers a means of controlling population growth and gives hunters "another recreational opportunity."

"I'm optimistic there'll be a good response on Monday on establishing a crane season," Zimmerman said.

Dave Swanson, president of the Green Bay Duck Hunters Association, said his group supports a sandhill hunt, noting that the DNR believes a hunt wouldn't hurt the overall sandhill population and hunters are paying for crop damage reimbursements through their fees. Plus, he said, sandhills are "great eating."

"We've done such a great job in the state restoring our natural resources. You've never seen more ducks, more mourning doves, more sandhill cranes," he said. "I know the Audubon Society just thinks we want something more to hunt. Well, everything in God's garden is available to us."

WCASA and Community Activists "Wrap" the Capitol to Honor Survivors of Sexual Violence

Madison, WI – As part of the observance of Sexual Assault Awareness Month (SAAM), members of the community will gather to physically encircle the Capitol Building on Saturday, April 28th at 2:00 p.m.

The event, called "Wrap Around the Capitol" is aimed at honoring and supporting survivors of sexual assault. It is a project of a new group called the Survivors & Allies Task Force, organized through the Department of Justice Office of Justice Assistance (OJA) and the Wisconsin Coalition Against Sexual Assault (WCASA).

"We began meeting last year," explained Lisa Pentermann, a WCASA Board Member and member of the Survivors & Allies group. "At our second meeting, we decided we wanted to go beyond talking and do something visible, tangible, and public. Sexual Assault Awareness Month provided the natural time and place."

Sexual violence is pervasive in Wisconsin as well as across the nation; the numbers are quite sobering. Over this past year an estimated 15,000 Wisconsin women, men, and children became victims of sexual violence. One national survey found that one in five women, and one in seventy-one men, are sexually violated during the course of their lives.

The event brings survivors of sexual violence and those that want to end violence together in a visible sign of solidarity. In addition to encircling the Capitol, there will be a display of the "Traveling Pants" – a collection of blue jean pants colorfully decorated by survivors of sexual assault with messages about their right to be safe and to heal from the trauma of rape. There will also be speakers, and a musical performance by Jen Hopper of the Angel Band Project, a musical group formed to honor the singer's partner, Teresa Butz, who was murdered during a vicious attack in their home; both women were stabbed and sexually assaulted during the attack.

"We're so thrilled to have Angel Band Project with us," said Ms. Pentermann. "It's an extraordinary example of turning pain and tragedy into something proactive, and using your talent raise awareness, and of the resilience of survivors."

WCASA invites advocates, allies, supporters, and members from the community at large to join them on April 28th to stand against violence in our community.

BACKGROUND ON BUSINESS

Using magnets to treat pain

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

Gail Roznoski was retired and looking for something to occupy her time. Little did she know knee pain relief would lead to her current business venture, Magnetic Therapy Products.

Roznoski describes her first encounter with magnetic jewelry and how an elderly woman showed her the health benefits of using it.

"My knees were killing me. I was in Arizona at a big gem show and my knees were hurting. I come across this little old lady, she was sitting in this tent making these bracelets. She told me this story and I didn't believe that they would work. I bought a bracelet from her and the next day my knees felt great," said Roznoski.

"She taught me how to make them. She said make two for me and one for myself that I could sell. She taught me how to make a living," added Roznoski.

She began selling her homemade jewelry about 10 years ago at local farmer's markets. She then opened her store, located at 1136 W. Mason Street in Green Bay, November 1 of last year.

Her store offers classes, beads, jewelry, and crystals along with pet beds with magnets that sooth pain for animals hampered by old age.

After a successful decorating business in Arizona and a cancer scare she decided to move back to Green Bay with the plan of opening her store.

"I made a good living out there but decided to move back home," Roznoski said. "I can make 25 bracelets a day and I've made 40,000 bracelets and that doesn't include necklaces. I'm tempted to put up a sign like McDonald's."

According to Roznoski, magnetic therapy is used to alleviate chronic pain from conditions like arthritis and it has been around for 2,000 years.

"It works through your blood stream. We use hematite," she said. "You can cut it and polish it. It's really a hard rock. It's the only stone you can magnetize. Once you do that you put it on your wrist, ankle or neck, you have major arteries around there, and the blood picks up the ionization that comes off the magnets. It helps heal faster because it increases the blood flow."

Now Roznoski is looking to put a little more focus on her pet beds that she has sold throughout the country.

"My goal is to make 2,000 pet beds this year. That doesn't sound like a lot but we make them by hand," she said.

Gail Roznoski opened Magnetic Therapy Products last November. The store is located at 1136 W. Mason Street in Green Bay.

Some may doubt the effectiveness of her products but as long as customers keep coming back Roznoski is a believer.

"People like them because they do work. I have had so many people come back and say they work," she said.

She can also just remember her once aching knees.

For more information about Magnetic Therapy Products call (920) 492-9800 or visit the store.

Operation Greatest Generation – May 4, 2012

Secretary Scocos Column

In 2012, the nation celebrates the 150th anniversary of the Civil War and welcomes home servicemembers who served in Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom, as the U.S. combat operations in these conflicts are drawing to a close. In 2012, Governor Scott Walker, in recognition of all our veterans, proclaimed this the Year of the Veteran.

Over the course of history, we have sought to honor the deeds of our nation's veterans, providing them with the tools they need to reintegrate into civilian society with housing, education, health care, other treatment and meaningful jobs.

Following the Civil War, in 1865, President Lincoln called upon Congress "to care for him who shall have borne the battle and for his widow, and his orphan." Civil War veterans were provided disability pensions, given priority for land purchase, and buried in the first National Cemeteries.

When World War II drew to a close, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the GI Bill of Rights, providing funding for education, training, and providing low-interest, no down payment home loans to veterans. This landmark legislation is considered to not only have changed the lives of veterans, but also our country's higher education system, and in turn, the nation's economy.

In 2012, Wisconsin will celebrate the past, emulate the example set by our forefathers, and honor our 9/11 veterans by reaffirming the State of Wisconsin's commitment to providing the highest level of support to our nation's heroes. Year of the Veteran will include a series of events and initiatives to honor our nation's heroes, but more importantly, it is a refocused effort to connect veterans to the programs, benefits and services available to them.

A major cornerstone of this year long recognition of veterans is a celebration honoring World War II veterans. On Friday, May 4, 2012, the WDVA will host Operation Greatest Generation. This event will take place from 10:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the National Railroad Museum in Green Bay and is open to all World War II veterans and their guests. I am asking you to join with us to make this a memorable event for everyone.

The National Railroad Museum in Green Bay is home to the locomotive "General Eisenhower" and a portion of his World War II command train car. Day-long activities will include a vintage World War II vehicle exhibit, living history demonstrations, as well as other family-friendly exhibits and demonstrations.

The recognition ceremony honoring the World War II veterans will include keynote speaker Hugh Ambrose, author of "The Pacific," a book that he wrote with his father Stephen Ambrose, the renowned historian author of "Band of Brothers." Additional speakers are expected to include Governor Scott Walker and Lieutenant Colonel James Megellas, the most-decorated officer in the history of the 82nd Airborne Division and author of "All the Way to Berlin."

We would like to have participation from as many World War II veterans and their families as possible. Please mark your calendar and RSVP soon for Operation Greatest Generation at www.WisVets.com.

Treasurer's Report

By Cristina Danforth
Oneida Tribal Treasurer

While spring may bring flowers for most, spring brings budgets for my office. The OBC has begun the first round of budget reviews where we ask various questions about each division's goals for the coming year and accomplishments for the current and prior year. This is an important part of the process for the Business Committee as a whole. Not only does it help us understand the budget needs of each area, it provides us with a broader view of each area. This is critical as we move forward with restructuring the Tribe. Each of the Business Committee members, including myself has received many concerns relative to economics, new revenue generation, internal spending, etc. During the budget process, not only are we able to ask specific questions of the Division Directors but we are also able to assess which areas should be looked at closer as we move forward. That is not to say we are looking to discontinue any programs or services, it is to determine which areas can be combined and which areas need additional support to become more successful in servicing the needs of the membership.

As Treasurer, it is my job to ensure our money is being spent in the best way possible and procedural checks and balances are followed. One of my duties is to Chair the Finance Committee. We require each Division Director with expenses over 50K to have three bids. This is necessary in order to ensure we are getting the best quality product at the best price. Lately this has been a struggle. Some areas choose to submit contracts without three bids and without supporting documentation for sole source vendors, and in some instances having three bids is a federal funding requirement. This is troublesome to the Finance Committee because the result is the same, the contract is remanded back to include three bids and must be resubmitted for Finance Committee approval. While this does prolong the process, it is unnecessary. If each Division Director would follow the rules, we would never see a contract that is sole sourced or without the required amount of bids. If each contract were submitted properly, the process would move much faster and the Division Directors would not feel frustrated when questioned about their contracts. It is also imperative to plan accordingly for project expenses.

Recently I was re-elected to the position of second Vice President of the Native American Finance Officers Association (NAFOA). The mission of NAFOA is to help Tribes build financial strength and stability by providing training and educational forums as well as networking, idea sharing and planning. NAFOA works only with Tribes and is very knowledgeable of the issues that face Indian Country. The training sessions allow for individuals to get economic and financial updates, network and meet others who are facing the same challenges. Knowing we are not alone in some of the challenges we face is beneficial as someone else may have an idea we have not considered. NAFOA also provides mentorship and scholarships for Tribal students going into financial related careers.

I take both my responsibilities with NAFOA and Native American Bank very seriously. I believe they have given me the tools I need to safeguard the Tribe's money as if it were my own. I am confident in asking hard questions and I have no problem sending Division Directors back to the start when they submit an incomplete request. Many times we find ourselves stuck in the status-quo of how things have always been. I do my best to step beyond that by not only looking at what is happening now but how a decision will affect future decisions. I continue to do this with the support of the GTC. With budget season upon us there will be many hard decisions to make and I am confident with the assistance of the Finance Department and the Business Committee, we will make the right decisions as we look to close the deficit.

While our main goal is not to cut any services or programs, there are plenty of other areas to consider as far as consolidating, outsourcing, and modifying. With all change, resistance will be a factor but I do not believe anyone can deny that changes are necessary at this point. The initial challenge will be the hardest but once everyone realizes the benefits of the adjustments, I believe we will have made the right decisions for now and for the future.

I hope everyone has enjoyed the wonderful weather and I hope spring brings a new found sense of strength.

Tina Danforth

Path of the Oneida Tribe

Dear Oneida Tribal Business Committee Members,

I am writing in support of the over 1100 people who have signed a petition to oppose the Oneida Seven Generations Corporation (OSGC) gasification incinerator. Most of these signers have indicated they will boycott Oneida Tribal businesses if this plant is built. Many of the signers live in the Mather Heights district, which is considered to be part of the fallout zone for many of the pollutants that the plant will produce. They, along with many others, were shocked to learn that contrary to what OSGC told them, there will be smokestacks and there will be emissions. Even though they were told the facility would not burn tires, tires are included in the plan as a fuel source. The signers have expressed to us their anger about being given incomplete, inaccurate, and even false information, both in OSGC presentations and in media releases.

The basic facts are now known. There will be over 18 toxic air emissions from the facility, for some of which the hazards have not been fully researched. Young families have expressed their fears for raising their children in a neighborhood so close to a facility, which was falsely promoted. They worry that growing up in the Mather Heights neighborhood will give their children the cumulative effect from years of exposure to its emissions. They worry that this facility will further stress their children who suffer from asthma and will cause others to suffer from this illness. They worry that there are additional facts that OSGC has kept from them.

In the past, The Oneida Tribe and CWAC were partners in protecting the air, the water, and the land. Together we fought for the clean up of the Fox River. Together we urged the DNR to enforce regulations against polluters. CWAC has remained true to the cause of protecting Mother Earth. We fought against the Grantech sludge incinerator. We fought against the Crandon Mine. We sought enforcement of wastewater discharge regulations against Utica Energy. Most recently, we teamed up with the Bad River Band of the Lake Superior Tribe of Chippewa Indians to educate the public about the negative impacts the proposed mining bill could have on the Bad River watershed.

We wonder what path your tribe has chosen to travel. We wonder how promoting a project that is not only unproven, but which has proven not to work successfully elsewhere, can be good for this generation, or for the next seven. We wonder what has become of our partner.

Sometimes it is necessary to look a gift horse in the mouth. When one finds the beast is diseased, it is better to not accept the gift. What kind of gift has the incinerator industry brought to you? Are they offering a well-groomed beast full of hidden disease? Has the promise of government money blinded you from looking into the mouth of this gift horse and seeing its disease? Look carefully. See now, and see into the future.

What path will you choose for the Oneida Tribe?

Second Annual Semi-Truck Sample Sale Rolls into St. Matthews School

School to Sell Truckload of Clothing in Effort to Support Educational Programming

Green Bay, WI – In today's economic environment, public and private schools continue to search for new and creative funding sources to meet school funding needs. That reality is leading one area school to roll in a semi-truck of hats, t-shirts, jerseys and more this weekend---all in the name of education.

Thousands of sweatshirts, hoodies, embroidered and screen printed t-shirts, hats, tote bags and more will be available at a Sample Sale on Saturday, April 14, 2012, 8 am-3 pm and Sunday, April 15, 8 am – 1 pm at St. Matthew School, 130 St. Matthew Street, Green Bay. The sale includes unique clothing items featuring college and professional sports teams and vacation destinations from around the country. Youth and adult sizes are available, with prices ranging from $2 to $15.

"Thousand of t-shirts, scores of sweats and hoodies by the hundreds will all be on sale," said Mike Van Handel, chairperson of the St. Matthew School Site Advisory Council, which is sponsoring the sale. "For bargain hunters and people who like to rummage, it's like Christmas in April."

Proceeds from the sale will benefit educational and student enrichment programs at St. Matthew School as well as throughout the GRACE system. St. Matthew School, which offers programming for early childhood through 8th grade students, is a member of the Green Bay Area Catholic Education (GRACE) School System.

"It's important to continue funding ongoing student enrichment as well as some of the special things we do here at St. Matthew's. We have special days for students, teachers, moms, dads and grandparents. We have an entire week devoted to the celebration of Catholic Schools Week, and a special mini-course day for our students. We know that all schools are focused on budget line items more than ever. Our goal is to expand our budget with a little creativity while preserving the quality of education, and we invite the community to join us in that effort by attending the sale."

St. Matthew's is located at 130 S. Matthew St. in Green Bay. For more information, contact the School Office at 920.432.5223.

Public Hearing Notice

11:30 a.m. • Norbert Hill Center, 2nd Floor - (BCCR)

April 17, 2012

Purpose:

Legislative Procedures Act

The intent of the Legislative Procedures Act (the Law) is to provide an improved lawmaking process to replace the lawmaking provisions currently found in the Administrative Procedures Act (APA). The Law also re-charters the Legislative Operating Committee's (LOC) role in the lawmaking process. The Law provides a streamlined lawmaking process, which includes:

- Fiscal Estimates. A fiscal estimate would be required for each legislative proposal, which would estimate the total fiscal year costs associated with the legislation. This would include items such as: startup costs, personnel, office, documentation costs, legislative mandates, as well as an estimate of the amount of time necessary for an individual or agency to comply with the law after implementation.
- Legislative Analysis. An analysis describing the important features of the legislation, impact to the Tribal operations, as well as the general public would also be required for each legislative proposal.
- Holding a public comment period and requiring an actual public meeting only be held when determined necessary by the LOC or OBC. Currently, public hearings are required to be held before any legislation is adopted on a permanent basis. Public meetings would now only be required to held if the LOC or OBC determines a public meeting is in the best interests of the Tribal membership. A public comment period will be noticed before any legislation is considered for adoption on a permanent basis and written comments received during this time will be considered before moving forward with the legislation.
- Creation of an Oneida Register. The LOC would be required to post agency regulations, proposed legislation and notices, and the Oneida Code of Laws in the Oneida Register.
- Notice requirements would be the responsibility of the LOC (and no longer the Tribal Secretary). TheLOCwould be required to give specific notice of all public hearings to the Tribe's managers and directors, who would be responsible for informing Tribal employees of the public hearings. The managers and directors would direct that written or oral testimony be provided by Tribal employees who have special knowledge or expertise on the subject of the public hearing. Under the current APA, notice of public hearings is the responsibility of the Tribal Secretary.
- Adoption of emergency legislation. Emergency legislation would still be able to be adopted for six months, with the option of renewing the adoption for an additional six months. A legislative analysis of the emergency legislation would now be required before it is adopted.
- Repeal of the Format for Laws. The Format for Laws would be repealed and the relevant portions of that law would be incorporated into the Legislative Procedures Act.

Public Hearing Process

I. Testimony:

A. Oral: There will be a 5 minute limit for all oral presentations. Each participant is encouraged to provide a written transcript of his/her oral testimony, to be submitted while present at the public hearing or within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the below named individuals.

B. Written: For those who cannot attend the scheduled public hearing or do not plan to speak at the hearing, the Oneida Tribe encourages those to submit written testimony. A maximum of ten (10) pages, doubled spaced, can be submitted within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the Tribal Secretary (Patricia Hoeft) or to the Legislative Reference Office Paralegal, Tonya Boucher, at the Norbert Hill Center, 2nd floor or mail to PO Box 365, Oneida WI 54155.

If you would like to obtain a copy of the above proposed law or have any questions as to the public hearing process you may contact Tonya Boucher at the Legislative Reference Office, via GroupWise tboucher@oneidanation.org Or call 1-800-236-2214 or 920-869-4240. The Legislative Reference Office fax number is 1-920-869-4399. Copies of this law are also available on the Internet: http://oneida-nsn.gov/PublicHearings.aspx

Public Hearing Notice

11:30 a.m. • Norbert Hill Center, 2nd Floor - (BCCR)

May 1, 2012

Purpose:

Canons of Judicial Conduct Response Law

These Canons are intended to govern the conduct of Judges and Judicial Candidates under the Judiciary Act. These Canons also apply to law clerks, Judiciary staff attorneys, paralegals, court administrators, and others who are in close and constant working relationship with a Judge. The Canons establish overarching principles of judicial ethics; create a base from which all Judges are expected to strive; provide guidance and assist Judges in maintaining the highest standards of judicial and personal conduct; and establish a basis for the regulation of conduct through disciplinary measures. Specifically, the Canons require:

- A Judge to uphold and promote the independence, integrity, competence and impartiality of the Judiciary and avoid impropriety and the appearance of impropriety.
- A Judge's judicial duties to take precedence over all of the Judge's personal and extrajudicial activities, which shall be conducted in such a manner as to minimize the risk of conflicts with the obligations of judicial office.
- A Judge to avoid financial and business dealings that tend to reflect adversely on his or her impartiality or interfere with the performance of his or her judicial responsibilities.
- Judges and Judicial Candidates to affirm and display the respectful integrity and dignity of a person qualified to hold a position on the Judiciary and recommends they refrain from any political activity which might interfere with the performance of his or her judicial duties.

Public Hearing Process

I. Testimony:

A. Oral: There will be a 5 minute limit for all oral presentations. Each participant is encouraged to provide a written transcript of his/her oral testimony, to be submitted while present at the public hearing or within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the below named individuals.

B. Written: For those who cannot attend the scheduled public hearing or do not plan to speak at the hearing, the Oneida Tribe encourages those to submit written testimony. A maximum of ten (10) pages, doubled spaced, can be submitted within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the Tribal Secretary (Patricia Hoeft) or to the Legislative Reference Office Paralegal, Tonya Boucher, at the Norbert Hill Center, 2nd floor or mail to PO Box 365, Oneida WI 54155.

Public Hearing Notice

11:30 a.m. • Norbert Hill Center, 2nd Floor - (BCCR)

April 26, 2012

Purpose:

Tribal Environmental Response Law

The intent of the Tribal Environmental Response Law is to direct the Environmental Health and Safety Division (Division) to create a Tribal Environmental Response Program (TERP) which will address situations where the discharge or potential discharge of a hazardous substance has occurred and may have contaminated the environment. In order to regulate the identification, investigation and remediation of discharges of hazardous substances, this law:

- Requires individuals who are responsible for or aware of a discharge of a hazardous substance to notify the Division and, in most cases, to be responsible for the remedial action necessary to restore the environment to the condition it was in before the discharge occurred.
- Makes the Division responsible to:

o Adopt standards for environmental quality that are protective of public health and the environment. Business Committee approval of these standards is required, except when the standards are consistent with federal standards.

o Conduct investigations of sites and facilities that are, or are suspected of being, contaminated from the discharge of a hazardous substance.

o Identify parties that are responsible for the clean-up of contaminated sites and facilities.

o Require appropriate remedial actions be taken when contaminated sites and facilities are identified.

Public Hearing Process

I. Testimony:

A. Oral: There will be a 5 minute limit for all oral presentations. Each participant is encouraged to provide a written transcript of his/her oral testimony, to be submitted while present at the public hearing or within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the below named individuals.

B. Written: For those who cannot attend the scheduled public hearing or do not plan to speak at the hearing, the Oneida Tribe encourages those to submit written testimony. A maximum of ten (10) pages, doubled spaced, can be submitted within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the Tribal Secretary (Patricia Hoeft) or to the Legislative Reference Office Paralegal, Tonya Boucher, at the Norbert Hill Center, 2nd floor or mail to PO Box 365, Oneida WI 54155.

From 1A/Prescription drugs

illicit substances when misused or abused."

Opioids like hydrocodone and oxycodone can release intense feelings of well-being. Some abusers swallow the pills; others crush them, then smoke, snort or inject the powder.

Unlike most street drugs, the problem has its roots in two disparate parts of the country - Appalachia and affluent suburbs, said Pete Jackson, president of Advocates for the Reform of Prescription Opioids.

"Now it's spreading from those two poles," Jackson said.

The AP analysis used drug data collected quarterly by the DEA's Automation of Reports and Consolidated Orders System. The DEA tracks shipments sent from distributors to pharmacies, hospitals, practitioners and teaching institutions and then compiles the data using three-digit ZIP codes. Every ZIP code starting with 100-, for example, is lumped together into one figure.

The AP combined this data with census figures to determine effective sales per capita.

A few ZIP codes that include military bases or Veterans Affairs hospitals have seen large increases in painkiller use because of soldier patients injured in the Middle East, law enforcement officials say. In addition, small areas around St. Louis, Indianapolis, Las Vegas and Newark, N.J., have seen their totals affected because mail-order pharmacies have shipping centers there, said Carmen Catizone, executive director of the National Association of Boards of Pharmacy.

Many of the sales trends stretch across bigger areas.

In 2000, oxycodone sales were centered in coal-mining areas of West Virginia and eastern Kentucky - places with high concentrations of people with back problems and other chronic pain.

But by 2010, the strongest oxycodone sales had overtaken most of Tennessee and Kentucky, stretching as far north as Columbus, Ohio and as far south as Macon, Ga.

Per-capita oxycodone sales increased five- or sixfold in most of Tennessee during the decade.

"We've got a problem. We've got to get a handle on it," said Tommy Farmer, a counterdrug official with the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation.

Many buyers began crossing into Tennessee to fill prescriptions after border states began strengthening computer systems meant to monitor drug sales, Farmer said.

In 2006, only 20 states had prescription drug monitoring programs aimed at tracking patients. Now 40 do, but many aren't linked together, so abusers can simply go to another state when they're flagged in one state's system. There is no federal monitoring of prescription drugs at the patient level.

In Florida, the AP analysis underscores the difficulty of the state's decade-long battle against "pill mills," unscrupulous doctors who churn out dozens of prescriptions a day.

In 2000, Florida's oxycodone sales were centered around West Palm Beach. By 2010, oxycodone was flowing to nearly every part of the state.

While still not as high as in Appalachia or Florida, oxycodone sales also increased dramatically in New York City and its suburbs. The borough of Staten Island saw sales leap 1,200 percent.

New York's Long Island has also seen huge increases. In Islip, N.Y., teenager Makenzie Emerson says she started stealing oxycodone that her mother was prescribed in 2009 after a fall on ice. Soon Emerson was popping six pills at a time.

"When I would go over to friends' houses I would raid their medicine cabinets because I knew their parents were most likely taking something," said Emerson, now 19.

One day she overdosed at the mall. Her mother, Phyllis Ferraro, tried to keep her daughter breathing until the ambulance arrived.

"The pills are everywhere," Ferraro said. "There aren't enough treatment centers and yet there's a pharmacy on every corner."

The American Southwest has emerged as another hot spot.

Parts of New Mexico have seen tenfold increases in oxycodone sales per capita and fivefold increases in hydrocodone. The state had the highest rate of opioid painkiller overdoses in 2008, with 27 per 100,000 population.

Many parts of eastern California received only modest amounts of oxycodone in 2010, but the increase from 2000 was dramatic - more than 500 percent around Modesto and Stockton.

Many California addicts are switching from methamphetamine to prescription pills, said John Harsany, medical director of Riverside County's substance abuse program.

Hydrocodone use has increased in some areas with large Indian reservations, including South Dakota, northeastern Arizona and northern Minnesota and Wisconsin. Many of these communities have battled substance abuse problems in the past.

Experts worry painkiller sales are spreading quickly in areas where there are few clinics to treat people who get hooked, Bunt said.

In Utica, N.Y., Patricia Reynolds has struggled to find treatment after becoming dependent on hydrocodone pills originally prescribed for a broken tailbone.

The nearest clinics offering Suboxone, an anti-addiction drug, are an hour's drive away in Cooperstown or Syracuse. And those programs are full and are not accepting new patients, she said.

"You can't have one clinic like that in the whole area," Reynolds said. "It's a really sad epidemic. I want people to start talking about it instead of pretending it's not a problem and hiding."

LOC Update

Current Sponsors for Pending Legislation

In the last Legislative Operating Committee (LOC) Update, the entire process for enacting, repealing, or amending Tribal laws and policies was explained. As that article stated, after the LOC decides to take up a request to create, amend or repeal a Tribal law or policy, that item is assigned to a sponsor. Each legislative item is sponsored by one (or more) of the five LOC members, and the LOC member that sponsors an item is responsible for guiding that proposal through the legislative process, from start to finish.

Below is the most current information about which LOC member is sponsoring each legislative proposal that is currently being processed by the LOC, with the exception of bylaws.

The membership is encouraged to contact the sponsor of an item to learn more about the proposal, to ask any questions, or to provide any feedback.

Sponsor: Melinda J. Danforth (LOC Chair)

Personnel Policies: Grievance Process. This item was submitted so that the LOC could revise the grievance process to remove the role of the General Manager, since that position has been eliminated. However, in reviewing this item, the LOC is now also considering a greater revamping of the entire Blue Book.

Referendum Questions. Three referendum questions were posed during the July 2011 General Elections, addressing (1) Absentee Balloting, (2) Whether the Chief of Police should be elected or appointed, and (3) GTC meeting stipends for Tribal employees attending GTC meetings as part of their job. These issues are being processed so that complete information and potential options for action can be presented to GTC.

Judiciary Act. This is a new law to strengthen and re-define the authority of the Tribal Judicial System. A revised draft will be presented for consideration at an upcoming GTC meeting.

Tribal Environmental Response Law. This proposal would create a new Tribal law to address releases of hazardous or regulated substances within the Reservation Boundaries.

Peace and Homeland Security Codes. A request has been received to establish a framework of civil infraction, traffic, conservation and Homeland Security codes, including Peacemaking.

Per Capita Law Amendments—Attachments. Amendments are being processed for Tribal change and clarify the process for attaching payments.

Employee Protection Policy. This policy is being reviewed to ensure that adequate protections are being given to Tribal employees who report wrongdoing, and to ensure that there are safeguards in place to maintain their confidentiality.

Early Return to Work Policy Amendments. Revisions would ensure that the policy offers consistent options for supervisors when an employee reaches the 180 -day limit of modified work duty.

Child Custody, Placement and Visitation Law Amendments – Guardianship. Currently, this Law permits a third party (i.e. a non-parent) to petition for custody of a minor child, but does not address third-party guardianships. Amendments are being processed to address this concern.

Children's Code. This proposal for a new Children's Code would set forth a mechanism to allow the Tribe to take jurisdiction of child welfare matters involving tribal children.

Per Capita Law Amendments—Fraudulent Use of High School Diplomas and Tax Liens. Amendments are being processed to address the fraudulent use of diplomas to gain access to a minor's trust account, and would allow per capita payments to be attached to pay federal tax liens.

Personnel Policies & Procedures – Vacation and Personal Cap. Amendments would place a 280 hour cap on the amount of personal and vacation time a Tribal employee can accrue—after that cap is reached, the employee will no longer accrue personal or vacation time until he or she falls below the 280 hour accumulation. Supervisors would be required to notify employees when they reach 200 hours of accrued personal and vacation time, so that they can plan accordingly.

Judicial Canons of Ethics. At the January 2, 2012 Annual GTC meeting, the GTC deferred the Judiciary Act back to the LOC and also directed the LOC to include the Judicial Canon of Ethics to accompany the Judiciary Act. Draft Canons are due back to the GTC at the July 2012 Semi-Annual Meeting. The Canons are intended to provide a comprehensive set of rules and guidance for Judges within the Oneida Tribal Judicial System, to ensure Judges maintain the highest ethical standards and behavior, both in and out of the courtroom.

Child Support and Paternity Law Review and Revisions. A request has been submitted that the Oneida Child Support Law and Paternity Law be reviewed, to see if any improvements can be made, now that these laws have been in effect for a few years. One potential amendment would be to change the name of the Child Support Enforcement Agency to the Oneida Nation Child Support Agency because enforcement is only one component of the agency's efforts.

GTC Meetings Law. This proposal is for a new law to govern the scheduling and conducting of GTC meetings—including a standard agenda format and a code of conduct for those in attendance; outlining the duties of those preparing and assisting with GTC meetings, and establishing how petitions would be processed.

Indian Preference Law. The Indian Preference Law was adopted in 1998 and has not been revised since 2003. Amendments are intended to maximize the ability of Tribal members and Tribal member -owned businesses to secure employment and contracting opportunities, while at the same time preventing abuse of the Indian Preference entitlement.

Emergency amendments are also currently being processed to create an exception to the law where necessary to comply with grant requirements.

Crosswalk Signs. A proposal has been brought forth for Tribal pedestrian traffic signs to be placed in several crosswalks within the Reservation, to track the current work being performed by the Department of Transportation.

GTC Stipend Payment Policy. Emergency amendments would (1) prevent members under 21 years of age from attending GTC meetings until facilities that seat over 2,500 people are identified, and (2) prevent members who leave the ballroom area and related bathroom facilities from receiving the stipend.

Legislative Procedures Act (LPA). The LPA is a new law that would provide an updated and more accurate process for the adoption of Tribal legislation. A draft was previously reviewed by the GTC and amendments have been made based on the GTC motion. A public hearing on the most recent amendments is scheduled for April 17, 2012.

Budget Management and Control Law. This law is being developed to provide a consistent manner to govern the Tribal budget process, establish a procedural framework, and oversee Tribal expenditures.

Election Law Amendments – Referendum Process. Amendments to the Election Law regarding the referendum process are being developed, as well as the procedures which should be followed during the recount process, while maintaining the security of the ballots and ensuring the election is conducted in an open and proper manner.

Child Custody Law Complaint. A complaint was brought to the attention of the OBC regarding the OAC and a child custody case. The complaint has been reviewed and the LRO is conducting research into the feasibility of legislative amendments to address the concerns brought forth.

Whistleblower Law. A new Whistleblower law is intended to replace the Employee Protection Law and provide a more comprehensive avenue for complaints to be processed in a confidential manner.

Thunderhawk softball team looking to make strides

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

The Oneida Nation Thunderhawks softball team is keeping it simple this year; just get better.

"It's just a matter of learning the game," said head coach Ces Dawson. "They're learning what their skills are, what they like and how to improve. We can hit and throw but we don't have much experience."

The 11-player team plays at the junior varsity level and has a five game schedule. This season will also feature first ever home game at the Site I diamond.

Though the team is lacking experience they do have some strengths.

"We have a couple of returners who are strong. Noel (Metoxen) is a catcher with really solid leadership skills. Our pitcher, Rachel Ninham, has some experience and practices a lot during the offseason," said Dawson. "A lot of girls played basketball and they are natural athletes that pick up the game really easily."

Along with inexperience the team also faces other challenges.

"We don't have enough players to practice in-game situations. We have some boys from school come and help us out. The biggest thing is in a tiny school like ours we have to find 11 girls at once to do something with commitment is hard," said Dawson.

Metoxen knows they are inexperienced but has high expectations.

"We haven't won a game yet but we still have fun. I think we will win at least one or two games this year. I just think we got better," Metoxen said.

Overall, Dawson just hopes the team gets better and softball at the high school is here to stay.

"It's a team that's playing for fun and to learn the game. We want to conduct ourselves in a good way, improve our skills, have fun and build for the future," Dawson said. "Softball is really fun and it would be great if we could have that consistently offered at the school."

Fighting Sioux ballot language changed after error

By Dale Wetzel
Associated Press

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) _ You say you want the University of North Dakota to keep the Fighting Sioux nickname? Be sure to vote ``No.''

State officials warned Thursday of possible confusion over language in June's referendum over the contentious moniker.

Attorney General Wayne Stenehjem had previously settled on ballot language for the Fighting Sioux referendum that specified a ``Yes'' vote required UND to keep the name and a ``No'' vote meant the name, which the NCAA considers offensive, could be retired.

However, Stenehjem said Thursday the original referendum language was backward, because North Dakotans will be voting on a double negative _ whether to repeal the North Dakota Legislature's decision to repeal a law that requires UND to keep the nickname.

Therefore, a ``Yes'' vote supports the Legislature's decision to repeal the pro-nickname law, which would allow the university to retire the nickname, the attorney general said.

A ``No'' vote opposes the Legislature's repeal of the Fighting Sioux law. Should ``No'' voters prevail, UND would be required to keep using the nickname and a logo showing an American Indian warrior's profile.

``We're dealing with a rejection of a repeal of a previous law, and so it gets a little convoluted,'' Stenehjem said.

The latest version of the approved ballot should make it clear what a vote means, Stenehjem said.

The question will be listed as Measure 4 on the June 12 ballot. It will have ``Yes'' and ``No'' ovals that voters will fill in.

By the ``Yes'' oval will be this statement: ``Yes means you approve Senate Bill 2370, the effect of which would allow the University of North Dakota to discontinue the Fighting Sioux nickname and logo.''

Next to the ``No'' oval will read: ``No means you reject Senate Bill 2370, and would require the University of North Dakota to use the Fighting Sioux nickname and logo.''

The North Dakota Constitution requires that a referendum allow voters to repeal a law approved by the Legislature, Stenehjem said.

Candidates file in six Wis. recall elections

MADISON, Wis. (AP) – Candidates planning to run against Gov. Scott Walker and five other Republicans are filing the required signatures to get on the ballot in recall elections.

Democratic state Sen. Kathleen Vinehout and former Dane County Executive Kathleen Falk filed their signatures Tuesday with the state Government Accountability Board. They are among four Democrats seeking the party's nomination to take on Walker.

Milwaukee Mayor Tom Barrett's wife and former Lt. Gov. Barbara Lawton were to turn in Barrett's signatures late Tuesday morning. Secretary of State Doug La Follette was expected to file his papers later.

Numerous other Democratic candidates were planning to file before the 5 p.m. deadline to challenge Republican Lt. Gov. Rebecca Kleefisch and four Republican state senators.

The primary is May 8 and the general election is June 5.

Wis. getting three new cheese making plants

MILWAUKEE (AP) – Three cheesemakers are adding new plants in rural Wisconsin.

The Milwaukee Journal Sentinel reports (http://bit.ly/Ij3kvr ) Emmi Roth USA will put a $44 million plant in Platteville to produce specialty cheese starting next year. It's expected to create up to 60 jobs.

Green Bay-based BelGioioso Cheese Inc. is building another plant in Pulaski, in addition to their five in the area now that each specialize in a particular cheese.

Holland's Family Cheese LLC will build a new plant in Thorp, in Clark County. It's expected to be three times larger than their current plant there and add about 10 jobs.

John Umhoefer, of the Wisconsin Cheese Makers Association, says Wisconsin leads the nation in cheese production. There are 135 cheese plants now, up from 120 a decade ago.

Rivals unveil policies, plans in Wis. Senate race

MADISON, Wis. (AP) – Former Gov. Tommy Thompson proposed sweeping revisions to the federal tax code and ex-U.S. Rep. Mark Neumann promised to impose congressional term limits as the two worked Monday to separate themselves from a crowded field of Republican U.S. Senate hopefuls.

Thompson released a four-page outline that began by declaring that the current federal tax system is dysfunctional and stems from decades of "political manipulation and special-interest pandering."

His proposal includes limiting federal revenue to 18.5 percent of the gross domestic product, making former President George W. Bush's tax cuts permanent and phasing in a flat tax. Individuals would have the option of filing a single-page tax form with a flat 15 percent rate. After two years, Thompson would move to an across-the-board flat tax.

He also would exempt all households earning less than $100,000 from capital gains taxes, eliminate federal taxes on Social Security income and simplify the federal corporate income tax to two brackets, 25 percent and 10 percent. Thompson also promised to work to eliminate taxes on foreign profits U.S. businesses invest in domestic plants, job training and research.

"Pretty damn good," Thompson said of his plan in a telephone interview. "My whole tax program ... is to make our country more aggressive, more job friendly and grow the economy."

Wis. cranberry output rises 11 percent in 2011

MADISON, Wis. (AP – A new report says Wisconsin's cranberry industry had an especially productive year last year.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture says Wisconsin produced 4.4 million barrels of cranberries in 2011. That's an increase of 11 percent over the 2010 harvest.

Wisconsin's 2011 season got off to a late start because of bad weather, but a mid-season heat wave helped production recover. Some producers said their berries were smaller last year but their overall output was good to average.

Wisconsin remains the nation's leading cranberry producer, harvesting more barrels than the rest of the country does combined. Wisconsin accounted for 57 percent of last year's national output, while Massachusetts produced 30 percent. New Jersey, Oregon and Washington state accounted for the other 13 percent.

One barrel of cranberries equates to 100 pounds.

West Virginia man is recreating American Indian life

By Jim Bissett
The Dominion Post

REEDSVILLE, W.Va. (AP) – Like a lot of people of American Indian descent, Joe has gotten pretty adept at introducing himself with two distinctly different names.

Call it a handshake-squaring of society and soul.

"Joe Heltzinger," the name on his driver's license, Social Security card and college diplomas, is the one he has to answer to. Society says so.

"Joseph RedHawk," however, is the identity written across his heart. That's the name he prefers, as it is dictated by the poetry and pride of his indigenous lineage.

Joe Heltzinger (and, Joseph RedHawk), is an affable, 49-year-old with an easy laugh and mellow manner. He now lives in Reedsville, and he got here by way of his hometown of Reading, Pa., and Tularosa, N.M., where he lived and worked several years.

You'll know him when you see him: He's the guy who wears that amazing buckskin jacket with the fringes – a piece of outerwear that looks like it should be hanging in an Old West museum somewhere.

Total strangers, even, have been known to stop him and ask about it.

"Yeah, people do ask me where I bought it," he said recently from the Reedsville townhouse he shares with his wife and daughter. "I get a kick out of telling them that I didn't buy it, I made it. They say, 'No kidding.' "

Nope, no kidding. Just craftsmanship.

Craftsmanship, and care for his culture, is how he literally got his Indian name. Back home in Pennsylvania more than 25 years ago, the shaman of an Eastern Woodlands tribe bestowed him with the RedHawk moniker _ "He said my heart was more red than white."

The blood ties of both course through his veins. He's English and Welsh on his mother's side. It's from his father's side of the family that he gets his Oglala Sioux and Chiricahua Apache heritage.

He doesn't know all the details, but his father's father, also named Joseph, was taken off a South Dakota reservation as an infant in the early 1900s and adopted by the Heltzinger family, in Reading.

Generations of that practice of forced assimilation, plus the isolation of Indian reservations in general, is why the "culture" part of America's indigenous culture is dying out, said Jon Reyhner, a professor of bilingual and multicultural education at Northern Arizona University.

When the language goes, the culture and heritage goes with it, Reyhner said.

The man known both by RedHawk and Heltzinger completely understands that, he said.

"Growing up, I knew I was part Indian," he said, "but that was the only thing I knew."

He knew he was good with his hands. He was a gearhead, always popping the hood and making his car purr. He was a good student and a seeker, too.

He went to college, planning on a career as a minister. He said he earned a doctorate in religion and history from a school in the east he'd rather not name. "We had a real falling out," he said.

Same for the denomination of the church he would have preached in. By then, he said, he was exploring his American Indian roots. The church disapproved, he said.

He went to work for a garage, as a mechanic and auto detailer.

'They liked my stuff – but they didn't like me'

The breathing problems he developed a few years back from his job prompted his doctor to suggest a move to a warm, dry climate. New Mexico, it was.

He settled in Tularosa, about 100 miles west of El Paso, Texas.

He went back to work on cars, but he was also tuning up a new career built on his abilities as a crafter of authentic American Indian items. He founded a trading post-type shop, turning out period-correct war bonnets, buckskin outfits and moccasins, all by hand.

Several of his customers lived on the Mescalero Apache Reservation, which was right down the road on U.S. 70.

They didn't have the best of feelings for the merchant, though, he said.

"They liked my stuff, but they didn't like me," he said. "That's because I wasn't a full Indian. But they had to buy from me, because I was the only one who knew how to make these things."

Two years ago, the family boomeranged back East, to be closer to Reading.

Now, he wants to revive his career as an American Indian interpreter, dressing in historically correct, authentic garb he makes himself as he discusses the politics and particulars of Northern Plains Indians in the 18th- and 19th-century America.

He's in the process of lining up appearances at schools and festivals.

"I don't necessarily 'romanticize' Indians," he said. He talks about the land-grabs and sneak attacks from one tribe to the other. He tempers the real stuff with respect, though. He also looks in quiet awe at a population that also had, and has, deep reverence for the Earth and its resources.

Look for him to explore another icon synonymous with West Virginia _ one that isn't always accurately portrayed.

"I'm working up some things on your Mountain Man," he said. "Mountaineers in this part of the country back then weren't those big, burly guys with beards. They were pretty scrawny. And they were clean-shaven, because they were dealing with Indians. Indians hated facial hair."

"These guys didn't do push-ups after touchdowns, either."

Webster finds help at VA, gets second chance at life

Finds peace in family and works of art

By Gary J. Kunich
5000 West editor

"I just got stupid. I did something stupid, and that's when I realized I needed help," said Army Veteran Joe Webster.

He got it at the Milwaukee VA, which helped him get sober, find transitional housing and a full-time job.

Four of Webster's paintings now hang in building 7, where other veterans also go through recovery, as a small token of his thanks.

Each painting has a Native-American theme, a nod to Webster's Oneida heritage, along with a recovery message. They were unveiled April 4 in a special ceremony that included staff, family and friends, including fellow tribe members from the Oneida Nation.

The steps he painted about are some of the same ones Webster took to get sober after years of drinking.

He hit his lowest point around December 2010.

"I was drinking, and woke up in the bushes outside my daughter's house," he said with a grimace. "My granddaughter came outside to go to school and said, 'Grandpa, are you OK?' She told her mom she wanted to stay home to take care of Grandpa. That finally gave me my reason to get better."

His daughters brought him to the VA.

Fifteen months later, Webster is full of life and appreciation for the second chance.

"I first came to the VA in the 1980s and wasn't impressed. They didn't seem to care back then, so when I came this time, I had a little bit of an attitude, but I knew I needed to get help. They were amazing. I can't say enough about the VA," he said. "Some people say, 'The VA sucks,' or it didn't help them. No, you have to be willing to help yourself. You have to be willing to take the steps and do the work, and I hope this inspires others to get help."

Soon after he entered treatment, Webster rediscovered his love of drawing, something he first started in Vietnam.

"Back then I used to do sketches, but eventually just threw that stuff away. I didn't want anything to do with it."

As he went through therapy, he created 10 smaller lithographs that now hang in the main hospital outside the Mental Health Clinic. Each of those also contains a recovery message.

"They were important to me, but then I'd see people stop and write down the sayings on each one," he said. "That's when I realized it might help others."

He began work on the larger paintings in October 2011, and recently finished the work. They're part of some 45 paintings he's created since coming to the VA. Many are significant for other areas of Webster's life they represent.

"If you look, most of them have eight feathers. That's for my three children and my five grandchildren," he said. "There are also two pines because my mother and father are buried here (on the VA grounds) underneath two pines. I felt a special spirit come over me as I painted these."

Oneida tribe members said they were honored to be part of the ceremony.

"We're so glad to be here and be a part of this," said Kerry Metoxen, the tribal veteran service officer. "I know Joe did some sketching in Vietnam, but I think coming to the VA helped him to rediscover that. It's kind of cool to see this. I hope this helps other vets and makes them realize they can get help, too."

Dr. Jacquline Bethany, who is part of Webster's treatment team, said the paintings will hang for years to come and people will know Webster did them.

"With these paintings, and his enthusiasm, he has given us far more than we could ever give him," she said. "He will never be forgotten here, and these paintings will help everyone else who comes through these doors."

Ken Metoxen burned sage as part of a blessing, which Webster took around so others could waft the smoke over themselves. The smoke signifies a blessing and purification.

Webster was humbled that so many people were hand for the ceremony, and said the celebration represented the next step in his life.

"Thank you for inviting my tribe," he told the VA

Tribal Environmental Response and What it Means to You

By Amy Spears
Environmental Specialist – Pollution Prevention

Hazardous and toxic chemicals and waste are in use all around us; they are transported, recycled, treated and disposed of on a daily basis. In Brown and Outagamie County alone, there are 161 facilities that are required to report to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) on the management of the toxic material they use and dispose of. Presently, there are 33 large quantity hazardous waste generators located in Brown and Outagamie counties. These facilities are located on and adjacent to the Oneida reservation. What would happen if there was an unexpected or accidental spill or release of these materials? What recourse would the Oneida Tribe have? Who would determine the level of clean-up necessary? And, how would we deal with the long term effects of the release or spill?

Currently, the Tribe would have little recourse. The Wisconsin DNR and/or the EPA would be in charge of overseeing any clean-up actions and they would determine the level of clean-up. The Oneida Tribe would have little say in the process, even if the spill were to happen on the Reservation.

The Oneida Nation Environmental Response Law has been drafted to address these concerns and to bring jurisdiction as well as oversight and enforcement authority to the Tribe. This law would:

- Regulate the identification, investigation and remediation of discharges of hazardous substances to the environment
- Identify sites and facilities where the discharge of a hazardous substance into the environment has occurred; and
- Eliminate contamination from and control the threat of, or actual discharge of hazardous substances.

The Tribe will be able to:

- Respond to discharges of hazardous substance and environmental contamination concerns; and
- Ensure remedial action is taken to redevelop contaminated lands and maintain the health and welfare of the environment.

Please join us for a public hearing to discuss the Oneida Nation Environmental Response Law on Thursday April 26th from 11:30-12:30 at the Business Committee Conference Room. Check back next week in the Kalihwisaks for information on what is hazardous and toxic material and how is it regulated.

Trash burning is illegal, hazardous to air, leading cause of wildfires

Environmental, forestry officials urge alternatives to burning

Wisconsin DNR

MADISON – People conducting spring cleanups who are thinking about taking a match to a debris pile may want to think twice, according to state environmental officials, who caution that burning household trash adds dangerous pollutants to the air. And while burning some yard waste is legal in some areas, state forestry officials caution that debris burning is the number one cause of wildfires in Wisconsin, causing approximately 30 percent of such fires each year.

"Burning any material, whether plastic, paper or wood, produces a variety of hazardous and toxic air pollutants, including carcinogens such as arsenic, benzene and formaldehyde," said Brad Wolbert, of the Department of Natural Resources Waste and Materials Management Program. "Children and others with asthma are especially harmed by smoke from burning garbage. If you burn trash, you're affecting your health and the environment more than you know."

A study by the U.S Environmental Protection Agency found that the amount of cancer causing dioxin and furan emissions from 15 households burning trash each day is the same as those emissions from a 200 ton per day municipal waste incinerator with high efficiency emission control technology.

The Oneida Tribe prohibits the burning of trash and strongly discourages the burning of yard waste within the reservation boundries. For more information please contact Amy Spears at (920) 869-4549.

Because of its environmental risk, burning trash in Wisconsin is illegal. In addition, Oneida's recycling and solid waste disposal law prohibit burning of household trash or recyclable material in any instance.

"Recycling programs are available in every community for plastic, glass and metal containers, corrugated cardboard, newspaper, and magazines," Wolbert said.

Agricultural and horticultural plastics like silage film, haylage bags, bale wrap, woven tarps, nursery pots, and trays must also be recycled or landfilled. It is illegal to burn plastics in Wisconsin. Materials that are not recyclable should go to a legal disposal facility, not a burn barrel or pile.

Materials that are legal to burn, such as leaves and brush, are also regulated under state codes.

Instead of burning, state environmental and forestry officials recommend people visit the DNR website and search keywords "open burning" for alternative such as composting and recycling.

Current State law requires individuals wishing to burn legal materials to first obtain a burning permit and then call or check online on the day of the burn for the daily restrictions. Permits can be obtained online or calling 1-888-WIS-BURN from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. Customers may also visit their local Ranger Station or Emergency Fire Warden for permits in-person. Permits are free and valid for one year. For more information on burning permits and the current fire danger in Wisconsin, see the DNR website.

For more information on how to handle waste materials, visit* Oneida-nsn.org/environment or dnr.wi.gov and search keyword "waste."

Wanted: Oneida scholars age zero and up

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Education and Training Area Manager Norbert Hill Jr. wants Oneida parents to start getting their children ready for college long before high school starts.

"The coaching starts very early, and our youngest scholars are from age zero to five," said Hill. "We have to prepare them for learning, it's a lifelong process."

To share this vision, his department is hosting Coaching Your Child to Harvard on Thursday, May 3 at Thornberry Creek. The event will feature a free dinner and keynote speaker Dr. Bob Powless, Professor Emeritus – University of Minnesota-Duluth.

"He's a guy who provides a lot of encouragement and support," said Hill. "I think our parents and our families need encouragement, and if they can believe it, they can do it."

Hill stated Dr. Powless encouraged him to continue on with school.

"He's the one after I finished my undergraduate degree just said to me in passing 'you ought to think about graduate school,' and nobody ever said that to me, and that one sentence stuck will be all my life, and went back to graduate school," said Hill.

Oneida citizens can afford to go to college with the tribe's help; however, young people need to prepare themselves for school by learning to love learning.

"One of the best things that parents can do is read to their child," he said. "From zero to five, 90 percent of the child's brain development happens in those years. So we need to capture those years in terms of reading or preparation to learning," he said.

Post high school training is necessary with the rising tide of technology jobs.

"Kids now need more than a high school degree; they need post-secondary high school education and training,"

The event is open to anyone who has college aspirations for their child according to Hill.

"We would like to provide dinner for two in any family. It could be mom-dad, it could be mom-child, or dad,-child," he said.

Space is limited, call 920-869-4372 for a reservation.

Support group offered for parents of college students

Do you have a student in college, or getting ready to enter college in the next year? Parents of college and university students are invited to participate in a mutual support group!

Have you ever wondered…

- What expenses might I need to assist my student with?
- What do I do when my student is homesick?
- How can I support my student without "parenting" them too much while they are away in college?
- Mitch and his staff could probably fill in many commonly asked questions PARENTS have.

The transition to college can be confusing, and full of anxiety for parents as well as students. Our children are starting true independence when they leave home for their higher education experience. It's hard to tell your student, "I don't know what you should do".

Come to this inaugural meeting on March 15, at the Oneida Community Education Center on Packerland Drive at 6:00 P.M. to share ups and downs, joys and trials, and patterns of college life.

The Parents of College Student Support Group will identify common questions and issues that parents encounter, who can then help prepare the next group of parents of students who will be venturing into college life next fall! Join us as we share light refreshments, exchange stories and better prepare our Oneida students for higher education!

Getting students to college is a major undertaking. Getting students through college is another. The inaugural meeting will be held at 7:00 P.M. on Wednesday, February 22 at the Oneida Community Support Center on 2632 South Packerland Drive. Refreshments will be served.

Let's unscramble the transition, confusing and anxiety producing experience of launching a child into the world of higher education. You will also receive valuable information concerning complex landscape of higher education and knowledge that every parent should know. The Higher Education staff will be available for consultation.

For more information contact Barb Kolitsch at (920) 496 7900 or Norbert Hill at (920) 869 4037.

ATTENTION! Parents of college-bound students! (Grades 0-12)

Oneida Prom 2012

By Joelle Thomas
Thunderhawk Times

This year, some ONHS students have given a lot of thought and planning to prom.

I have interviewed the teacher who runs the Prom Committee, Laura Studee.

Studee told me that she was pleased with the many ideas the students brought up for prom and that they decided on "Black and White" and "Masquerade" as possible themes. They voted and came up with "Masquerade."

Prom will be held in the Great Lakes Ballroom at the Radisson Hotel and Conference Center in the Great on Saturday, April 21 from 8:00 p.m. to 12:00 a.m.

With the basic information, we did a Q & A thing:

Q: How did you come up with this theme?

A: The kids in the prom committee came up with some ideas and voted.

Q: What's all planned to happen that night?

A: Well we will have food, soda, and lots and lots of dancing.

Q: Will there be a DJ? What's his or her name?

A: Yes we have a DJ and its Doug from Kiss FM.

Q: What decorations will there be?

A: Well, we made masks so there will be masks all over the walls. And we will also have a balloon arch.

Studee also wanted to be sure that everyone knew that all ONHS students are invited, that it's not just juniors and seniors. Each ONHS student is allowed to bring one person under the age of 18, unless they are graduates from ONHS. 60 people are expected to show up.

Ticket Prices are $8 for one person and $15 for two people.

Annual Madison Art Field Trip

By Josanna Cornelius
Thunderhawk Times

All of the students in Becky Anderson's art classes who turned in permission slips went to Madison to the Capitol Building on Friday, March 30, 2012 for the Youth Art Month Capitol Rotunda Art Show.

ONHS has been represented in the show every year for past seven years. This year ONHS seniors Kalene Beechtree and Guadalupe Martinez had works in the show.

The bus left ONHS a little after 8:00 a.m. and we were on the road until about 6:00 p.m. It was a busy day.

After we were done viewing the capitol and the band that was playing we got to go to State Street. It's a long city street with a bunch of stores. The stores were different, with just a few food stores and a couple of clothing stores that I have heard of. We were able to explore State Street with friends for about an hour and a half.

ONHS Seniors Kalene Beechtree and Guadalupe Martinez carried on a proud ONHS tradition by earning a place in the Youth Art Month Capitol Rotunda Show in Madison this spring.

Overall, I would give the entire trip a 9 out of 10, the only problem being that I don't like long rides, especially on buses. Other than that, everything else was fantastic.

Students on the field trip were: Jordan Bain, Ayashe Barton, Kalene Beechtree, Emmitt Big Medicine, Paul Christjohn, Anthony Cornelius, Colleen Cornelius, Josanna Cornelius, Brandon Doxtator, Jessica House, Billie John, Kommanche Jordan, Shanna Jourdan, Muriel King, Guadalupe Martinez, Pe Wab Bec Menomin, Diego Metoxen, Matias Metoxen, Noelle Metoxen, Paige Ninham, Kanani Nunies, Autumn Oshkeshequoam, Abalone Paprocki, Faith Powless, Angelica Schuyler, Oscar Schuyler, Sheila Stevens, Vincent Webster, and Kylene Welch.

Bears Greatest Draft Picks

By Sheldon Skenandore
Thunderhawk Times

The NFL Draft is at the end of this month. Every fan of every team is looking for good players to make their team better.

As a Bear fan myself, I am hoping they get the players who will help them beat the Packers. (By the way, I would also like to see the Packers trade Aaron Rodgers to the Bears.)

Over the years, the Bears have drafted some great players. They've also drafted some not-so-great players.

I thought I would list what I think are the ten best players ever drafted by the Bears.

The Bears were known as the Decatur Staleys in 1919 and 1920. The Packers also started football in 1919. The Bears were known as the Chicago Staleys in 1921, because they moved from Decatur to Chicago. They joined the NFL that year, but it was called the American Professional Football Association. In 1922, they became the Chicago Bears. The Packers joined that year.

The Bears are one of the original NFL teams, along with the Cardinals. So, the Bears have had a long journey in football. Also, football fans should know that the Bears and the Cardinals are the oldest rivalry in the NFL, not the Bears and the Packers. The Bears lost one game in 1920 and that was to the Cardinals.

The NFL draft started in 1936.

Here is a list of the Bears' 10 greatest draft picks in my opinion: 1. Gale Sayers was a great running back. 2. Mike Ditka was a great tight end and a great coach for the Bears. 3. Walter Payton was known as "Sweetness" and he could do everything on the field. 4. Red Grange was the Bears first pick in the first draft. He made the Bears great. 5. Sid Luckman was a great player in the old days. 6. Jim McMahon was a great quarterback on the 1985 Super Bowl Team. 7. Brian Urlacher is a great linebacker these days. 8. Dick Butkus was a great linebacker in the 1960s. 9. Mike Singletary was a great linebacker on the 1985 Super Bowl team. 10. Devin Hester can break the game open at any time with a great kick or punt return.

Nurse Liljestrom

By Tasha Stevens
Thunderhawk Times

Jocelyn Liljestrom

The Oneida Nation School System has a new nurse, Jocelyn Liljestrom. You're probably wondering where a catchy name like "Joselyn" (pronounced "joz a lin") came from. Her mom was going to name her Willow until the name Jocelyn came up in a movie.

Liljestrom has four children, ages five to twenty. She previously worked as a community health nurse for the tribe in 2002 to 2003. Liljestrom started working for the tribe again in 2010 and is now working here at ONHS as well as the Turtle School.

She attended University of Madison first — wanting to become a doctor. "Helping patients and being with them" made her want to be a nurse.

Her favorite thing about being a nurse was "flexibility. There are all kinds of settings," she said.

Her least-favorite thing about being a nurse was the hours, but mostly, seeing things she'd couldn't help with. "I always want to help," said Liljestrom.

I asked Liljestrom how she like being a nurse at ONHS and she said she "loves it!" She said she sees "a lot of really strong, smart kids. It's very humbling and impressive seeing the dedication to the culture," said Liljestrom.

Being available to the staff and students and making them feel comfortable is the most important thing about being a school nurse, she said. "It's a team effort! She added.

She's most surprised on how much "traffic" and activity there is in being the school nurse. Nurse Liljestrom is here for the kids and is happy to be in the position of school nurse for our school district.

Tim Burton rules

By Sheldon Skenandore
Thunderhawk Times

Tim Burton is a good movie director. The movie he is working on right now is "Dark Shadows," which I am planning to see. "Dark Shadows" will be in movie theaters on May 11.

From what I know, Tim Burton is just a guy who likes to make movies. He has been doing that since he was a kid. Burton was born in 1958.

His list of movies include: Beetlejuice, Edward Scissorhands, The Nightmare Before Christmas, Ed Wood, Sleepy Hollow, Corpse Bride, Sweeney Todd: The Demon Barber of Fleet Street, Pee-wee's Big Adventure, Batman (1989), Batman Returns, Planet of the Apes (2001), Charlie and the Chocolate Factory (2005), and Alice in Wonderland (2010).

This Week's Shows to Watch

By Tyler Stevens
Thunderhawk Times

April 9-13, one of the best shows that I catch up with is "American Idol." They are down to the Top Six and of those Top Six that I think are going to win is either Jessica or Joshua.

As you may or may not know the judges are Jennifer Lopez, Randy Jackson, and Steven Tyler. Each week there is a "Bottom Three" and then the person with the least amount of votes would sing to stay in the competition, but the judges only get one save until the Top Five, which I think is pretty fair.

Another show to watch is "Rupaul's Drag Race" which is also pretty-much narrowing down to the end. My picks to win are either Phi Phi Ohara or Latrice Royale, because they seem to be doing well and I favored them since the beginning.

So those are my two shows to watch this week and over the next few weeks. Don't forget to tune in to American Idol Wednesdays and Thursdays, seven p.m. Central Time and Rupaul's Drag Race Mondays, eight p.m. Central Time.

Funny? My Big Brother

By La Kota Martinez
Thunderhawk Times

Monday, March 19 was "Let's Laugh Day"—a day to enjoy the funny things in life. It doesn't have to be a comedienne, TV show or movie.

Someone funny is someone who makes you laugh even when you`re only by them for a couple seconds. Someone who I think is the funniest person ever is my big brother. He makes me laugh whenever I see him. He`s overall a good guy to be around.

My big brother and I are always playing basketball together when we get the chance. But sometimes I can't play seriously because he'll have me giggling while we're playing one on one in the sport we both love. He's funny and that's part of the reason I love my big bro.

employees. "When you honor one member of the Oneida Nation, you honor all members of the Oneida Nation. I hope I represent the tribe in a good way, and I will not let them down. I will not let any other veterans down."

Celina Webster, one of his daughters, wrote on Facebook that she is grateful for the new opportunity she has with her dad.

"I am so proud of him and his success," she wrote. "It's amazing how so much can change and turn around for someone in one year. I know he greatly appreciates everything everyone has done to help him come this far, and my sisters and I do also."

Webster has a full-time job as a maintenance worker, and hopes to move into a permanent home in the near future. For now, he enjoys that he can spend time with his family.

"That's the best part of it," he said. "The VA gave me my life back."

Beware of Internet Fraud

ONEIDA, WI — The U.S. Postal Service wants to remind postal customers to be aware of internet fraud.

"Scammers like the Internet to target unsuspecting postal consumers, asking for personal information to deliver a package" says Oneida Postmaster Cheryl Koenig. "Online scammers can ignore national borders or boundaries. They have only one objective: to take people's money." Whether it is auction fraud or identity theft, reshipping scams or foreign lotteries, our customers need to be cautious, and be smart, adds Koenig.

The Postal Service recommends the following tips to avoid fraud on the internet:

- Never use a link in an e-mail to visit a website.
- Only purchase goods and services from sites you visited on your own.
- Examine all online offers before buying anything. When you're online, be on guard. Don't respond to suspicious e-mail.
- Never provide your personal information (Social Security number, credit card account, etc.) unless you initiated the communications.

Customers can keep up-to-date about the latest fraud alerts on the internet by going to www.usps.com. They can also call 1-800-ASK-USPS to report a delivery problem or email spam@uspis.gov about spam. The U.S. Postal Inspection Service has more information at www.postalinspectors.uspis.gov.

Drug court program rates high

MONROE, La. (AP) ~ Ask anyone associated with the 4th Judicial District Court's drug court program and they will say its success has been overwhelming.

The News-Star reports the drug court program, which was started in Ouachita Parish in June 1998, consists of judicially supervised court dockets that handle the cases of nonviolent substance abusing offenders under the adult, juvenile, family and tribal justice systems.

Rather than being sentenced to jail time, qualified defendants are placed in substance abuse treatment programs. The defendants report once a week to a probation officer and take drug screens. Failure of any part of the program could land them in jail.

In Louisiana, about 88.3 percent of graduates from the program were not re-arrested within the first 12 months of completion of the program.

WI DNR bans outdoor burning in north woods

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ The state Department of Natural Resources plans to outlaw outdoor burning in far northwestern Wisconsin out of fears a spark might ignite a raging wildfire.

Severe storms last summer felled hundreds of thousands of trees across the region. The DNR, the National Guard and loggers have been working to clear the timber, but now the spring fire season has begun and DNR officials fear a fire could easily tear through timber still on the ground and engulf the area.

The DNR announced Wednesday it will ban burning anything outside in portions of southwestern Douglas, northwestern Washburn, northern Burnett and northwestern Polk counties starting Friday. That means people won't be allowed to build campfires, smoke outside or light fireworks.

Sexual assault: myths and misconceptions

By Jessica Parker
Native American Coordinator/ Crisis Counselor

April is Sexual Assault Awareness Month in Wisconsin. In the past, Wisconsin celebrated only one week in April to bring awareness to issues surrounding sexual violence. However, as understanding and awareness increases, so does the time needed for such campaigns. One week is no longer enough to raise awareness of this difficult issue. While our understanding of this topic has evolved, there is still much that is misunderstood about this complex subject. Many approach this topic with preconceived notions. Sometimes it is what we were taught; sometimes it is a product of our experience. Nonetheless, when what we assume is different than what is really happening, we could be harming those who need our support and understanding to heal from this trauma.

One common misconception about sexual violence is that it is an issue that only women should be concerned with. The US Bureau of Justice Statistics states that 11% of victims of sexual violence are male (2000). One in four victims of sexual assault under the age of 12 are boys (Juvenile Offenders and Victims, 1999 National Report). Though juvenile males are more likely than adult males to be victimized, males of any age can become victims of this crime, and it can happen anywhere. This is why prevention for all youth is so important. Many parents take the important steps to talk with their female children about body parts and touches that are safe and not safe. Unfortunately, this is often overlooked with our male children. Sexual assault does not discriminate. It is vital that all youth are given the necessary knowledge and skills to use across their lifespan and live a life free of sexual violence.

There are also common misconceptions about who is committing these crimes. For example, many people believe LGBT (Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender) people are more likely to perpetrate crimes of sexual violence than their heterosexual counterparts, particularly against children. For this to be true, we would have to view sexual assault as an act of sexual desire when in fact, it is a crime about power and control, similar to other forms of violence. "Most studies indicate that men who rape other men do so out of anger or an attempt to overpower, humiliate, and degrade their victims (Male on Male Rape, 1997)." Furthermore, when adult male offenders did victimize young males, it was for reasons other than sexual orientation. Of perpetrators of child sexual assault whose primary preference is toward adults, approximately 80% live exclusively heterosexual lifestyles (Men who Rape, 1979). In most instances, the sexual orientation of the offender has very little to do with the victimization of children or adults of the same gender.

Another myth about those who commit these crimes is that they are deranged, mentally ill and often strangers to the person they assault. The majority of sexual assaults are actually committed by persons known to the victim. It is estimated that between 75% and 90% of victims know the person who assaulted them. It is a trusted person. It can be a neighbor, friend, family member or sometimes even an authority figure. This can cause many survivors to feel betrayed and confused about their crime. They may begin to question their entire ability to judge a person's character and may make it difficult to form new relationships, or maintain the ones they currently have. It is important to acknowledge that there is typically no way to identify an offender until a crime has been committed. And while survivors may look back and notice things they may have overlooked before, the only person who can be blamed for a crime is the person who committed it.

There are also misconceptions regarding those who have been victims of this crime. Some believe that there are certain behaviors that all victims will display. They may expect that a "true victim" will be upset, crying, and will tell someone right away. For some survivors, this may be true. However, it is important to note, there is no typical victim behavior. People delay disclosing what happened to them for a variety of reasons. It could be embarrassment, fear of retaliation from the offender or their loved ones, fear of not being believed, some may have had unpleasant experiences with reporting in the past. Everyone's experience is unique to their own circumstances. These are just a few reasons someone may not tell right away.

Not every victim will show signs that they are upset. It is a normal reaction to try to keep things normal as a way to cope with what happened. They may go about their daily activities as if nothing happened. Some may use humor as a way to cope, appearing as if they are not really bothered. Others may show more anger than sadness.

If someone tells you they have been sexually assaulted: believe them. There is no typical way that a victim will behave. Do not be the one to determine whether they are truly a victim. Encourage them to seek help and heal. And if you are concerned about their safety: tell someone.

If you have been sexually assaulted: tell someone. While everyone heals from these tragic events in their own way, it is so important to have support through the healing journey.

Information for patients who utilize OCHC On Call Nurse

Registered Nurses (RN) are available for patient phone calls – 24 hours a day/7days a week. When the clinic is closed the RN is home. They do not have access to medical records or pharmacy information.

When to call and speak with the RN after clinic hours:

- You/your child have an urgent health care need/question that cannot wait until the next open day of the clinic.
- Don't call the RN when you are having a life threatening issue. For example, chest pain, difficulty breathing, or bleeding profusely from wound. Access the nearest emergency department to get medical attention as soon as possible. Call 911 as needed for intervention. Call the Contract Health Services Department to report the visit within 72 hours to ensure coverage.
- The RN's on call also work 40 + hours per week at the OCHC medical clinic, in addition to providing on call services. Calling in the middle of the night with a concern that is not urgent is not appropriate.
- On call staff does not determine Contract Health eligibility. You need to contact the Contract Health Department when the clinic reopens to check on eligibility

OSGC claims opposition using misinformation campaign

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

After the Green Bay City Council agreed to conduct an inquiry on the grounds used by Oneida Seven Generations Corporation (OSGC) to obtain city permits to construct their waste-to-energy plant OSGC's Chief Executive Officer Kevin Cornelius states the opposition to the plant is using untruthful tactics.

"The opposition's sole goal is to stop the facility through a misinformation campaign," Cornelius said.

"We find it appalling that the opposition steadfastly refuses to accept the facts and the findings and has chosen to misrepresent the project and its impacts," added Cornelius.

According to OSGC, the plant will be in full compliance with all local, state, and federal laws and regulations.

Cornelius also questions the group's true motives when opposing the plant.

"We find it noteworthy that they have only targeted our development as an incinerator, which we are not, yet when there are actual incinerators proposed for this area they do not object. We can only speculate on their true motives in going after an Oneida business project," Cornelius said. "OSGC, and those working on the project, are offended by the continuing harassment of this business development."

Honoring the Ones who Came Before Us

It was a great comeback after a three year hiatus for a Traditional Powwow that was held on the grounds of the University of Wisconsin Green Bay. This multi-cultural event proved to be a missing link on campus for many. With monetary support from the University, and dedication from key organizers, the gathering held Saturday, April 14 was a success. Above, Dana Warrington shows how he took first place honors for a men's competition. Right, the color guard stands tall and proud during the second grand entry of the day.

Oneida student wins state poster contest

Attorney General J.B. Van Hollen proudly announced this year's winner of the National Missing Children's Day poster competition on Thursday, April 12, 2012. The winner was Andreah Newberry, a fifth grade student at Jefferson Elementary School in Green Bay.

Attorney General Van Hollen, along with teachers and district leaders, officers from the Green Bay Police Department, leaders from the local Boys and Girls Club and other local officials, joined Andreah and her family as she accepted the award certificate.

An emotional Andreah also happily received a U.S. Savings Bond certificate and a framed poster.

With her poster winning the statewide contest, Andreah's creation will represent Wisconsin in the national competition later this year. The winner of the national contest will go to Washington, DC, to attend the annual National Missing Children's Day Ceremony.

Newberry resides with her grandmother Joyce Yealey (Hill). Her parents are Cherise Webster and Michael Newberry.

The Department of Justice also provided each student at Jefferson Elementary School with a Child Identification Kit to take home.

The OBC administered oaths of office for Sandra Dennett to the Oneida Personnel Commission; Tom Oudenhoven, Judy Cornelius Hawk, Richard Baird, and Gerald Jordan to the Oneida Environmental Resource Board; and Sylvia Cornelius and Nicholas Reynolds to the Oneida Arts Board.

The OBC also swore in new Oneida Police Department (OPD) Officer Edward Metoxen.

Minutes

The OBC approved the March 28, 2012 OBC minutes.

Directors and Managers quarterly reports

Oneida Housing Authority (OHA) Director Dale Wheelock presented the OHA report. Wheelock discussed opening the construction bid process to get lower cost bids. Chairman Ed Delgado agreed with that assessment.

"If we want to build and develop this community, we need to be able to afford it," said Delgado. The OBC accepted the report, and also accepted a report on Self-Governance from Chris Johns.

Ombudsman Dianne McLester-Heim presented a report concerning training she's undergoing and certification she's seeking for her position. The report was accepted by the OBC.

Emergency Management Director Marty Antone gave an overview of his department's activities which include an increased emphasis on earthquake training in light of the minor tremors reported in Clintonville located 40 miles from Oneida. The OBC accepted his report.

Director of Environmental Health Division Pat Pelky highlighted the progress his department has made in eliminating non-point pollution in the Duck Creek watershed. The OBC accepted his report.

Boards, Committees and Commissions

The OBC posted one parent vacancy for the Oneida Tribal School Board.

Reports for the Oneida Election Board and the Oneida Gaming Commission were deferred. The OBC accepted reports from the Environmental Resource Board and the Oneida Personnel Commission.

There was discussion concerning employees showing up to hearings without an advocate. Susan Daniels of the Oneida Personnel Commission stated employees were being turned away from services at the Legal Resource Center (LRC) because they don't meet the criteria. Senior Attorney Charlene Smith of LRC disputed the statement.

"Every time we referred to somebody, we will take them on. In the last three months we have received no referrals," said Smith.

"We're taking these small steps towards improvement, but you still will have employees out there that are struggling for some type of advocacy," said Daniels.

Standing Committees

The OBC accepted the Legislative Operating Committee (LOC) quarterly report and April 9, 2012 minutes. The committee also forwarded approval forth Personnel Policies and Procedures amendments relating to capping vacation and personal time accumulation to the General Tribal Council (GTC).

The committee accepted the April 9, 2012 minutes for the Finance Committee as well as an e-poll.

General Tribal Council

The OBC set a May 5 date for the caucus and July 7 for the GTC special election. The committee deferred setting a time and place for the July 2 semi-annual GTC meeting. The date lands on a work day, and there was discussion on whether to start the meeting at 10:00am or 6:00pm and whether to split the topics over two meetings.

"I believe this agenda is too long, and there's too many issues on here. We can't reasonably expect General Tribal Council to address this kind of agenda," said Delgado.

If a second meeting was added, research into

Don Webster fixes a bowl of chili at an informational meeting for the upcoming 16th annual Oneida Relay for Life held Thursday, April 12.

Oneida community members constructed bowls of chili at an information meeting for the 16th annual Relay for Life (RFL) of Oneida which will take place July 27-28. The theme of this year's relay will be "Constructing a Cure."

Lisa Metoxen has been participating in the area fundraiser for the American Cancer Society for the past 13 years.

"We had so much fun and we camped for free. It was a family event that I just started coming back every year, and I got roped into the committee and I just love it," she said.

Doris Yelk-Wilber was asked to chair the first Oneida RFL, but later event got personal.

"The second year I was in it, one of my friends got cancer, so from there on I started doing a team with her, and I've had Margaret's Marchers ever since," she said.

Metoxen also knows people affected by the disease.

"My sister in law has cancer, she's a survivor, she's gone through a lot of stuff, and I just lost an aunt to cancer," she said.

The relay starts the evening of Friday, July 27. Teams and individuals take turns walking around the Norbert Hill Center powwow grounds throughout the night and into Saturday morning. There's a lap honoring cancer survivors. At night, the track is lit up with luminary bags purchased and decorated to honor cancer survivors and those who've passed.

"We always have the luminary ceremony and that's probably the most touching part of it," said Yelk-Wilber. "Just the feeling of lighting all the bags and walking around the track with all the lit candles bags it's heart wrenching."

While the serious cause has its serious moments, most people turn out for the competitions, music, movies, and Dude Looks Like a Lady contest.

"Once you're there you'll find that there's so much fun, there's something from zero to 100 years old. There's always something going on, there's so many community members that go there, you'll be shocked," said Metoxen. "So much support and love from the community."

A kick-off event will be held Wednesday, May 2 at 11:45am in the Radisson Hotel and Conference Center Huron Room, 2040 Airport Road. Please RSVP, or for more information about the 2012 Oneida Relay for Life, contact Paula King Dessart at 920.869.1260, Pogi@oneidanation.org or voted 9-2 to review the process OSGC obtained their permit and if the company mislead the council when presenting the project to the city.

One of the main areas of concern opponents of the project have are the exhaust vents the plant uses. Opponents call them smokestacks while OSGC labels them as exhaust pipes.

"OSGC has always stated that there will be no smokestacks such as those associated with power plants or paper mills. There will be exhaust pipes, which are referred to as stacks in WDNR permitting, which are common to almost every industry," Cornelius said.

Project critics feel the technology is untested and bound for failure, which in turn would lead to it polluting the area and releasing toxins into the atmosphere.

But, state and federal officials disagree. After more than a year of review the facility received air and waste permits issued by the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources, and a Finding of No Significant Environmental Impact from both the U.S. Department of Energy and the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs.

"It won't matter what scientific-based evidence we produce, or what government agency experts say, the opposition will not believe it," Cornelius said. "It won't matter how many public comment periods or public meetings are held, they will not be satisfied."

The facility will be located on Hurlbut Street in Green Bay. It will take municipal waste through a gasification process that will create power that will be sold to Wisconsin Public Service. OSGC claims the 60,000 square foot plant will decrease waste from going into landfills, increase recycling and create jobs. Construction is set to begin this spring.

"What is being lost in all of this nonsense is that this is a green energy project that is good for the environment and good for the local economy," said Cornelius.

And the beat goes on...

By Yvonne Kaquatosh
Kalhwisaks

And the beat goes on… At least that is the concensus of a core group of organizers who managed to bring back the traditional powwow on the grounds of the University of Wisconsin Green Bay Campus after a three year hiatus.

The 15th Annual Powwow which was held on Saturday, April 14 was coordinated by the Intertribal Student Council (ISC) of UWGB.

The ISC is the Native student organization on campus, explained Luanne Funmaker, one of four executive members. Other members include Donald Keeble, Jose Villa, and Annette Wilber.

Co-advisers, Deb Rezac and Dave Turney (Napos) assisted with the student organized event.

"The powwow is the biggest multicultural event on the UWGB campus," she added.

It had been discontinued in 2008. It had been held on campus for 14 consecutive years. According to Funmaker, the reason students had stopped planning and hosting the powwow was due to lack of support from administration. "The students who had worked diligently to make the powwow a success were never recognized as the University took full credit for the event," she explained. "This year however, the University has been extremely supportive, especially in providing monetary support," she added.

Powwow highlights

Connie Danforth served as head female dancer and Alan Caldwell as the head male dancer.

The Host Drum was Bear Creek of Rankin Reserve, Ontario. Other invited drums included Smokey Town, Young Firekeepers, Ho-Chunk Station and Chief Hill. A total of eleven drums participated in the event.

John Teller Jr. was the arena director while Dan King served as emcee.

Porky John, Oneida, was recognized for 28 years of Sobriety and was given an eagle feather by Wes Martin. A dance was held in his honor thereafter with those in attendance coming forward to congratulate him on his sobriety.

Other performances included the Oneida Social dancers who were able to dance to Charlie Doxtator's smoke dance songs.

A men's dance competition was also held during the evening festivities. Dana Warrington and Mike Fish, both Menominee, took first and second place honors respectively.

The ISC (Donald Keeble) was able to collect donations to have a mens all category competition. "We never expected to have either of the opportunities so it was a really great treat for us and the audience," said Funmaker.

Will the Tradition continue?

When asked by another source what the prospects were for holding a UWGB powwow next year? Funmaker said the following:

The Intertribal Student Council did get approved from SUFAC for a budget that includes the pow wow. But we really need Native students to step up in order for another successful pow wow like this passed year. Donald Keeble and myself will be graduating in December, so since we were the main students responsible for organizing, planning, and facilitating the event, we are worried about it continuing.

The Intertribal Student Council is comprised of Native students who attend UWGB. Some tribes represented in Intertribal are Menominee, Oneida, Potowatomi, Ojibwe, and Quileute. "We also have non-Native members who are very active in Intertribal," said Funmaker.

Others who played an instrumental role in the current relationship with Native students/faculty were recognized and include: Bernadine Vigue, Selma Buckwheat, Reanne Skenadore, Kathy Newbanks, Alicia Waupoose, Nichole Merckes and Angi Moon.

These individuals were the last ones to put the pow wow together in 2008. Due to the strenuous relationship with the administration back then, These individuals provided current Intertribal members with a strong history. This is the reason why the organization has the strong and healthy relationship today with the University and administration. We would not be able to have hosted such a successful pow wow without the struggles past students and faculty endured. This is where Intertribal came up with the theme: Honoring Those Who Came Before Us.

None of the organizers of this years 15th annual UWGB pow wow have ever organized a pow wow before. "This event has been by far one of the hardest and most difficult endeavors I have ever accomplished," she said.

The success of the event is a testament to their dedication to bring back a native tradition.

From 2A/April 11, 2012 OBC meeting

where it could be held needed to be done as the Radisson Ball Room is booked every Saturday of 2012. Delgado suggested the meeting will take place at either the back of the Norbert Hill Center or at Shopko Hall in Green Bay.

Unfinished Business

A Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) between the OBC and Trust/Enrollment Committee was deferred.

New Business/Requests

The OBC rescinded blanket travel authorization for BC liaison areas.

"There's been occasions where we haven't been able to meet quorum, and also that we need to be more public about our travel," said Delgado.

Travel

The OBC approved a travel report from Secretary Patty Hoeft on a trip to Canandaigua, NY to commemorate the Treaty of Canandaigua on November 9-11, 2011.

The committee also approved travel for Councilwoman Melinda Danforth for Indian Health Service Bemidji Area pre-negotiation meeting, May 15-17, 2012, Bloomington, MN.

Delgado will be attending the U.S. Dept. of Veterans Affairs 1st Central Region conference for Tribal leaders, Veterans and Veteran service providers, April 17-18, 2012, Minneapolis, MN.

Hoeft will attend Native Nations Institute (NNI) International Advisory board meeting, April 24-27, 2012, Albuquerque, NM, her travel expenses being paid for by NNI.

Additions

The OBC passed a resolution which authorizes submission of a 2012 Coordinated Tribal Grant Solicitation (CTAS) grant. The grant from the US Department of Justice would provide funding for public safety and community policing, justice systems and alcohol and substance abuse, tribal sexual assault services program, violence against women tribal governments program and tribal youth program. The grant could add up to over $2 million over three years with no matching funds required. Plans for the grant would include increasing services at the LRC to include legal counsel for individuals facing drug and alcohol charges for little or no cost. Smith explained her department often refers individuals to Oneida's Alcohol and Other Drug Abuse (AODA) programs.

"It seems to me that most of the people that come to me for criminal defense representation have an alcohol or drug problem; that even extends into family law," said Smith.

Action in open session on items from Executive Session Discussion meeting of April 10, 2012

Reports

The OBC accepted a verbal update on the New York land claim settlement.

The committee approved a Contract and limited waiver of sovereign immunity: LexisNexis Time Matters Maintenance Agreement.

Approval for a 12-month contract renewal for Attorney Arlinda Locklear was deferred to the next OBC agenda.

The OBC accepted the Treasurer's report month ending Feb. 29, 2012.

Audit Committee

The OBC accepted a report regarding concerns over the Oneida Resident Centered Care Community.

Treasurer Danforth asked there be a follow up meeting with the ORCCC project team and the Business

Committee within one week,

A review of the Oneida Golf Enterprise Board response to audit findings regarding issuance of complimentary items was deferred for two weeks to accommodate new board members.

Unfinished Business/ BC directives

A breakeven analysis of the Oneida Golf Enterprise Corporation was also deferred for two weeks as was a proposal to redesignate Hobart Strategy team.

The OBC accepted a report on Three Fires given by Chief Financial Officer Larry Barton.

New Business/Requests

The OBC approved the transfer proposal for former General Manager and Chief Of Staff employees.

Additions

The OBC approved an Oneida Seven Generations update and a letter of support.

Brandon Stevens requested that the OBC retro-approve a support letter to the Green Bay City Council, which was accepted.

We deserve better

In the April 5, 2012 OBC Forum, Paul Ninham suggests that the OSGC and OBC know more than UK and EU legislatures which classify pyrolysis and gasification as incineration (Directive 2000/76/EC), that the OSGC has no duty to prove that the impacts of new technologies are safe for seven generations, that not signing a petition against their project is somehow evidence of support, and that anyone who shares the concerns of long term environmental activists such as Rebecca Katers is simply a racist.

The US Department of Energy has approved technologies resulting in the ongoing Gulf oil disaster as well as problems at Fort Calhoun, San Onofre and other nuclear power plants, and now OSGC's bumbling hubris might provoke a conscientious boycott of Tribal enterprises.

Will Green Bay's burgeoning downtown business community and ventures such as the Children's Museum join efforts opposing harmful emissions from OSGC's toxic endeavor to protect their employees and customers? OSGC is gambling Oneida's resources and reputation to find out.

I should be known that OSGC now has a "full care, custody and control Operations and Maintenance agreement" with PIC, a subsidiary of Marubeni Corp. which recently "agreed to pay a $54.6 million criminal penalty to resolve charges related to the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act for a decade-long scheme to bribe" government officials to obtain energy contracts.

Payday Loans Equal Very Costly Cash: Please Consider the Alternatives

"I just need enough cash to tide me over until payday."

"GET CASH UNTIL PAYDAY!...$100 OR MORE..FAST."

The ads are on the radio, television, the Internet, even in the mail. They refer to payday loans, cash advance loans, check advance loans, post-dated check loans, or deferred deposit loans. Regardless of their names, these small, short-term, high-rate loans by check cashers, finance companies and others come at a very high price.

Here is how they work: A borrower writes a personal check payable to the lender for the amount the person wants to borrow, plus the fee they must pay for borrowing. The company gives the borrower the amount of the check less the fee, and agrees to hold the check until the loan is due, usually the borrower's next payday. Or, with the borrower's permission, the company deposits the amount borrowed-less the fee- into the borrower's checking account electronically. The loan amount is due to be debited the next payday. The fees on these loans can be a percentage of the face value of the check – or they can be based on increments of money borrowed: say, a fee for every $50 or $100 borrowed. The borrower is charged new fees each time the same loan is extended or "rolled over."

The federal Truth in Lending Act treats payday loans like other types of credit: the lenders must disclose the cost of the loan. Payday lenders must give you the finance charge (a dollar amount) and the annual percentage rate (APR-the cost of credit on a yearly basis) in writing before you sign for the loan. The APR is based on several things, including the amount you borrow, the interest rate and credit costs you are being charged, and the length of your loan.

A payday loan-that is, a cash advance secured by a personal check or paid by electronic transfer is a very expensive credit. How expensive? Say you need to borrow $100 for two weeks. You write a personal check for $115, with $15 the fee to borrow the money. The check casher or payday lender agrees to hold your check until your next payday. When that day comes around, either the lender deposits the check and you redeem it by paying the $115 in cash, or you roll-over the loan and are charged $15 more to extend the financing for 14 more days. If you agree to electronic payments instead of a check, here is what would happen on your next payday: the company would debit the full amount of the loan from your checking account electronically, or extend the loan for an additional $15. The cost of the initial $100 loan is a $15 finance charge and an annual percentage rate of 391 percent. If you roll-over three times, the finance charge would climb to $60 to borrow the $100.

Alternatives to Payday Loans

Before you decide to take out a payday loan, consider some alternatives.

1. Consider a small loan from your Bank. A local community-based organization may make small business loans to people. A cash advance on a credit card also may be possible, but it may have a higher interest rate than other sources of funds: find out the terms before you decide. In any case, shop first and compare all available offers.
2. Shop the credit offer with the lowest cost. Compare the APR and the finance charge, which includes loan fees, interest and other credit costs. You are looking for the lowest APR.
3. Contact your creditors or loan services as quickly as possible if you are having trouble with your payments, and ask for more time. Many will be willing to work with you if they believe you are acting in good faith. The may offer an extension on yours bills; make sure you find out what the charges would be for that service-a late charge, an additional finance charge, or a higher interest rate.
4. Contact your local consumer credit counseling service if you need help working out a debt repayment plan with creditors or developing a budget. Non-profit groups in every state offer credit guidance for no or low cost.
5. Make a realistic budget, including your monthly and daily expenditures, and plan, plan, plan. Try to avoid unnecessary purchases: the costs of small, every-day items like a cup of coffee add up. At the same time, try to build some savings: small deposits do help. A savings account – however modest – can help you avoid borrowing for emergencies. Saving the fee on a $300 payday loan for six months, for example can help you create a buffer against financial emergencies.
6. Find out if you have overdraft protection on your checking account. If you are using most or all your funds in your account regularly and you make a mistake in your account records, overdraft protection can help protect you from further credit problems. Find out the terms of the overdraft protection available to you – both what it costs and what it covers.

The bottom line on payday loans: Try to find an alternative. If you must use one, try to limit the amount. Borrow only as much as you can afford to pay with your next paycheck – and still have enough to make it to next payday.

Oneida One Stop-Westwind gets ready for an Extreme Makeover

Rendition of new and improved One Stop

Oneida One-Stop Westwind was opened in October of 1990 and has served Oneida and supporting communities well over the past 22 years. It is the most profitable of all Oneida Retail locations bringing in approximately $30M in net profit over the years.

In order to better our service to Oneida and surrounding communities, allow for growth, meet industry standards, and make necessary repairs to the site, the location will be closed for a period of at least 10 weeks. April 25 is the last day to shop at the Oneida One-Stop location until it reopens in July. Many of the changes are required to meet state regulations that have changed since the store's opening.

The store will be closing to undergo those major renovations and big changes that will improve the location and bring it into a new era of the convenience store business. The updated location will have a new fueling system placed, a new canopy installed, more green space, and a host of additional improvements inside and outside the store. To meet any fueling needs the following locations are open:

- Oneida One-Stop on Packerland, 3120 S. Packerland Dr., open 24 hrs
- One Stop on Hwy 54, open at 5am

To meet any tobacco needs please visit any of the following sites:

- Oneida Smokeshops located in the Oneida Casinos
- Oneida One-Stops,
- Oneida Smokeshop – Mason conveniently located at the Festival plaza

All are open regular store hours to best meet your needs. Watch for further details on re-opening here in the Kalihwisaks.

Chairman's Corner...

Ed Delgado
Chairman

Shekoli,

When she was 10 years old, Morningstar Skenandore said while crossing the Fox River with tribal elder Yvonne Metiver, "My poor river, look what they've done to you." Today Morning star is a young adult, mother of a very handsome son; Yvonne is still a tribal elder. Most people, Indian and non-Indian, do not eat the fish from the Fox River because the water is polluted.

When the Oneidas came here nearly 200 years ago, the Fox River was clean as we settled around its banks and the banks of Duck Creek. Now, Duck Creek is so polluted that people do not even swim in it. The Oneidas did not pollute the Fox River, nor did we pollute Duck Creek.

Dean Hoegger, President of Clean Water Action Council of Northeastern Wisconsin, in his recent letter in our tribal newspaper, appears to be saying that the Tribe is now a polluter because we own a company that is proposing to build what he calls a "gasification incinerator." Surely, if I would say Dean Hoegger's people polluted the Fox River and Duck Creek, some would say that I would be out of line and I would agree. But the Oneidas are not polluters of our Mother either, and I want Dean Hoegger and his people to know that.

The environment that we all live in, both Indian and non-Indian, is sacred to the Oneidas. The environment is part of who we are, how we pray, and how we conduct ourselves on a daily basis.

The gasification project Mr. Hoegger is concerned about has only gone forward after the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources and the United States Department of Energy has deemed it to be safe for the environment. With the endorsement from those agencies and the Federal government, the project not only would never have reached the construction phase it is now at, but, the Oneida people would never have endorsed it and supported it, because as Oneidas, our Mother remains sacred. It appears that the Oneidas and Mr. Hoegger and his people have something in common after all.

Regarding the people who signed the petition and the residents of the Mather Heights neighborhood, they appear to be concerned that the true environmental facts about the gasification project were not included when the project applied for a conditional use permit. Nothing wrong with that! Better safe than sorry and always better to have healthy children. The Oneida Business Committee is currently in the process of acquiring all the conditional use permits documentation that was submitted to Green Bay City Council. I think all of us want to get all the facts for the betterment of all our communities. I think Dean Hoegger and his people would agree.

Thank You for reading

Sincerely,
Ed Delgado
Oneida Tribal Chairman

OBC Forum...

Vince DelaRosa
Councilman

This has been a wonderful start to spring. It has been great to continue to get out and talk to tribal members and tribal employees over the last few months. There is a spirit of renewal in the community to make things happen and make positive change. Thanks to everyone who has contributed their ideas to the discussion.

DNA Testing – Better Living through Science

I am following-up on a proposal I made some five years ago to the Oneida Health Center and to the Oneida Tribe. The question back then was can DNA assessments targeting gene/nutrient connections actually occur? The answer then and now is yes; DNA testing can be and is being used in this manner.

For many years I have been a proponent of using a form of advance DNA testing to pursue our understanding of potential and/or future health risks due to a lack of nutrients. The goal of this project is to try and enhance the lives of Oneida tribal members by using good science and intuitive nutritional delivery models; I call it better living through science.

The essence of this project comes from inspiring thoughts and techniques using science to help assert a laser approach towards addressing some of our health needs. The idea of accurately utilizing our own DNA, micro-nutrients and good eating habits to reverse some stubborn health trends is truly an inspiring concept for the Oneida people.

Extending the quality of life for all tribal members has continued to be a goal of mine. American Indians (Oneidas) and Alaska Natives are at greater risk for diabetes along with other health concerns. We are spending over $30 million dollars a year on our local self-funded health care costs. The idea that we may be the largest distributing pharmacy of pharmaceuticals in the entire State of Wisconsin should alarm all of us. In Oneida we really should aim our attention at tearing down barriers so we can improve health care for our tribal members; that's my goal here. I look forward to presenting an extensive plan for tribal member review in the near future.

Housing

Substantial work has been done in the housing area since my last Kalihwisaks article. I have continued to work on a proposal to bring not only additional housing opportunities to the reservation but also the opportunity for job creation.

When it comes to housing on the Oneida Reservation, we are embroiled in an ongoing emergency. To help manage the overbearing need for housing for our tribal members I have proposed that a housing plant be built here that will do what we already do, build homes. However, we would be building these homes at an incredible level, while saving costs. Moreover, this plant would operate under the direction of master craftsmen who will guide and teach Oneida Tribal members how to build these homes.

Part of the overall goal is to build top-of-the-line master crafted homes; create new jobs for the Oneida people; and tighten the costs of building new homes, in turn we can service more Oneidas and get more for our money. The proposal will also involve a new housing funding mechanism which will help ensure that we are helping tribal members who desperately need new housing options and assistance.

At a recent ONCOA meeting, I was able to discuss my housing proposal. As a follow up to the ONCOA meeting, I met with GLIS to identify possible LUTU property for a future housing plant. I have also met with the Chief Financial Officer to discuss funding and investment options. Although I am at times frustrated at the slow moving process for getting my housing plan up and operational, I am still optimistic that it will come to fruition in the near future.

Community Development Planning Committee (CDPC)

The CDPC has continued to meet monthly to address a variety of community development projects, initiatives and ideas. We have begun to hold a few very productive and informative work meetings as preparation for future meetings. These meetings have proven to be productive and informative. Some of the topics we have addressed from an overall strategic standpoint have been retail opportunities, the potential of moving the Farmer's Market, and the development of a comprehensive strategic plan to address how tribal buildings are occupied. There is still much work to be done but we have taken positive steps towards planning versus reacting. I'd like to personally thank the Tribal Secretary for taking the initiative to begin these types of discussions.

Policy Update

As a reminder, there will be a public hearing on the Legislative Procedures Act (LPA) Tuesday, April 17th. Comments regarding the LPA can be submitted to the Legislative Reference Office up to 10 business days after the public hearing for consideration. I encourage everyone to review the LPA and look forward to your honest and frank opinions and comments, not only on the LPA, but on all legislation and policy matters my office is working on.

In keeping with my housing initiatives, I have also submitted my recommendations for prioritizing housing related legislation for this term to the CPDC for consideration. As a follow up to that discussion I've submitted a request to the LOC for research and analysis work to begin on a comprehensive housing law.

Some of the other legislative initiatives I have been working on include a new rule making law to compliment the LPA and updating the SEOTS bylaws which has included work with the SEOTS Board and tribal members on amendment recommendations.

Outreach

Since my last article I have visited with seven elders and over twenty other tribal members on a variety of topics. Overall, I have attended more than 35 meetings with entities and tribal members over the last three weeks as follow-ups on policy and governance issues. In particular, the budget meetings have prompted some very good discussions with entities. I thank everyone for their time and attention to detail as we move through the next budget process.

Thank you for your time, and as always, if you need assistance or are interested in any released memos, reports, additional plan information, or would like to join my email list, please feel free to contact my office at 920-869-4426 or through my personal email at oneida2011@yahoo.com

Respectively,
Vince DelaRosa

6. Joint venture to construct homes on Tribal lands

Sponsor: Vince DelaRosa

Motion by Patty Hoeft to send the concept to the CFO to analyze and present a feasibility financial analysis report and his recommendation on how to proceed with this partnership and to report to the Business Committee within 30 days, seconded by Brandon Stevens. Motion carried with one opposition:

Opposed: Vince DelaRosa

For the record: Vince DelaRosa stated I oppose because Congress recognizes, they have for many, many years going back to 2008, that Native Americans are almost twice as likely to live in poverty as the rest of the population. We have a population poverty rate on this reservation that is extraordinarily high. We have people that need housing now. We have folks that are homeless. We have over two hundred people right now, it's been indicated, who are homeless and need housing right now and I know that that number is incrementally way higher. I estimate it to be 50% higher, the hidden homelessness rates that we do not know, so for that I believe that there is some urgency and some need to get moving now.

For the record: Brandon Stevens stated I'm still in favor of this concept and I would like to move it forward in a fast manner but understanding that there are some very technical aspects to this relationship, as far as financially, legally and as far as organizational wide that we need to vet out first before we further go into this venture. Also we need to outline the funds that would allow us to do this venture.

For the record: Melinda J. Danforth stated I support the concept as well. I support Councilman DelaRosa's presentation and information, however without a project plan or without the projected financial project cost I just sincerely cannot enter into a $40,000 contract with a law firm, to move forward a project plan that has no substance to it.

Motion by Melinda J. Danforth to recess until 2:30 p.m., seconded by Brandon Stevens. Motioned carried unanimously

Motion by Paul Ninham to go back into session at 2:35 p.m., seconded by Brandon Stevens. Motion carried unanimously

Public Hearing Notice

11:30 a.m. • Norbert Hill Center, 2nd Floor - (BCCR)

April 26, 2012

Purpose:
Tribal Environmental Response Law

The intent of the Tribal Environmental Response Law is to direct the Environmental Health and Safety Division (Division) to create a Tribal Environmental Response Program (TERP) which will address situations where the discharge or potential discharge of a hazardous substance has occurred and may have contaminated the environment. In order to regulate the identification, investigation and remediation of discharges of hazardous substances, this law:

- Requires individuals who are responsible for or aware of a discharge of a hazardous substance to notify the Division and, in most cases, to be responsible for the remedial action necessary to restore the environment to the condition it was in before the discharge occurred.
- Makes the Division responsible to:
  - o Adopt standards for environmental quality that are protective of public health and the environment. Business Committee approval of these standards is required, except when the standards are consistent with federal standards.
  - o Conduct investigations of sites and facilities that are, or are suspected of being, contaminated from the discharge of a hazardous substance.
  - o Identify parties that are responsible for the clean-up of contaminated sites and facilities.
  - o Require appropriate remedial actions be taken when contaminated sites and facilities are identified.

Public Hearing Process

I. Testimony:

A. Oral: There will be a 5 minute limit for all oral presentations. Each participant is encouraged to provide a written transcript of his/her oral testimony, to be submitted while present at the public hearing or within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the below named individuals.

B. Written: For those who cannot attend the scheduled public hearing or do not plan to speak at the hearing, the Oneida Tribe encourages those to submit written testimony. A maximum of ten (10) pages, doubled spaced, can be submitted within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the Tribal Secretary (Patricia Hoeft) or to the Legislative Reference Office Paralegal, Tonya Boucher, at the Norbert Hill Center, 2nd floor or mail to PO Box 365, Oneida WI 54155.

If you would like to obtain a copy of the above proposed law or have any questions as to the public hearing process you may contact Tonya Boucher at the Legislative Reference Office, via GroupWise tboucher@oneidanation.org Or call 1-800-236-2214 or 920-869-4240. ## Public Hearing Notice

May 1, 2012

Purpose:
Canons of Judicial Conduct Response Law

These Canons are intended to govern the conduct of Judges and Judicial Candidates under the Judiciary Act. These Canons also apply to law clerks, Judiciary staff attorneys, paralegals, court administrators, and others who are in close and constant working relationship with a Judge. The Canons establish overarching principles of judicial ethics; create a base from which all Judges are expected to strive; provide guidance and assist Judges in maintaining the highest standards of judicial and personal conduct; and establish a basis for the regulation of conduct through disciplinary measures. Specifically, the Canons require:

- A Judge to uphold and promote the independence, integrity, competence and impartiality of the Judiciary and avoid impropriety and the appearance of impropriety.
- A Judge's judicial duties to take precedence over all of the Judge's personal and extrajudicial activities, which shall be conducted in such a manner as to minimize the risk of conflicts with the obligations of judicial office.
- A Judge to avoid financial and business dealings that tend to reflect adversely on his or her impartiality or interfere with the performance of his or her judicial responsibilities.
- Judges and Judicial Candidates to affirm and display the respectful integrity and dignity of a person qualified to hold a position on the Judiciary and recommends they refrain from any political activity which might interfere with the performance of his or her judicial duties.

Public Hearing Process

Former Ho-Chunk legislator pleads guilty to bribery

Madison, WI (AP) – A former Ho-Chunk legislator has pleaded guilty to bribery in federal court.

Fifty-three-year-old Clarence Pettibone, of Black River Falls, was accused of supporting Trinity Financial Group for a $250,000 housing study in exchange for a Pontiac Firebird.

Two representatives of Trinity Financial are also charged with bribery conspiracy. They face trial in July in the Western District of federal court. Pettibone was a Ho-Chunk government official from 2000 to 2009. He's facing a maximum 10 years in federal prison when he's sentenced July 11.

The FBI and Internal Revenue Service investigated.

National Guard unit helping farmers in Afghanistan

Madison, WI (AP) – A Wisconsin National Guard unit has taken over the mission of helping farmers in Afghanistan.

The 82nd Agribusiness Development Team is the Wisconsin National Guard's first such unit. It has taken over the mission of improving civilian skills crucial to agricultural success in Kunar Province.

Team commander Col. Darrel Feucht says it has been a long road in assembling the unit and training its members, but it's now ready to provide guidance to the Afghan farming community. The Wisconsin National Guard learned it would get an agribusiness development mission in 2010. The unit trained for 12 months before reporting for active duty in February and completing mobilization training at Camp Atterbury, Ind.

The mission was transferred from the Illinois National Guard in a ceremony last week.

Rising failed drug tests limit employers' hiring options

Manitowoc, WI (AP) – The president of a group that supports Wisconsin's business industry says employers are stymied in the search for skilled workers by failed drug tests.

Wisconsin Manufacturers and Commerce Foundation president Jim Morgan says more companies are drug testing potential employees, especially in manufacturing because of safety issues.

Morgan says the long-term concern for a shortage of skilled workers is causing communities like Manitowoc to address the issue. The coordinator of the initiative Healthiest Manitowoc County 2020, Annie Short, says employers are telling her as many as half of potential employees are failing drug tests. She tells the Manitowoc Herald Times Reporter it seems to be a vicious circle – some people may be using drugs because they're depressed about being unemployed. But, they can't get a job because they can't pass a drug test.

Smithsonian opens new, diverse US history timeline

By Brett Zongker
Associated Press

Washington (AP) – Dorothy's ruby slippers from "The Wizard of Oz" have a new home with a diverse set of artifacts in a new timeline of American history that includes a piece of Plymouth Rock, a slave ship manifest, Alexander Graham Bell's telephone and Kermit the Frog at the Smithsonian Institution.

The National Museum of American History will open the exhibit Thursday featuring iconic objects from pop culture along with items dating to the Pilgrims' arrival in 1620 in Plymouth, Mass. "American Stories" will be a new chronology of U.S. history from the early encounters of Europeans and Native Americans to a Barack Obama campaign button written in Hebrew in the 2008 presidential election.

Dorothy's famed shoes from the 1939 movie will help show the emergence of American pop culture and its significance in forming our shared memories. Mixing items from pop culture into a broader timeline is a big change for the museum. For more than 20 years, the slippers have been shown in a separate gallery of memorable items from the movies and entertainment history. Now they will join other items that explore the nation's founding, growth and reforms, innovations and contemporary society.

"We're so getting away from the time when history was all about white men on horses," said Marc Pachter, the museum's interim director. "This is a broader definition of what is important to remember."

This is the museum's first major exhibit with a Spanish translation, which can be accessed online or with mobile smartphones. The museum also developed a mobile app with fuller descriptions of each object on display in English and Spanish.

Curators also are asking visitors to suggest objects that should be part of the American history collection. They can make suggestions in the exhibit or on the museum's website.

"We know that there are millions of untold American stories out there," Pachter said. "We will never tell them all, but we can do better in the range of what we collect and display."

Near the start of the timeline layout is Plymouth Rock and its mythic place in U.S. history, along with wampum beads made from shells that were prized by American Indians for their value as trading currency. Nearby is Ben Franklin's walking stick and three-piece silk suit worn at the Treaty of Alliance signing with France in 1778 during the Revolutionary War. The suit is on loan from the Massachusetts Historical Association.

An 1830s slave ship manifest from Alexandria, Va., was recently acquired by the museum and is being displayed for the first time. It records the sale of 83 enslaved Americans, their names and their descriptions to bring humanity to the horrors of slavery, said curator Bill Yeingst, who directed the "American Stories" project.

The timeline continues with President Abraham Lincoln's gold pocket watch, an 1864 medal from U.S. Colored Troops, Bell's Big Box Telephone from 1876, a baseball autographed by Babe Ruth around 1929, Jonas Salk's polio vaccine in a vial from the 1950s, Roberto Clemente's batting helmet from the 1960s, and an Apple II computer from the 1980s.

Some of the museum's newest acquisitions expand the diversity of the collection, curators said. There is a prosthetic leg socket from a U.S. soldier wounded in 2003 during the Iraq war. Curators also collected a pink gown from a 2006 Quinceanera, a Latin American tradition of celebrating a girl's 15th birthday as the transition to adulthood. Natalia Flores of Chicago, who is now 20, donated the gown to add a piece of Latina history to the Smithsonian.

"It's my own American story here in America," she said while visiting the museum Wednesday. "It's a representation of many other stories of Latinas."

The museum also is featuring a purse carried by Camilla Gottlieb that was filled with about 250 of her family's life documents as they left their home in Vienna and were taken into concentration camps during the Holocaust. Eventually Gottleib immigrated to the United States. Her family later found the purse in a closet.

A newer relic in the collection isn't so old but is already starting to show its age. The museum acquired a fourth generation iPod in 2004 from a young Washington resident to show the evolution of music technology from the 1950s to the 2000s. Pachter said an iPod from 2004 already is considered "ancient technology" and will have a place at the Smithsonian.

Appeals court hears Arizona tribe's casino project

By Paul Elias
Associated Press

San Francisco (AP) – A federal appeals court on Monday took up an Arizona Indian tribe's complicated legal fight to build a massive casino and resort near a Glendale, Ariz., neighborhood, on property the tribe owns 160 miles from the headquarters of its sprawling reservation.

The three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco gave no hint of how or when it would rule after sharply questioning lawyers on both sides for nearly an hour.

At issue is whether federal law permits the Tohono O'odham Nation to convert property it quietly purchased in 2003 into an Indian reservation, which would strip authority from state and local officials who argue the casino project clashes with zoning and state laws.

The suburban property is in an unincorporated island of Maricopa County and bordered on three sides by the city of Glendale.

Local and state officials argue that the proposed 150,000-square-foot casino will require them to beef up fire, police and other civic requirements in an area not equipped to accommodate a Las Vegas-style resort.

The tribe says it bought the property with congressionally allocated money it was given after a federal government dam caused extensive flooding of the original reservation.

The Department of the Interior declared the Glendale property a reservation in 2010.

The tribe had received $30 million to replace nearly 10,000 acres of ancestral reservation land damaged by the dam.

Glendale, the state of Arizona and another tribe filed a lawsuit to overturn the Department of the Interior decision. Several other tribes submitted so-called friend-of-the-court briefs opposing the casino. A judge last year sided with the Tohono O'odham Nation, which is represented by former U.S. Solicitor General Seth Waxman.

"This is an acre-for-acre replacement that was an Indian reservation even before Arizona was a state," Waxman said. He said Interior Secretary Ken Salazar correctly deemed the land a reservation.

Lawyers for Glendale and tribes opposing the project argued that the Tohono O'odham Nation went "reservation shopping" with the government's money and shouldn't be allowed to turn just any piece of property it purchases into a reservation and then a sprawling casino.

Arizona Solicitor General Dave Cole said allowing the tribe to build a casino within Glendale but denying city, county and state officials any authority over the project makes the concept of local control "nothing more than an illusion."

Woodland Indian Art Show prepares for 6th year

Plans are underway for the 6th annual Woodland Indian Art Show & Market. This will again be held at the Norbert Hill Center, N7210 Seminary Road, Oneida Wisconsin 54155. The Art Market will be officially open on Saturday June 30, 2012 from 11am to 7pm, and on Sunday July 1 from 11am to 4pm.

The Woodland Indian Art Show and Market is designed to promote the expression of Great Lakes and upper North American Indian culture through art. It is a juried art show, and many of the artists have won awards from other art shows around the country. These artists are all story tellers, and help to move along the lessons of their culture to future generations.

Here are some of the winners from the last five years, who you will see at this year's Woodland Indian Art Show and Market.

Gordon M. Coons: Gordon is a member of the Lac Courte Oreilles Band of Ojibway. He works in several mediums to produce his award winning art: waterbased painting, sculpture, and drawing/graphics. Seen here is one of his paintings "Makwa the Healer."

Ken Metoxen or Lahnehtaha.wi: Lahnehtaha.wi is a member of the Oneida Nation in Wisconsin. He is a potter and sculptor, who works with clay and corn husks to create his award winning artwork. Pictured is a traditional Oneida style pot made by coiling clay into the form and then smoothing it down.

Judge asked to resume cleanup of Fox River

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) ~ Federal prosecutors were expected to ask a judge Thursday to restart the cleanup of contaminated sediment from the Fox River in Brown County, a project that could cost more than $1 billion.

Earlier this week, Judge William Griesbach removed Appleton Papers Inc. as a defendant in the lawsuit over who should bear the cost of cleaning toxic chemicals from the lower part of the river. The company, in partnership with NCR Corp., has already spent $300 million to rid the river of sediment contaminated by the discharge of paper-making waste chemicals years ago.

State and federal environmental officials are seeking to speed up the dredging operation, and have asked the judge to force NCR to resume full-scale dredging.

In his ruling Tuesday, Griesbach removed Appleton Papers as a defendant in the lawsuit because he said the company had no direct liability for dumping polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, into the river. NCR and several other parties remain defendants.

Appleton Papers is still responsible for certain indirect costs of remediation.

Appleton Papers and NCR formed a limited partnership that has spent about $315 million so far to have contractors clean the lower Fox River. But the work came to a halt last summer when the companies refused to spend an additional $50 million on dredging last year.

Cleanup was supposed to resume last week, but it was delayed until Griesbach issued his decision.

Appleton Papers was formed in 1978, when it bought the facilities of the former Appleton Coated Paper Co. and the Combined Locks paper mills from NCR. The purchase came well after NCR stopped producing PCB-coated paper, so Appleton Papers had argued it shouldn't be held liable for PCB cleanup costs.

Crane population calls Oneida home

The International Crane Count was Saturday, April 14, 2012. Spotters counted about 250 cranes in Oneida on three sites.

The Crane Count is one of the largest citizen-based wildlife surveys in the world. One of the primary purposes of the Crane Count is to monitor the abundance and distribution of cranes in the upper Midwest. Each year, the Crane Count involves over 3,000 volunteer participants spread over 100 counties in six states (Wisconsin and portions of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, and Minnesota).

Money tips featured at LDF workshops

Tips for managing cash and savings, investing for growth, and preparing for entrepreneurship will be featured at upcoming free workshops on Wednesday April 25th, 2012.

Lac du Flambeau, WI – Zhoonyia Gikendasowin (Money Knowledge) will present an all-day event on Wednesday, April 25th at the Lac du Flambeau Public School in recognition of the Federal Reserve Bank System's National Money Smart Week® (April 21st through the 28th).

Three discussion workshops for adults will be offered from 3:30 to 5 p.m. and again from 5:30 to 7 p.m. The topics are:

- Making A Budget Work For You will offer tools to simplify the challenges of tracking and assessing spending, making financial choices, and saving.
- Investing Your Savings for Growth, presented by Wisconsin Benefit Planning, Inc., will cover understanding and evaluating the choices you have in saving and investing in order to meet your goals.
- Preparing for Entrepreneurship, presented by the Small Business Training Program at Great Lakes Inter-Tribal Council, Inc., is for people thinking of running their own business and will cover the steps it takes to do it successfully.

For children, at both 3:30 and 5:30 p.m., Zhoonyia Gikendasowin will present "The Big Read." Kids will receive a copy of the book "The Berenstain Bears and the Trouble with Commercials," provided by the Wisconsin Department of Financial Institutions. During this workshop, children will read the book together and play several games that teach about money.

A light supper for participants will be available from 5 to 5:30 p.m.

This event is free and open to the public. There will be give-aways, door prizes and raffles. Also available to attendees will be information about organizations that assist community members in locating financial information and business resources.

Zhoonyia Gikendasowin's partners and volunteers have joined together to work as a group to build an economically strong native community by improving the quality of life for all Lac du Flambeau members.

Zhoonyia Gikendasowin also presents a monthly "Lunch and Learn" series of workshops at the Veterans Building on the third Wednesday of each month at noon. Free lunch is provided. Instructional presentations begin at 12:20 and conclude at 12:50 so that attendees can return to work as necessary. Participants can stay and ask questions of our experts until 1:30 p.m. For information about upcoming Lunch and Learn workshop topic presentations, or if you would like to host a session at your workplace, call Jan at 715-588-1060 or Charlie at 715-356-2300.

Public meeting scheduled for WIS 29 improvements in Brown Co.

The Wisconsin Department of Transportation (WisDOT) NE Region office in Green Bay is announcing a public information meeting to discuss WIS 29 improvement project from County U to County FF in Brown County. The meeting is scheduled for Thursday, April 26 from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. at the Hillcrest Elementary School, 4193 Hillcrest Drive in the Village Hobart. A brief presentation has been scheduled for 5:15 p.m.

The Wisconsin Department of Transportation began studying this stretch of highway several years ago, completing a corridor preservation study in 2008. The corridor preservation study identified interchange locations at County VV and County FF. It also recommended building overpasses at County U and at the extension of North Pine Tree Road along with closing the Sunlite Drive and Woodland Road intersection.

Construction funding has been allocated to build the County FF interchange and to close the Sunlite Drive and Woodland Road at-grade intersection. Construction at this interchange is planned to begin in late 2013 and be completed by August 2014.

Construction funds have not yet been allocated for the County VV interchange or the County U and North Pine Tree Road overpasses. To improve safety in the interim, J-turns will be constructed at County VV and County U will be modified to eliminate left turns from County U onto WIS 29 (similar to the County J intersection to the east). Construction is expected to begin on these intersection improvements in early 2013 and be completed by mid summer.

Additionally, WisDOT is evaluating the conceptual plans prepared during the corridor preservation study for the County VV interchange or the County U and North Pine Tree Road overpasses and completing preliminary designs for these interchanges and overpasses. The improvements are being refined to reduce impacts to residential properties, wetlands, and other features along WIS 29. Alternatives have been developed for the County U overpass, for the Milltown Road realignment, and for the North Pine Tree Road extension.

The public is encouraged to attend this meeting. It will be held in an open-house format. Individuals can stop by at their convenience during the meeting, talk with project staff, learn more about the project, review the project displays, and ask questions and share comments.

The hall is wheelchair accessible. Those who are hearing impaired and require an interpreter should contact WisDOT project manager Jeremy Ashauer prior to Friday, April 20. Citizens who are unable to attend the meeting or would like more information can contact Jeremy Ashauer at 1 (920) 492 4165 or by E-mail at jeremy.ashauer@dot.wi.gov

Oneida Farm educates ONES students

The Oneida Nation Farm is deeply concerned about the health of the people in our area. That is why education is of extreme importance to the folks at the Oneida Nation Farm. As diseases continue to spread, and health continues to decline, you will see a change in our views from just eating plain food to eating healthy food. As people start becoming more aware of how they are fueling their human gas tank they will understand the need to eat good healthy food.

With more and more of our youth becoming disconnected with the land, and not understanding the importance of healthy foods, it has never been more important to discover new ways of bringing them back to the earth both physically and spiritually. On April 12th, of this year the Farm and Apple Orchard participated in Youth Day on the Farm. They took thirty-one youth from the Oneida Elementary 6th grade and gave them a 'hands-on' tour of the Oneida Apple Orchard, Buffalo Corral, Oneida Nation Farm and Ver Hasselt Farms LTD.

At the Oneida Nation Farm the youth learned some Veterinarian skills such as what it is like to give an animal a shot by practicing on oranges. They also learned about the importance of computer skills in relation to today's farming, soil testing, nutrient management, and equipment usage and care. They toured the livestock operation as well as the cow/calf operation and some of them were lucky enough to touch a buffalo and see a couple of very young buffalo calves.

The group then had lunch, which was made up of delicious Black Angus burgers right from the Oneida Nation Farm and locally made desserts. After lunch there were informational tables for the youth to visit: the Seymour FFA officers were present, along with representatives from the Farm Service Agency (FSA), UW Extension and Natural Resource Conservation Service.

Officers of the Seymour FFA give a presentation to the visiting Oneida sixth graders during their visit to the Oneida Nation Farm.

This is merely a first step in our effort to get youth re-interested in agriculture and healthy locally produced foods. For more information about the Oneida Nation Farm, Oneida Apple Orchard or other products and services of the Oneida Community Integrated Food System members please go to www.oneidanation.org/ocifs or contact the Farm at 833.7952.

Lotinoshoni Woman of Note: Laura Cornelius Kellogg

Laura Cornelius Kellogg (1880–1947), known as Minnie, was noted for her oratory skills and was a "founder of the Society of American Indians in 1911 and became a national advocate for tribal self-sufficiency. Late in her life, Minnie focused on preservation of the Oneida language and the reacquisition of lost tribal lands," (Washburn Heisey, 2001).

She is a controversial figure in Wisconsin Oneida history, and although she is a definitely a woman of note for what she accomplished and set out to accomplish for the Wisconsin Oneida and other Lotinoshoni nations, that does not mean that one has to agree with what she thought was best for the nation. However, it is enlightening to research her blaze through her works, her words, and learn what she was attempting to establish for her people.

Laura Cornelius Kellogg was known mostly for her interest and leadership in land claims and for her work for that throughout the 1920's as well as for her belief in reviving the Iroquois Confederacy until it encompassed all tribes.

The greatest source to find information that is found readily available about Ms. Kellogg and her efforts in village industrialization is from the book, The Oneida Indians in the Age of Allotment, edited by L. Gordon McLester and Laurence Hauptman. There is a chapter in the book by Patricia Stovey that chronicles the political life and times of Laura, who was also known not only as Minnie, but later called herself "Lolomi." The focus of the chapter was in her beliefs that, although many felt reservations, many of which were based on the make-up of a prison camp, were holding back the progress and independence of native peoples, she felt that reservations were opportunities where modern industrialization, communal ownership for business in both funds and work efforts, "capitalizing on its tribe's expertise, like fishing, herding, or horticulture," (Stovey, 2005, p. 144) would enable the reservation's people, the tribe to function as a business, "to the greatest possible good under our present circumstances" (Stovey, 2005, p.145). We might be reminded of our casinos and how we now fund our independence through business and acknowledge she was a woman before her time. Described as a cyclone by one of her peers, she was a formidable force when it came to sharing her ideas.

An article found online quotes from an original article in the Massena Observer, a newspaper covering the opening of the St. Regis Mohawk School in September of 1937, when the Grand Council of the Iroquois Confederacy met during its opening ceremonies. "Mrs. Laura Cornelius Kellogg, executive secretary of the Six Nations, of Seymour, Wis. A dynamo of driving force, Mrs. Kellogg whipped the program into action, assembled the 30-odd visiting chiefs for the press photographers, and did considerable speaking herself, both in English and Mohawk. Striking American words and phrases occasionally punctuated with her Indian address.

"She said that the League of Nations in Europe did not have the majesty of the Iroquois league of nations and that the basic idea of the Iroquois banding together to prevent future wars, made them the most powerful group in American of that day. She said the ultimate object of the present movement is to revive the Iroquois league of nations until it eventually takes in all tribes…" (Bonaparte, 2005).

No matter if you agreed with her views or admired her for her efforts, Laura Cornelius Kellogg is definitely a person of note and worthy of research to learn more about the history of the Oneida Indians of Wisconsin.

Training Offered to Tribal Employees

In 2011 the Wisconsin Department of Transportation/Wisconsin Tribal Historic Preservation (THPO) training program funded a workshop in monitoring archaeological sites and projects.

There is additional funding for a one day monitor training workshop for each THPO program. This workshop is formatted to train tribal members within each reservation to assist THPO with monitoring responsibilities. The training will cover different types of projects and monitoring techniques, how to document the monitoring episodes, working alongside heavy equipment, and safety issues.

This training workshop will be held at the cultural heritage grounds April 24th for tribal employees, with a limit of 25 participants it was offered to departments that may help with the monitoring in this upcoming construction year.

Lacrosse coach looks to build structure, maximize program

By Travis Cottrell
Kalihwisaks

Lacrosse is one of the United States' fastest growing sports, especially in the amateur ranks. The game's origins belong to early Native Americans and even factors in to parts of Native culture. However, the Oneida high school lacrosse team remained stagnant until recently. But if new head coach Matt Myke has his way the Oneida program will be very respectable very soon.

Myke is originally from Six Nations, Ontario, Canada and has been playing lacrosse since he was five years old. He went on to play college lacrosse in Syracuse, then box lacrosse in a semi-pro league and was good enough to be drafted by the Minnesota Swarm professional team.

"I spent a year with the Minnesota Swarm and then I blew out my knee for the second time and figured the best way to be in the game from then on is to coach," Myke said.

Myke then moved on to coaching the Iroquois Nationals under 19 team.

Having moved to northeast Wisconsin within the past few years Myke looked for an opportunity to offer his knowledge of lacrosse to an area team.

"I moved here a few years ago and recently got married, had a baby, and bought a house here so I was settled here. After being around a few years I learned there was an all-native high school lacrosse team, I knew then that I wanted to come here and help the boys," said Myke.

He then was able to secure the head coaching position for the Oneida Thunderhawks lacrosse team. The first thing Myke looked to improve was the program's structure or lack thereof.

"I noticed when I first arrived that the program didn't really have any structure. We have all this talent here because we are just born with that talent for the game. I just saw a lot of raw talent that needed to be molded and given direction and structure," Myke said.

Coaching three attributes that benefit not only the players' lacrosse game, but also their character as young men creates this structure.

"I've always coached with the motto Heart, Work Ethic, and Desire. Those three things, no matter what you apply it to, will always go you good. Those three things will eventually build your character; in lacrosse character is what wins championships," said Myke.

Myke also believes that by demanding the best of the players on the field and in the classroom will greatly improve the student-athletes and the program.

"I want to recognize their abilities and push them to their max. So I'm not just teaching them basic things; I'm teaching them at a college lacrosse level and they're soaking it up like a sponge," Myke added.

The change in team philosophy has gotten the players attention.

"There is definitely a different style of play this year but its good to be learning how big time lacrosse players play the game. But it is also harder work but we are better in games," said Oneida junior Diego Metoxen.

Fellow junior Devonte Pointer also added, "Practices are more focused. We don't just run around and play like a gym class, we learn the right roles each position has to play."

Myke cites his history of playing for great coaches growing up as his reason for many of his highest moments in life. They taught him to always reach for your highest potential and that is what he would like to pass on to his players.

Oneida Thunderhawk head coach Matt Myke (seen in the black jacket) goes over game strategy during Oneida's win over the Menasha Blue Jays.

"When I coach I always reach for the highest goal possible. My first goal is to make this year the best year possible so that we can join a league and stay on top of that league. Be one of the teams that are on top of this area. As far as we can go and as high as we can go that's always my goal," Myke said.

Oneida Police Officer Matthew Ninham also volunteers his time as assistant coach.

The Oneida Thunderhawks next game will be played on Monday, April 23, 2012 at 5:00pm against the Green Bay Metro lacrosse team. The game will be played at the Metro's home field, which is located behind Lombardi Middle School.

TRIAD Program Enhanced with Nutrition Classes

Good News! Oneida Diabetes Team is proud to announce enhancements made to the TRIAD Program. The TRIAD program is a structured exercise program for patients diagnosed with diabetes on behalf of collaboration between the Oneida Community Health Center Diabetes Team, Health Promotion Disease Prevention Department, and Oneida Family Fitness.

To improve participant success, Registered Dietitian and Certified Diabetes Educator, Betty Schwantes will be providing monthly nutrition classes at Oneida Family Fitness Education Room, covering the following topics:

1. Carbohydrate Counting/Plate Method,
2. Label Reading,
3. Navigating the Grocery Store, and
4. Sports Nutrition for Diabetes.

Beginning May 1, 2012, TRIAD program participants will be required to attend the group nutrition classes within 12 months. A $25 Oneida Retail Gift Card will be offered to those who attend at least one nutrition class every 3 months. Stay tuned for informational flyers with dates and times.

For more information, please contact Margaret VanDen Heuvel, Diabetes Program Supervisor, at (920) 869-4941.

Oneida Family Wellness Fair held

By Yvonne Kaquatosh
Kalihwisaks

The Spring Into Action Family Wellness Fair was held on Saturday, April 14th at the Oneida Family Fitness (OFF) Center. There were a wide variety of wellness services and educational booths set up to gather informative materials from.

The fair kicked off with a lively low impact class.

Other on hands services that community members could participate in included, wall climbing, walking, either on the track or outside, as well as yoga and spin demos.

The weather couldn't be more perfect for outside activities geared for the young and young at heart. In addition to the physical offerings, there were more relaxing options for the taking, such as massages, Reiki, Jin Shin Jyutsu, and card reading. Stress Management, Aromatherapy and Herbs and a Mary Kay Cosmetic booth were also set up at the event.

Healthy nutritious snacks were also provided.

The event was part of the ongoing Just Move It Oneida campaign. The next event will take place on May 16, 2012 at OFF and will be in observance of the National Employee Health & Fitness campaign.

Information for patients who utilize OCHC On-Call Nurse

Registered Nurses (RN) are available for patient phone calls – 24 hours a day/7days a week. When the clinic is closed the RN is home. They do not have access to medical records or pharmacy information.

When to call and speak with the RN After Clinic Hours:

- You/your child have an urgent health care need/question that cannot wait until the next open day of the clinic.
- Don't call the RN when you are having a life threatening issue. For example, chest pain, difficulty breathing, or bleeding profusely from a wound. Access the nearest emergency department to get medical attention as soon as possible. Call 911 as needed for intervention. Call the Contract Health Services Department to report the visit within 72 hours to ensure coverage.
- The RN's on call also work 40+ hours per week at the OCHC medical clinic, in addition to providing on call services. Calling in the middle of the night with a concern that is not urgent is not appropriate.
- On call staff does not determine Contract Health eligibility. You need to contact the Contract Health Department when the clinic reopens to check on eligibility.

Exhibit examines portrayal of American Indians

By Chuck Haga
The Grand Forks Herald

Grand Forks, N.D. (AP) – A child's bowl decorated with Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck as Indians.

An ad for Chief Oshkosh Beer.

The exhibit at UND's Memorial Student Union, part of the annual Time Out dedicated to Indian culture, history and traditions, is Richie Plass' way of speaking out on a long-running dispute over how Indians are portrayed.

"It's the good, the bad and the ugly of how our names and images have been used and are being used," he said Tuesday as he unpacked hundreds of photographs, posters, children's toys, paintings and other artifacts.

The "good" include a photograph of four generations of an Oneida Indian family, "just being people," and a famous poster showing Geronimo and three other defiant Apache Indians, armed with rifles. "Homeland Security," the poster is titled. "Fighting terrorism since 1492."

The "bad" include

Family competes in MX race series

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

Twice a month April through September Jerry Blascyk and Nancy Skenandore load up multiple dirt bikes, gas, tools, and equipment along with Nancy's three kids Zack, JD, and Taylor and take to the woods and fields of the state to compete in the Wisconsin MX Race Series.

Wisconsin MX has multiple classes separated by skill and age. It offers motocross along with wood courses. Zack, 26, raced in the B class last season, JD, 23, raced in the A class and Taylor, 16, raced in the woman's class. Jerry also races periodically in the 50 and over division.

All had success as Zack placed second in his class, JD finished fourth, Taylor also placed second and Jerry won his division.

Taylor was quick to point out the Jerry often finishes faster than his younger racers.

"He's faster than some of the (Class) C guys," she said.

The three siblings credit Jerry as the reason for the family's love of racing.

"I've been racing since I was 18, quit when I was 30 and started up again at 52 when I found out they had a grandpa's division," said Blascyk. "I pretty children's plastic hatchets, multi-colored "feather" bonnets and cowboys-and-Indians lunch boxes - and high school banners urging the hometown Indians to "scalp" their opponents.

Plass has taken his collection "from Long Island to California," asking people to study the images and think about what they say. He said he was eager to come to Grand Forks.

"This is the eye of the storm here," he said, "with everything that's gone back and forth with the Fighting Sioux."

Of the much-loved, much-disputed logo, he said: "I think it's very stereotypical."

Plass was invited to UND by the Indian Student Association. While some Indian students support the name or say they don't care, others have actively opposed it. Several have sued in federal court demanding that it be dropped.

The exhibit, in the union's Badlands Room, will be on display through Friday.

"Look at this," Plass says, approaching a photograph of the 1999 Kansas City Chiefs pro football team.

The players wear Indian dress and carry shields, rifles and knives. The photo is titled "The Tribe," and each player is identified by an Indian name. The late star linebacker Derrick Thomas is listed as Chief Iron Eyes.

"Not a one of them is Indian," Plass said.

Another poster has been part of the national movement against Indian-based nicknames for many years. It shows team banners, all but one fake: New York Fighting Jews, Chicago Blacks, San Antonio Latinos, San Francisco Orientals, St. Paul Caucasians and Washington Redskins.

"It's our 'n-word,'" Plass said of the Redskins name.

Jaydecq Serich, 21, a UND junior from Grand Rapids, Minn., was one of the first visitors Tuesday.

She is Ojibwe on her mother's side and feels torn by the debate over the Fighting Sioux. "I have mixed feelings because you have the school pride but you also have your own traditions," she said.

"The logo is always being tossed back and forth. I can see where both sides are coming from, but I'm thinking it might be time to change."

Plass, 60, operates www.changingwinds.org, a clearing house for people, schools and organizations working against the use of Indian names and logos.

The Sioux-Bison cartoon is the only Fighting Sioux item he has, "but hopefully this week I'll be able to take some more stuff home with me," he said.

Some visitors tell him they disagree with his theme, or they say some uses of Indian imagery are sincere and honoring. He will engage critics and persuade some but not others, he said. "Sometimes they'll say, 'I think I understand better now where you are coming from.'"

Where he started from, he said, is a school gym in Shawano, Wis., where in 1968 the Shawano High Indians basketball team stormed onto the floor led by a boy in buckskin and feathers, dancing as a representative of the local Menominee tribe. There's a picture of the mascot from an old newspaper clipping.

The mascot was Plass.

"The principal and the basketball coach asked me to dress up and lead the team out," he said. "I said, 'No, we don't do that stuff for show.' But they told me to talk to my parents about it."

His parents suggested he talk with other members of the tribe, and they told him to consult an elder.

The man said, "They want a show? Give them a show. Just don't wear anything sacred."

The first time he dressed and danced as an Indian and led his team out, the response was good, Plass said. "There were a lot of people from the reservation there. I went over and shook my dad's hand and gave my mother and grandma a kiss."

But when he went with the team to a game in another town, "the whole gym laughed at me, and I freaked out," he said. "People whooped and yelled things and threw paper cups and popcorn.

"I was in tears, and I said 'No more.' From then on, I wanted to tell people that we are more than beads and feathers. We're doctors, teachers, entertainers, truck drivers. We are people, and there is no honor in being laughed at."

His personal mascot experience was good, bad and ugly, he said. He learned from it and took direction from it.

"I've never felt any anger about that," he said. "But over the years, I've felt tons and tons of shame."

Great Lakes Region Tribal Foods Summit

Oneida hosted the Great Lakes Region Tribal Food Producer Summit April 23-24 at the Oneida Radisson Conference Center. The summit brought together tribal food producers from Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota to learn about each other's operations and create partnerships. Approximately 40 to 50 people attended representing the summit and discussed topics such as the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), marketing agriculture products, and indigenous seed preservation.

Community input sought in naming of structure, roads in Oneida

The Oneida Nation owns the following properties and, the Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input to name the following:

1. Oneida Residential Community Care Center – Building

The Oneida Residential Community Care Center is being built adjoining the Lee McLester, III Complex on South Overland Drive. Once ORCCC is completed, the residents at the Anna John Nursing Home will move into the new center. The Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input with the name of the building.

Original allottee:
Baptist King

2. Valley Green Housing Project – Roads

The Green Valley housing project on Florist Drive will be adding some tribal roads that will connect to Florist Drive, Valley Drive and Henry Street. The Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input with naming the potential roads.

Original allottees:
William Powless, Lewis Elm, Kate Elm & Peter Hill

3. Little Bear Development Center Conference Room

The Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input to approve the naming of the conference room in the Little Bear Development Center. Naming of a room is less formal than the naming of a road or building, so the Land Commission has been approached by the Planning Department to name the conference room The Ernest Stevens, Sr. Conference Room. If there are no strong objections received, the Commission will name the room by resolution.

Original allottee:
John Reid

All written recommendations will be submitted to the Division of Land Management. Tribal departments are encouraged to submit three names. Three recommendations will be presented to the Land Commission for final selection. The name selected will be translated into the Oneida Language through Land Commission resolution.

Submissions should include:
- Property to be named
- Location
- Recommended Name
- Reason
- Date
- Your Name or Department Name
- Tribal Enrollment number

Please submit recommendations in writing to:

All submissions are due by May 11th, 2012.

Farmers' Market Vouchers for 2012: Do You Qualify?

Farmers' Market Nutrition Program (FMNP)

These are vouchers usually totaling $25 to be used at participating Wisconsin Farmers Markets or stands.

We do not get enough vouchers for all the eligible seniors in Brown County–only enough for about 10% of those eligible.

On Tuesday, Maya 1, we will begin a list of reservations for vouchers. We will take names until we reach 584. If you qualify and want to be on the list, call 920-448-4300 beginning May 1. (Names will not be taken prior to that date.) You must call even if you live in a senior housing unit where the vouchers are usually delivered. Be prepared to provide us with the following information:

First and Last Name, Date of Birth, Address with apartment number, City, Zip code and Telephone Number.

Clarification: You must sign up each year – You are not automatically on the list just because you've gotten the vouchers in previous years.

To qualify for these vouchers, you must meet the following requirements:
1. Live in Brown County;
2. Be age 60 or older (55 if Native American); and

Metoxen, Jonas

May 19, 1938 – April 19, 2012

Jonas Metoxen, Jr, age 73, of Oneida and formerly of Chicago, passed away on April 19, 2012. He was born May 19, 1938 to the late Jonas, Sr. and Mamie (Doxtator) Metoxen in Neenah.

Jonas enlisted in the US Navy in 1955. Following discharge from the Navy he married Allyson and she preceded him in death.

As a longtime resident of Chicago, Jonas was a Cubs and Bears fan and was well known for his dry sense of humor.

Jonas and Allyson had no children, but he deeply adored all of his nieces and nephews as if they were his own children. He is survived by his two sisters: Laverne Petrouskas, Green Bay; Thelma Van Sleet, Chicago; and several nieces and nephews.

In addition to his parents and wife, he was preceded in death by several brothers, sisters, and other relatives.

Friends may have called Muehl-Boettcher Funeral Home, Seymour, on Sunday, April 22, 2012 from 12 noon until services at 2 PM with Deacon Bobby Doxtator officiating and the Oneida Hymn Singers performing. Burial took place at Holy Apostles Cemetery, Oneida.

Online condolences may be expressed at www.muehlboettcher.com

Ongoing Kalihwisaks Column • *Providing a connection to the past

The Women's Softball Team was transported about in C47s—a basic work horse carrier with seats along the sides and very noisy. We all wore parachutes, stood under the wings for briefing before taking off, but never had to jump.

This plane and B25s were used for training purposes also—to check out the equipment we were to maintain.

The orders that I received in November after graduation stated that my next tour of duty would be at Buzzards Bay, Massachusetts. I spent a lot of time wondering what godforsaken place that might be.

I left for Oneida on a train called "The Hummingbird" in November, 1951. One of the things I ordered to eat in the dining car was grits. I've eaten them ever since.

I changed trains in Chicago. There were many, many sailors in the station singing a popular song—something about "her hair hung down in ring-a-lets". Anyway, it sounded pretty good.

I stayed home on the farm for a few days before leaving for Massachusetts. My real destination was Otis Air Force Base in the Eastern Air Defense Command, some twenty miles from Buzzards Bay.

There were two WAF's (Womens Air Force) barracks at Otis—wooden double story affairs. I shared a room with another WAF. Here, we had tile floors instead of wooden ones, which had to be waxed and shined every Friday.

The Mess Hall was about half a block away. I had KP (Kitchen Police) quite often because we rotated this duty. There were so few women compared to the men that our turns rotated much faster than theirs. I sometimes had to pull KP with the prisoners. I wasn't allowed to talk to them and guards were standing by with their weapons.

The 564th Field Maintenance Shop was next to the runway and hangars. I was very quickly promoted to the NCOIC (Non Commissioned Officer In Charge) of the Airborne Radar Shop for the 58th and 59th Fighter Squadrons and the Base Operations planes, also some jet trainers.

The planes were F86Ds and F94Cs. I was 19 years old and supervised 23 Airmen, all of whom were older than I was. I was also inspector of all the radar on that base. I taught electronics and my specific equipment to all the Radio and Radar Technicians in our shop.

One of my students, Sergeant Shirley, was at Hickam Air Field in Hawaii when attacked by the Japanese on December 7, 1941. He was in the service longer than I was old.

On Good Friday, 1952, the Eastern Air Command Inspectors, having completed their inspections, had just lifted off the end of the runway when two jet training planes came out of the low hanging clouds and broadsided the C47.

All three planes crashed to the earth into the pine and scrub oak. There were no survivors.

Before I knew about the disaster, I saw an orange parachute with something attached drifting eerily along overhead.

My job relative to that event was to remove the equipment I was responsible for and tag it. There were parts of human beings in it that had to be dealt with.

Two incidents happened which were not anticipated and were problematic.

The Armament Shop failed to disarm one of the fighters before servicing in the hangar. It only takes 1.5 volts of static electricity to fire off the pod rockets under the F86 wings—and fire off they did, while inside the hangar.

Someone had also neglected to hook up the ground connections. The end result was that the rockets went through the hangar walls and lobbed over to the end of the runway and set the woods on fire. That created a lot of excitement for one day.

On another occasion, one of the Radar Technicians that I was responsible for entered the cockpit of a plane to be serviced. He needed to push the switches to disconnect the power to the equipment to be removed. Pushing the wrong switches, he jettisoned 400 gallons of JP 4 (fuel) on the hangar floor.

He and I had a heated discussion over that but no disciplinary action was taken.

Follow Me Jeeps were utilized to direct pilots after landing.

A job given to me was to transfer all the radio stuff from a Jeep to a pickup truck. I had to cut out the firewall and build the entire wiring system and install it.

Bio: Raised on a farm in Oneida. Graduated Seymour High School, 1950, Ex Airborne Radar Technician, USAF during Korean War, Mother of six children and seven stepchildren, widow of Floyd Metoxen, Historian – 15 years, on Business Committee from 1967 to 1996.

Thank You

Dear Onʌ́ yote? akʔʌ́ Community,

We would like to Thank everyone for all of their Love and Support you have showed our family. We are forever in debt to our family, friends, and community for all their support during these trying times. We can't thank everyone enough for their prayers and donations. Your generosity helps us out greatly by allowing my wife and I to stay by Drew's side. You have no idea how much it means to us that we are so appreciated by our community. Please keep in your prayers the other Oneida families that have been here at the Children's Hospital of Milwaukee as we have run across a couple of other families.

We have been down here in Milwaukee for over 2 months now being by Drew's side as he improves little day by day. His progress is going in the right direction and has surprised all his doctors. We finally had the chance to really hold him just about 2 weeks ago. You never know how much you miss the little things like holding him, hearing him cry, or just opening his eyes to look at you, we take for granted every day. He has a long road to recovery ahead of him and is taking it one day at a time as the doctors get him healthy for his next heart surgery.

Everyday Drew fights for his life and will probably have to for the rest of his life. We look at Drew every day and thank the Creator that he gives us another day with him. The truth of it all, he has made such a huge impact on all of us and we aren't even aware of it. He has touched our lives by bringing this community together and the importance of what it means to be Oneida and be in this community. People we don't know, have asked about Drew, ask how he is doing, and pray for him.

We would like to specially thank everyone who helped and donated to the fund raisers held by our family and friends; Credit Card Concepts, D.King of Images, Oneida Retail, Oneida Tourism, Oneida Farm, Finance Committee, Oneida Community Support, Paul and Jill Ninham, and Rising Nation Motorcycle Club. We apologize if we have missed anyone.

Again, Thank you for everything, we are truly blessed to live in this community!

Anna John rating

The Anna John Nursing Home Board would like to congratulate the staff and volunteers on their Five Star rating. Facilities are assigned star ratings from a low of one star to a high of five stars based on health inspection surveys from the state, staffing information and quality of care measures. We deeply appreciate their hard work and dedication to the people who are in their care. Only 15% of the facilities in the state of Wisconsin received a five star rating.

Thanks again to Jane Smith and her staff and all of the people who work at Anna John Nursing Home.

Returning Home

Shekoli,

I just finished reading a letter from a brother named Willie Adams. I would like to say thank you to him, that was a well thought out letter!

It really hits home for me. I'm also in prison, Waupun. I am soon to be released.

I moved off the rez to Milwaukee in 1978. Now I'm 42 years young and want to move back to the Oneida rez.

I wrote to Oneida Housing and was told they don't rent to convicted felons. Also, my mother wants to move back, but I wouldn't be able to live with her either, wow!

So I'm asking is there any Oneida help out there for one of the lost people looking to come home?

James Bardo

Re-Entry Program

My name is Lukas John Brenneman, I am twenty years old serving a fourteen month prison sentence. As an enrolled Oneida Tribal member, I try to keep up to date with the Oneida family.

I was reading the April 5 Kalihwisaks and came across an article which touched me deeply. The article was from an Oneida incarcerated felon, like myself, how he was looking for help in his life upon release.

I can empathize with him because I, too, will be released soom from here with nothing.

I came to the conclusion that maybe our Oneida Nation could form a Transitional Living Program (TLP) to help our men and women get back on our feet once released.

This re-entry program would help with housing, financial budgeting, transportation, food pantry, as well as spiritual healing so each year we can decrease the number of our members until we are at zero!

I myself would volunteer and strongly support this program because I not only love our family, but I understand how it feels to need a helping hand.

Dwah wah jee lie.

Sincerely,
Lukas Brenneman

Family fun at heart of couple's volunteerism

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

Steve and Holly Webster wanted a safe, family-orientated activity to be an option for families in the Green Bay area so they took on the challenge of re-opening the St. Mary's Roller Rink in 2009.

The rink, located at 1265 Cass Street in Green Bay, operated for private skating charters when the Websters took over management in 2004.

"The roller rink was closed for a while by the diocese because of liability reasons. The lady who had taken over got sick and she asked us to help out for the rest of the season. We just couldn't see it close," said Holly.

With exposure of the rink increasing, its popularity and use is expanding.

"It's growing. Now that people know we're there we are getting a lot more schools, scout groups and youth groups here. It's nice," added Holly.

Family fun is the name of the game the Websters are trying to push with the rink.

"It's so nice to see the two-year-old trying to skate with their 10-year-old sibling. That's been really encouraging," said Holly.

> "It's nice knowing the kids are in a safe environment…we try to keep it very family oriented."
> – Steve Webster

"It's nice knowing the kids are in a safe environment without an opportunity to act out," added Steve. "We try to keep it very family orientated."

That even means the couple is very selective when it comes to the music they play.

"We're very picky about that," said Holly.

"It may have clean lyrics but the meaning behind them are horrid," said Steve.

The Websters have an emotional tie to the rink that may keep them there for the long haul.

"We met there a long time ago," said Steve.

"We met here March 13, 1993. We were married in 1997 and we even had our wedding reception here," Holly quickly added.

Steve and Holly are working on promoting the open skating sessions with the hope of cutting down on the need to host private parties

"It is a lot easier to have 150 skaters here for open skating than having to get ready for multiple private parties in one day," Holly said.

Cost to skate is $4 with a family max of $20. The rink offers food, drinks and skate rental.

For more information and a rink schedule visit www.stmaryoftheangelsbg.org or email the Websters at webster3sha@yahoo.com.

With nearly eight years under their belt as rink managers Steve and Holly have no plans of leaving.

"This place means a lot to us," said Holly.

"I have a feeling we will be there for a while yet," added Steve.

From 1A/Dirt Bikes

much started this for these guys."

The family welcomes and almost laughs off the challenges wood riding delivers.

"There's all different types of terrain," said JD. "You got to pay attention. Sometimes you're flying through a narrow trail at maybe 20 miles per hour."

The roughly five mile courses test the rider's stamina along with their nerves. They go through woods, fields, over boulders and through rivers and streams.

"Trails are cut just about as wide as your handle bars then they will let you relax through a hayfield, speed just depends on the track," said Blascyk.

"It's a workout for sure, after a race you don't want to do anything but lay on the ground," said Zack.

Tight spaces along with the element of surprise means many bumps and bruises for the riders, sometimes worse.

"You get a lot of branches cracking against your legs," said Blascyk. "Nothing happens to me now because I go to slow but when I was younger I busted my collarbone two or three times and ruptured my spleen."

"(I had a) knee injury, not sure how, all I know is I had a branch in the back of my leg but I was basically going too fast," said Zack.

"I had a concussion and broke my back," JD quickly added to not be outdone.

Not only do their bodies take a beating but also their bikes are often in need of care.

"Each of us has gone through about three bikes during our time," said JD. "If you want to stay competitive you need to keep up with everyone else."

The series does have a laid back family feel that the group enjoys but they sometimes wonder what keeps bringing them back.

"Boy did we have fun. We spent $200 on gas, $300 to enter, my wheels are bent up and my back hurts. Now let's go home," said Blascyk. "But, we always end up back."

Oneida Employee Advocacy

The Legal Resource Center (LRC) is an employment advocacy office for Oneida tribal employees of the Program (non-Gaming) side who have received disciplinary action, and a legal aid service for tribal members who have individual legal issues.

Program side employees may request assistance from the LRC with the appeal process.

If you feel that you have been unfairly disciplined by your supervisor, call the LRC department and make an appointment with one of the certified paralegals who are experienced and knowledgeable in Oneida employment laws. It is important that you don't delay after receiving a disciplinary action, as you only have ten (10) business days to file an appeal. The paralegals will meet with you and review all your documentation to determine the pertinent facts and analyze the issues. They will review the law and precedent cases to determine the strategy of your case. The paralegals and the supervising attorney will meet to discuss and brain storm possible defenses. The paralegals may also attempt to mediate the matter before it goes to litigation (court) by contacting your supervisor and/or area manager, to work toward an amicable settlement, if that is possible.

There is no charge for this tribally sponsored service.

Please call Donna at the LRC for more information or to make an appointment at:
(920) 496-5310.

The LRC is here in Oneida for tribal members who need to discuss their legal problems, receive legal advice or representation in local courts.

SD reservation radio station to fix wind turbine

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) ~ A wind turbine near Porcupine is being rebuilt to power a radio station on the Pine Ridge reservation.

The Rapid City Journal reports that the wind turbine was supposed to power the KILI radio station but broke down shortly after it was built in 2008.

It was meant to be part of a pilot project showing how wind turbines can save money and power small buildings. But the brakes and control panel on the turbine didn't work right, and before KILI ever took control of the turbine, the gearbox broke, said Tom Casey, a co-manager of the station.

"We got into this because it would be nice to be a role model and show people renewable energy is possible on a small scale," Casey said. "If there's a wind turbine that's available and steady and you can count on and can contribute to electrical use at the station, that would be fantastic."

Officials said it should be rebuilt and running again by the end of the summer.

The wind turbine was the first one installed on the reservation.

KILI's light bill was between $1,200 and $1,500 per month in 2008 and has nearly doubled since then to $2,500 per month, Casey said. The 2008 turbine, which was purchased used from a Montana-based engineering firm, was designed to produce 65 kilowatts of electricity.

Honor the Earth, the company spearheading the project, initially thought the turbine would produce enough energy to power the station with some left over, but by the time the project was finished, it filled only about 40 percent of the station's needs, Casey said. At that point, he was worried it would cost more than it was worth to maintain and insure.

"When you're driving around and see one of the wind turbines, they're like 200 feet high, and they're majestic, and they move," he said. "You don't understand until one is in your yard that it's a machine with moving parts and it needs to be maintained."

Since the turbine broke down, Honor the Earth has been in negotiations with the Minnesota company that supplied the original turbine, said Winona LaDuke, chief executive officer of the Minnesota-based Native American organization that helps organize and raise money for Native American sustainable food and energy projects.

Grant Street at US 41 in Brown County closing to traffic April 30

Underpass closing for 30 days for construction of US 41 bridges

Green Bay, WI – The Wisconsin Department of Transportation (WisDOT) Northeast Region is announcing the closure of Grant Street, between Mid Valley and Lawrence drives in Brown County, starting at 7 a.m. Monday, April 30. The continuous closure remains in place through Wednesday, May 30 and motorists are strongly encouraged to consider alternative routes.

The closure is needed to permit better access to the underpass, where the inside portion of two bridges and retaining walls are being constructed to carry north and southbound US 41 traffic over Grant Street. While Grant Street is closed Main Avenue, Mid Valley Drive, Lawrence Drive and Scheuring Road will remain open at all times.

All lane restrictions are weather-dependent and subject to change.

US Department of Labor releases proposed tribal consultation policy

Interested parties may submit comments through June 18

WASHINGTON – The U.S. Department of Labor today published in the Federal Register a proposed tribal consultation policy, which encompasses the agency's programs impacting tribal communities. A comment period will end June 18.

"The development of the Labor Department's tribal consultation policy honors the relationship between the Native American community and the U.S. government, thanks to the president's leadership calling for ongoing engagement with tribal nations and communities," said Secretary of Labor Hilda L. Solis.

On Nov. 9, 2009, President Obama cited Executive Order 13175, which was issued by President Clinton, tasking executive branch departments and agencies with engaging tribal nations to formalize federal programs that impact tribal communities.

Following the president's charge, the Department of Labor began devising a plan. A series of consultative listening sessions, including meetings with representatives of the Native American community, the department's Native American Employment and Training Council, and the National Congress of American Indians, preceded the finalization of the tribal consultation policy proposed today.

After the comment period concludes, the department will evaluate comments for prospective changes to the policy. To view the proposal and submit comments, visit http://www.federalregister.gov/a/2012-09372.

Public Hearing Notice

11:30 a.m. • Norbert Hill Center, 2nd Floor - (BCCR)

April 26, 2012

Purpose:
Tribal Environmental Response Law

The intent of the Tribal Environmental Response Law is to direct the Environmental Health and Safety Division (Division) to create a Tribal Environmental Response Program (TERP) which will address situations where the discharge or potential discharge of a hazardous substance has occurred and may have contaminated the environment. In order to regulate the identification, investigation and remediation of discharges of hazardous substances, this law:

- Requires individuals who are responsible for or aware of a discharge of a hazardous substance to notify the Division and, in most cases, to be responsible for the remedial action necessary to restore the environment to the condition it was in before the discharge occurred.
- Makes the Division responsible to:

o Adopt standards for environmental quality that are protective of public health and the environment. Business Committee approval of these standards is required, except when the standards are consistent with federal standards.
o Conduct investigations of sites and facilities that are, or are suspected of being, contaminated from the discharge of a hazardous substance.
o Identify parties that are responsible for the clean-up of contaminated sites and facilities.
o Require appropriate remedial actions be taken when contaminated sites and facilities are identified.

Public Hearing Process

I. Testimony:

A. Oral: There will be a 5 minute limit for all oral presentations. Each participant is encouraged to provide a written transcript of his/her oral testimony, to be submitted while present at the public hearing or within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the below named individuals.

B. Written: For those who cannot attend the scheduled public hearing or do not plan to speak at the hearing, the Oneida Tribe encourages those to submit written testimony. A maximum of ten (10) pages, doubled spaced, can be submitted within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the Tribal Secretary (Patricia Hoeft) or to the Legislative Reference Office Paralegal, Tonya Boucher, at the Norbert Hill Center, 2nd floor or mail to PO Box 365, Oneida WI 54155.

Public Hearing Notice

11:30 a.m. • Norbert Hill Center, 2nd Floor - (BCCR)

May 1, 2012

Purpose:
Canons of Judicial Conduct Response Law

These Canons are intended to govern the conduct of Judges and Judicial Candidates under the Judiciary Act. These Canons also apply to law clerks, Judiciary staff attorneys, paralegals, court administrators, and others who are in close and constant working relationship with a Judge. The Canons establish overarching principles of judicial ethics; create a base from which all Judges are expected to strive; provide guidance and assist Judges in maintaining the highest standards of judicial and personal conduct; and establish a basis for the regulation of conduct through disciplinary measures. Specifically, the Canons require:

- A Judge to uphold and promote the independence, integrity, competence and impartiality of the Judiciary and avoid impropriety and the appearance of impropriety.
- A Judge's judicial duties to take precedence over all of the Judge's personal and extrajudicial activities, which shall be conducted in such a manner as to minimize the risk of conflicts with the obligations of judicial office.
- A Judge to avoid financial and business dealings that tend to reflect adversely on his or her impartiality or interfere with the performance of his or her judicial responsibilities.
- Judges and Judicial Candidates to affirm and display the respectful integrity and dignity of a person qualified to hold a position on the Judiciary and recommends they refrain from any political activity which might interfere with the performance of his or her judicial duties.

Public Hearing Process

OCAP proves to be successful

In the fall of 2005, the Oneida Compliance Assistance Program (OCAP) was started with a grant from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). The grant is a Direct Implementation Cooperative Agreement (DITCA) and provides funding to assist EPA implement federal underground storage tank (UST) regulations on the Reservation by providing compliance assistance to owners of UST. The UST inspection process is required by the EPA's Federal Energy Policy Act of 2005 that regulates UST's in Indian Country.

OCAP's ability to provide compliance assistance was improved when a partnership was developed with Oneida Retail Enterprise from 2007 to 2010. During that time, the fuel manager, Mr. Shawn Suri guided the program development with his knowledge of fuel system operation, design and monthly maintenance experience gained while serving in the United States Air Force as a Fuels Journeyman. This greatly increased the quality and level of assistance that could be provided.

OCAP has since developed into a nationally recognized Tribal UST program. It is a resource for both Tribal and non-tribal business partners for ensuring UST compliance within the Reservation. Resources such as "Compliance Assistance Handbook", bi-monthly newsletters, technical assistance and petroleum spill kits have been provided to facilities within the Reservation and the other eleven Wisconsin tribes. The states of Wisconsin and Maine, the city of North Platte, Nebraska, and several Tribal nations have requested the materials developed by OCAP. The state of Wisconsin has used OCAP's "Compliance Assistance Handbook" concept to train and guide state UST inspectors.

The success of OCAP is demonstrated by 100% of facilities located on the Oneida Reservation being in compliance. In addition,

Mr. Shawn Suri, Environmental Compliance Inspector, has been awarded federal and state UST inspector credentials. OCAP continues to receive requests by tribes, states, fire departments and EPA regions for compliance assistance with their UST's.

Author explores world of dating gone awry

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Eddie Campbell

Eddie Campbell had to know; was it only Los Angeles, or are there bad dates everywhere.

"Is it just the people out here in LA are all nuts, or are there people all over the world who've been on horrible dates, and I'm finding there are people all over the world who have been on really horrible dates," he said. Campbell turned the tales of dating debacle into the book 44 Horrible Dates coming out May 1.

"It's a laugh-out-loud horrible date book," he said.

Campbell credits his successful career as a television art director and author to the help he got from Oneida Higher Education to get his Bachelor's Degree from USC Annenberg School of Communication and a degree from USC School of Cinema-Television.

"I could not have paid for college on my own. Oneida became the core strength I needed to accomplish my dreams," he said. "I'm just very thankful to the Oneida Nation."

After receiving his bachelor's, Campbell worked in TV for 10 years on various shows. While working on the show Ghost Whisperer, he met a medium named James Van Praagh.

"I was walking past his office one day and he pulled me in and he said 'you're going to be an author,' and it was really weird because I had books that I had written in my computer, I just didn't have the connection or the venue to become an author. And here I am with in four years of him saying that, I'm a published author with books on my shelf," he said.

Campbell also co-authored the book Days of Our Lives: A Celebration in Photos, and is working on a third book.

"The publisher has already optioned a sequel from me which is Other People's Horrible Dates," he said.

To other would-be authors he gives the following advice:

"If you've got a concept for a book, you've got to do your own professional pitch to a publishing company and … it has to be very short and precise and concrete, you have to show the publisher why your book separates itself from other books similar to that on the shelves. And you have to have a good product and know your demographics," he said.

44 Horrible Dates is published by Sourcebooks, Inc.

Campbell's book is available May 1 and is published by Sourcebooks, Inc.

Community gathers for Sexual Assault Awareness

On Thursday, April 19th, 2012, community members gathered at Oneida Social Services for a meal and to view Rape on the Reservation in observance of Sexual Assault Awareness Month (April). In the documentary, TV series Vanguard explores sexual assault in Native communities. One in three Native American women will be raped in her lifetime, according to the film. The documentary travels to Rosebud Reservation in South Dakota, where sexual assault and violence against women has escalated to murder, and interviews local high school students, law enforcement officers, and survivors of sexual assault.

After the film, a discussion was facilitated. Participants in the discussion remarked that it was hopeful to see many people—both victims and perpetrators—returning to traditional ways for healing and using support groups and retreats to find peace. The audience believed that the whole notion of creating a movie and creating awareness was inspiring, and hoped many communities see it.

When asked what can make a difference to end sexual assault, people again spoke out for a return to old ways and tradition. Historical trauma was identified as a root cause of this challenge, and participants called for help for people to acknowledge this struggle and move on. Many believed that starting younger with prevention tools and awareness in the community can be key to creating a brighter future. Often, perpetrators of sexual violence were victimized themselves and the violence passes generation to generation. It was stated that strong parenting skills, being truly present, providing adequate supervision, and building resiliency skills for children will help end this cycle.

While the film was sometimes difficult to watch, the event was designed to help make more people aware of this challenge and services available in Oneida. Many thanks to the agencies below whose hard work, compassion, and commitment to change made this event possible. It is our hope that more people will speak out to stop sexual assault and seek healing services. If you are in need of someone to talk to, help is just a phone call away.

Wis. election officials issue reminder

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ Early voting is under way in the Wisconsin recall election primaries.

In-person absentee voting began Monday in Wisconsin for the May 8 primaries in the recalls targeting Gov. Scott Walker, Lt. Gov. Rebecca Kleefisch and four Republican state Senate seats.

There are Democratic primaries in all six of the races. Walker also faces a challenger running as a Republican, Walker opponent and frequent Capitol protester Arthur Kohl-Riggs. None of the other Republicans running have challengers.

Early voting can be done until the close of business May 4 at municipal clerks' offices.

Voters can view a sample ballot and verify that they are registered by checking their name on the Government Accountability Board website at https://vpa.wi.gov.

Milwaukee to hold home ownership fair

MILWAUKEE (AP) ~ The city of Milwaukee is holding a home ownership fair for people looking to buy foreclosed properties.

The city's foreclosure consultant, Suzanne Dennik, says four of the homes, and maybe more, will sell for as little as $5,000. But those buyers will have to do required energy renovations and make sure the houses are ultimately up to code. Federal funding is also available to help with the renovations.

She says there are about 1,600 bank-owned properties in the city and about 730 tax foreclosures owned by the city.

The fair will take place Saturday morning at The Italian Community Center in Milwaukee. Dennik says the city has tripled the number of houses they've had to take over because people didn't pay their taxes.

Bear hunting course

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ The state Department of Natural Resources is looking for hunters to take part in the agency's annual bear hunting course.

The program features classroom and field instruction as well as a real hunt with mentors.

Hunters who are at least 10 years old, haven't participated in the course and have never purchased a bear hunting license are eligible. Applications must be postmarked by May 25.

The DNR has offered the course since 2005 in hopes of recruiting new hunters. The agency offers similar courses for deer, turkey and duck hunting.

Justice's recusal requests could end ethics case

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ Ethics violation accusations against Wisconsin Supreme Court Justice David Prosser stemming from an argument with a fellow justice may not move forward if his colleagues agree to recuse themselves from the case.

The state Judicial Commission has accused Prosser of violating the judicial ethics code when he placed his hands on rival Justice Ann Walsh Bradley's neck during an argument last year in front of four other justices. State law calls for a panel of appeals court judges to make a recommendation on discipline to the Supreme Court.

Prosser has asked three justices - Pat Roggensack, Bradley and Chief Justice Shirley Abrahamson - to step out of the case because they were witnesses. He also has accused Bradley and Abrahamson of being biased against him.

If the three agree to recuse themselves, the case would likely end before the panel of appeals court judges convenes.

The Journal Sentinel says Prosser plans to ask other justices to step aside as well. So, even if an appeals panel is convened and four or more justices recuse themselves, the high court will not be able to make a decision on Prosser's conduct or possible discipline because of a lack of quorum.

Prosser, a former Republican state Assembly speaker, is part of a four-justice conservative majority. The group has been openly feuding with the liberal-leaning Bradley and Abrahamson for years. Tensions between the group blew up last June when the court was asked to decide whether Republicans violated the state's open meetings law during the run-up to passing Gov. Scott Walker's contentious collective bargaining law, which stripped public workers of their union rights.

The conservative bloc upheld the law and was under intense pressure to release the decision quickly to save Republican legislators from having to pass the law again in the state budget. The group marched into Bradley's office, found Abrahamson there and began to press her to release the opinion. When Bradley told Prosser to get out, things got physical. She says he placed his hands around her neck in a chokehold but never applied pressure. Prosser insists Bradley charged him and he raised his hands in self-defense.

A special prosecutor decided last year not to file criminal charges against either of them.

FBI won't reopen Pine Ridge cases

By Kristi Eaton
Associated Press

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. ~ The FBI won't reopen decades-old investigations into the deaths of more than 50 people on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation unless new information emerges, an official with the bureau said Thursday.

The decision came after Oglala Sioux Vice President Tom Poor Bear and James Toby Big Boy, chairman of the tribal council's Judiciary Committee, asked U.S. Attorney Brendan Johnson to reopen the investigations into the deaths in the 1970s and what they believe are additional unsolved murders that have occurred since 2000.

"Mr. Johnson, we ask that you demand the FBI and (Bureau of Indian Affairs) Division of Law Enforcement to reopen ... the unsolved and largely uninvestigated murders of the individuals whose names are enclosed with this letter as well as those whose names shall be forthcoming," Poor Bear and Big Boy wrote in their letter March 16.

The FBI in 2000 issued a report detailing their investigations into the deaths of 57 people that occurred during a violent period of the 1970s, when the murder rate on the reservation was the highest in the nation. The report said the bureau was right in closing the cases, even in situations where no one had been prosecuted for a death deemed unnatural.

"Absent new information, there's no intention to reopen any of these investigations," Kyle Loven, chief counsel for the Minneapolis Division of the FBI, told The Associated Press in an interview Thursday. Loven's statement was the government's first public response to the request.

In a statement, tribal officials said they are disappointed with the FBI's decision but are hopeful a meeting with Johnson next month will persuade federal officials to change their mind.

The tribe has said they will not publicly release the list of names because of privacy concerns but said its list does include names listed in the 2000 FBI report that they felt were insufficiently investigated and prosecuted. One person listed in the 2000 report, for instance, was killed with an axe. According to the report, a suspect was identified but was not prosecuted because of impairment caused by a mental condition. In another instance, a man was fatally stabbed through the neck and right side of the face. The autopsy report showed the death was deemed a suicide and the FBI did not investigate.

Before the FBI rejected the request to re-open its investigations, Lisa Shellenberger, an outside attorney working with the Oglala Sioux, said the work done on the cases was "just not convincing."

"The conclusions that they issued for each name, each unsolved murder, were pretty sparse and limited and without additional information or additional public knowledge besides a couple sentences, that's supposed to clear up the taking of an individual?" said Shellenberger, an attorney with Westminster, Colo.-based Smith, Shelton, Ragona & Salazar.

U.S. Attorney Johnson cited the prosecution of John Graham and Fritz Arlo Looking Cloud in the 1975 killing of American Indian Movement activist Annie Mae Aquash as a sign that federal officials are dedicated to prosecuting cases with enough information - even decades later.

Foxwoods CEO: Competition may spur online gambling

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) ~ The chief executive of Foxwoods Resort Casino says rising competition is forcing the Indian-run casino in eastern Connecticut to consider online gambling and other changes.

Scott Butera, in an online discussion Thursday with The Day of New London, said supply in the casino business is clearly outpacing demand. Gambling has been legalized in Massachusetts, though casinos are not expected to open for a few years. Casinos in New York also are taking a greater share of the market.

"We clearly believe that supply growth is outpacing demand," Butera said. "As a result, we will need to adjust our businesses accordingly."

He said he expects additional venues and online gambling to be a part of Foxwoods' future, though not immediately.

Butera also said Foxwoods has concluded negotiations with its creditors and is focusing on completing the transaction. He would not be more specific, citing confidentiality agreements.

The parent company of the Mohegan Sun casinos in Connecticut and Pennsylvania announced last month it has refinanced debt of about $1 billion.

Many casinos committed to costly expansion programs and were caught short at the start of the recession in late 2007. Credit locked up initially and over time customers stayed home to save money or spent little money when visiting casinos.

As a result, many casinos were faced with significant debt and were forced to renegotiate with creditors.

Foxwoods has posted revenue of $5.53 billion since the start of the state's 2012 budget year, down 5 percent from the same period last year.

Payments to members of the Mashantucket Pequot tribe, which owns Foxwoods, has stopped in response to the financial trouble.

Butera said Foxwoods has stabilized its financing, recruited a new management team, added more than a thousand new slot machines, introduced a new advertising campaign and developed a plan to make improvements in food, beverage and retail offerings.

Foxwoods also is building a 300,000-square foot outlet center mall. Ground-breaking is scheduled for the summer and should be finished in two years, he said. Butera said the project will create several hundred jobs.

Foxwoods completed a major expansion in 2008 with the 30-story MGM Grand hotel and casino. The resort has four hotels, more than 6,300 slot machines and 360 tables with 15 different types of games in six casinos.

Justices debating tribal casino lawsuit

By Jesse J. Holland
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) ~ Several Supreme Court justices seemed troubled Tuesday at the thought of letting a lawsuit move forward that aims to shut down an already opened tribal casino in southwestern Michigan.

"It does seem that we may be wasting our time," Justice Anthony Kennedy said. "I'm not suggesting that the ... case is moot, but you did wait for some three years before you brought this suit. The building was built."

Casino foe David Patchak sued to stop the opening of a casino by the Match-E-Be-Nash-She-Wish Band of Pottawatomi Indians, also known as the Gun Lake Tribe, in Wayland Township, 20 miles south of Grand Rapids. Patchak challenged how the government placed the land in trust for the tribe, saying that the move was illegal since the tribe had not been recognized by the government in 1934 when the Indian Reorganization Act was passed.

A federal judge refused to grant Patchak's request for an emergency stay, and dismissed his lawsuit saying his complaints that the casino would change the safety and character of the area was not enough to allow his lawsuit to move forward.

The new casino opened in February 2011, only days after the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit overruled the decision to throw out Patchak's lawsuit. The tribe and the Justice Department appealed that decision to the Supreme Court.

Patchak's lawyer Matthew T. Nelson argued that his client brought his lawsuit before the casino opened and before the government put the land in trust for the tribe. The Supreme Court also ruled in 2009 in Carcieri v. Salazar that the Interior Secretary could only put lands in trust for tribes that were recognized before 1934.

"In spite of the knowledge of this Court's decision in Carcieri, they made a reasonable business decision to move forward with this, knowing the risk that they were taking that the entire basis of them being able to operate a casino and engage in class 3 gambling could be overturned," Nelson said.

The government and the tribe have argued that the lawsuit should be thrown out because federal law bars lawsuits attempting to overturn a decision to take title to lands in trust for tribes. "The United States has not waived its sovereign immunity from suits challenging its title to Indian trust lands," Justice Department lawyer Eric D. Miller said.

Justices will make the decision before the end of the summer.

The cases are Match-E-Be-Nash-She-Wish Band of Pottawatomi Indians v. Patchak, 11-246, and Salazar v. Patchak, 11-247.

What Are Hazardous Materials and Waste?

By Amy Spears
Environmental Specialist – Pollution Prevention

Hazardous Material and Hazardous Waste, while often used interchangeably, are two separate terms with different meanings.

Hazardous Material

A hazardous material is any item or agent (biological, chemical, physical) which has the potential to cause harm to humans, animals, or the environment, either by itself or through interaction with other factors. Hazardous materials are defined and regulated in the United States primarily by laws and regulations administered by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), the U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT), and the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC).

There are nine classes of hazardous material:

1. Explosives
2. Gasses
3. Flammable Liquid and Combustible Liquid
4. Flammable Solids, Spontaneous Combustible and Dangerous When Wet
5. Oxidizers and Organic Peroxides
6. Poison (Toxic) and Poison Inhalation Hazard
7. Radioactive Materials
8. Corrosives
9. Miscellaneous and Dangerous Goods

Hazardous Material is all around us and is used in everyday life. It is the gasoline we use in our cars, the natural gas and propane we use for cooking, ammonia used for fertilizers and refrigeration, and the bottled gases used in our hospitals and clinics. When hazardous materials are properly stored, transported and used they are beneficial to us and our community.

Hazardous Waste

Hazardous waste is waste that is dangerous or potentially harmful to our health or the environment. Hazardous wastes can be liquids, solids, gases, or sludges. They can be discarded commercial products, like cleaning fluids or pesticides, or the by-products of manufacturing processes. The treatment, storage and disposal of hazardous waste is regulated under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA).

Hazardous waste is divided into four categories:

1. Listed Wastes: Specific wastes that EPA has determined are hazardous
2. Characteristic Wastes: Wastes that do not meet any of the listings above but exhibit one of the four characteristics- ignitability, corrosivity, reactivity, or toxicity.
3. Universal Wastes: Batteries, pesticides, mercury-containing equipment (e.g., thermostats) and lamps (e.g., fluorescent bulbs).
4. Mixed Wastes: Waste that contains both radioactive and hazardous waste components.

EPA, States, and industries are working to reduce the amount, toxicity, and persistence of wastes that are generated as well as continually looking for ways to reuse and recycle hazardous materials.

Please join us for a public hearing to discuss the Oneida Nation Environmental Response Law on Thursday April 26th from 11:30-12:30 at the Business Committee Conference Room. Check back next week in the Kalihwisaks for how the Environmental Response Law would protect Oneida in the case of a spill.

Wisconsin DNR wants comment on impaired waters

Madison, WI (AP) – State water officials are looking for public inputs on a proposal to add 99 water bodies to Wisconsin's impaired waters list.

The Department of Natural Resources says phosphorus in the water bodies exceeds state limits. But since no aquatic life has suffered and no algae blooms have appeared the agency wants to create a new category for the bodies on the impaired water list.

A list of the water bodies is available on the DNR's website. The public comment period on the plan began April 17 and will run through May 18.

EPA accepting Great Lakes grant applications

Traverse City, MI (AP) – The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency says it will award $20 million in grants this year for projects to help the Great Lakes.

EPA officials recently invited states, cities, Indian tribes, universities and nonprofit groups to apply for the grants, which will come from money Congress appropriated under the Obama administration's Great Lakes Restoration Initiative.

The projects will focus on issues such as invasive species, toxic pollution and runoff from farms and cities.

Applications are due by May 24. EPA's regional office in Chicago will conduct several webinars next month to explain the application process.

The Great Lakes Restoration Initiative is a multi-year effort to make progress on some of the freshwater seas' biggest and most longstanding ecological problems.

Oneida Nation High School Names 2012 WIAA Scholar Athletes

Kanani Nunies

Michael 'Jo Jo' Santiago

Two graduating seniors – one boy and one girl – have been named Oneida Nation High School's 2012 WIAA Scholar Athletes. Michael Santiago and Kanani Nunies will receive medals from the WIAA at the school's awards ceremony on May 6.

The program, which is underwritten by Marshfield Clinic, was launched in 1984 to demonstrate the positive impact of interscholastic athletic activities.

To qualify for WIAA Scholar Athlete recognition, a nominee must have earned at least four varsity letters through the first half of his/her senior year and must have a cumulative grade point average of at least 3.0 on a 4.0 scale.

Both Nunies and Santiago have excelled in the classroom as well as on the basketball court and have maintained a 3.58 and 3.1 grade point average (GPA) respectively. Both students have been on the honor roll and are award winning players. Their loyalty, dedication and commitment to doing the best they can is proof of their leadership abilities. Both students are captains of their respective basketball teams.

Each year, member high schools of the Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic Association are invited to nominate one boy and one girl for Scholar Athlete honors. The program, which is underwritten by Marshfield Clinic, was launched in 1984 to demonstrate the positive impact of interscholastic athletic activities.

To qualify for WIAA Scholar Athlete recognition, a nominee must have earned at least four varsity letters through the first half of his/her senior year and must have a cumulative grade point average of at least 3.0 on a 4.0 scale.

In addition to local awards, 32 of the more than 700 students nominated each year are selected for statewide recognition. Four boys and four girls in each of four WIAA divisions are honored at a ceremony held on the first Sunday of May each year in Wausau.

Celebrate Life art exhibit on view now through May 23 at NWTC

Green Bay, WI – The latest exhibit at the Northeast Wisconsin Technical College Art Gallery celebrates the lives of over 50 children who are facing life threatening illnesses.

Running now through May 23, "Celebrate Life" features 68 paintings by children with cancer, hospitalized children, and children who have experienced the death of a family member. All of the art is available for purchase to benefit the programs responsible for the exhibit, the St. Vincent Hospital Child Life program and HEAL (Helping Elevate thru Art and Love).

To create the colorful exhibit, the young painters from the Child Life program were helped by local artists from HEAL. Each child made two identical pieces of art – one for their families to keep, the other for raising money to help other children and to pay medical expenses. HEAL was founded by former art teacher Kim Marie Thornborrow.

"Many of the children Kim works with are facing serious, life threatening illnesses, like childhood cancer," said Rosa Kugel, nurse team leader with St. Vincent Hospital Pediatrics. "The medical treatments are tiring and stressful, and the diseases are often painful. But when Kim comes to help the children paint, their discomforts subside and their sad faces light up incredibly. Fear, pain, loneliness, and sadness pour out through the colors and techniques and are transformed into beauty and healing. This transformation in the children is the greatest gift that HEAL brings."

A free, public reception will be held Wednesday, May 23, from 6:00 to 8:00 p.m. at the NWTC Art Gallery, with an artist recognition program at 7:00 p.m. Attendees can meet the artists and their helpers and enjoy beverages, hors d'oeuvres and music.

"NWTC is so happy to support these great programs," said Kim LaPlante, NWTC Library Services and Art Gallery manager. "This exhibit reflects several areas emphasized by the College – compassionate health care, creativity through art, and thoughtful community service."

Located in the Library on the second floor of the Student Center on the Green Bay campus, the gallery is open to the public during Library hours. Admission is free. Go to www.nwtc.edu/library for Library hours.

How to purchase the art – All of the paintings in the exhibit can be purchased online at www.healart.org, http://www.facebook.com/ChildLifeGB or by contacting Colleen Ducke, St. Vincent Child Life coordinator, (920) 433-8915, childlife@stvgb.org. Notecards with the paintings are also for sale.

About NWTC's Art Collections: NWTC maintains both an art gallery and a permanent collection of art displayed throughout its campuses. The collection contains over 140 works of art from area artists. See NWTC's virtual art gallery, go to www.nwtc.edu.

ONHS Students Do Well in National History Day Competition

By Thunderhawk Times Staff

On Saturday, April 14, ONHS students Allie Spruce, Natasha Stevens, Delylla Fredenberg and Adrian Huff competed against other area high school students in the National History Day competition at UWGB. The event was held at UWGB's Kress Center.

Allie and Natasha created short documentary videos, which they filmed, edited, and narrated. Allie's documentary was titled "Revolutionizing Football in Titletown" and Natasha's was titled "Indian Gaming: The Reservation Revolution."

Delyllah and Adrian did a standing exhibit on Wisconsin guitar legend, Les Paul, which included numerous pieces of information on Paul, including an exclusive quote on Paul's significance from WAMI-winning guitarist, Chris Dame. At the center of their display was, of course, a full-sized cutout of a Les Paul guitar.

ONHS social studies instructor, Laura Studee, said she was "very proud" of all four students. "Despite the fact that neither Allie or Natasha's entries advanced to state, they both received glowing reviews from the National History Day judges," said Studee. "'Great job' also goes out to Delylla and Adrian."

Natasha Stevens said she was proud of her work, which was "based on the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act (IGRA) of 1988. My Documentary got the Northeastern Wisconsin Award, competing against more than 300 other students and 18 other schools." The award earned Natasha $50, said Studee.

People who are interested in viewing Allie and Natasha's documentaries can find them on YouTube. Studee also extended special thanks to Loretta Metoxen, Michelle Danforth, and Denis Gullickson "for their amazing assistance!"

ONHS Blood Drive

By Tawit White
Thunderhawk Times

Monday, April 30 is the date of the first ever Oneida Nation High School Blood Drive. It will be held in the Norbert Hill Center Gymnasium, N7210 Seminary Rd. It will be held from 1:00pm to 6:00pm.

To make an appointment, call Carol Johnson at 920-869-4043. Walk-ins are welcome, but please make an appointment.

It takes about one hour to donate blood for the first timers. You will be asked a few questions before you may donate. The actual donation will last about 15 minutes.

There will be snacks afterwards to help get your blood sugar back to normal before you start to drive home.

The Oneida Nation High School Student Council has been meeting with the Red Cross Organization to set up this blood drive.

The number one reason that people give for not donating blood is, "No one ever asked me." Well consider yourself asked—cordially asked by the Oneida Nation High School Student Council, Oneida Nation High School, and the American Red Cross.

Our ~~My~~ Scoop

Earth Day

By Matt Powless and Tyler Stevens
Thunderhawk Times

Sunday, April 22 was Earth Day — something that is really important to our society because it helps the world become a better place and makes it greener. It also helps people's moods brighter and, possibly, ends war.

The very first Earth Day was in 1970 and some ONHS staff members remember their experiences that day.

Special Education teacher Dave Santee said he was in junior high on the first Earth Day. After lunch, said Santee, "every homeroom planted trees, flowers, and put up fences around each flower plot to make the school look better and to contribute to the idea of a new way of looking at earth and our responsibility."

Journalism teacher Denis Gullickson said he was at the Brown County Arena the night of the first Earth Day and remembered that "there was powerful thunderstorm that night that knocked out the power there. It was crazy because there were speakers and all that, but outside Mother Nature was letting us know how powerful she was. The earth was speaking."

Gullickson said he was a sophomore at the time and his biology teacher took them back to the arena the next day and they counted the litter left behind by the people from the night before. "There was like two point some pieces of litter for everybody on the floor there," said Denis. "And these were supposed to be the Earth Day people"

The history of Earth Day actually comes back to Gaylord Nelson from Wisconsin, Born on June 4th, 1916 in Clear Lake Wisconsin. He was elected Governor of Wisconsin in 1958. After his political life he became the counselor for the Wilderness Society which led him to get recognition in 1995. Because of this, Wisconsin has a proud part in the Earth Day tradition.

So, remember keep the earth clean and make it a better place.

May is designated "Older Americans Month"

History of Older Americans Month

When Older Americans Month was established in 1963, only 17 million living Americans had reached their 65th birthdays. About a third of older Americans lived in poverty and there were few programs to meet their needs. Interest in older Americans and their concerns was growing, however. In April of 1963, President John F. Kennedy's meeting with the National Council of Senior Citizens served as a prelude to designating May as "Senior Citizens Month."

Thanks to President Jimmy Carter's 1980 designation, what was once called Senior Citizens Month, is now called "Older Americans Month," and has become a tradition.

Historically, Older Americans Month has been a time to acknowledge the contributions of past and current older persons to our country, in particular those who defended our country. Every President since JFK has issued a formal proclamation during or before the month of May asking that the entire nation pay tribute in some way to older persons in their communities. Older Americans Month is celebrated across the country through ceremonies, events, fairs and other such activities.

Never Too Old to Play!

May is Older Americans Month, a perfect opportunity to show our appreciation for the older adults in our community. Since 1963, communities across the nation have joined in nation's commitment to celebrating the contributions and achievements of older Americans.

The theme for Older Americans Month 2012 – Never Too Old to Play! – puts a spotlight on the important role older adults play in sharing their experience, wisdom and understanding, and passing on that knowledge to other generations in a variety of significant ways. This year's celebrations will recognize the value that older adults continue to bring to our communities through spirited participation in social and faith groups, service organizations and other activities.

As large number of baby-boomers reach retirement age, many communities have increased their efforts to provide meaningful opportunities for older adults - many of whom remain physically and socially active through their 80s and beyond. Current trends show that people over age 60 account for an ever-growing percentage of participants in community service positions, faith based organizations, online social networking as well as arts and recreational groups.

Lifelong participation in social, creative, and physical activities has proven health benefits, including retaining mobility, muscle mass, and cognitive abilities. But older adults are not the only ones who benefit from their engagement in community life. Studies show their interactions with family, friends, and neighbors across generations enrich the lives of everyone involved. Young people who have significant relationships with a grandparent or elder report that these relationships helped shape their values, goals, and life choices and gave them a sense of identity and roots.

While Oneida Elder Services provides services, support, and resources to older Americans year-round, Older Americans Month is a great opportunity to show special appreciation for some of our most beloved citizens. We have many reasons to celebrate them!

Oneida Tribe Elder Services is joining in the national celebration of Older Americans Month 2012 with activities and events to promote intergenerational engagement and recreation. We invite you to join in the fun! To find out how you can support Older Americans Month 2012 and take part in intergenerational play.

Older Americans Month 2012
A Proclamation

Whereas, Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin & Elder Services includes 3,186 enrolled elders aged 55 and older nationwide; and

Whereas, Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin & Elder Services is committed to helping all individuals maintain their health and independence in later life: and

Whereas, the older adults in Oneida have an important role in sharing knowledge, wisdom, and understanding of the history of our community through interactions with children, youth, and adults from other generations; and

Whereas, the fruits of knowledge and experience can be effectively transferred from generation to generation through meaningful social interactions; and

Whereas, their interactions with family, friends and neighbors across generations enrich the lives of everyone involved; and

Whereas, our community can provide opportunities to enrich citizens young and old by:

- Emphasizing the value of including elders in public and family life
- Creating opportunities for older Americans to interact with people of different generations
- Providing services, technologies, and support systems that allow older adults to participate in social activities in the community

Now Therefore, We the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin do hereby proclaim May 2012 to be Older Americans Month. We urge every citizen to take time this month to engage with our older citizens through enjoyable social interactions such as sports, games, contests, and other forms of social activities.

Taking on Oneida gangs

By Antonio Doxtator
C.A.T. Coordinator

She·koli Swakwe·ku, Greetings Everyone,

My name is Antonio Doxtator and I coordinate the, Onʌyote? Aka Community Action Team (C.A.T) formerly the Onʌyote? Aka Gang Prevention Task Force. (OGPTF) We have changed our name and have a new logo, which was designed by Garth Webster; however our mission remains the same, to offer positive alternatives for the Oneida Community and its youth in the form of prevention, intervention, and education.

I have been on the job now for about 10 months and I have learned a lot about this community and the issues associated with gang prevention here. In December of 2011 we had a Community Gang Assessment done by national American Indian gang expert Christopher Grant.

The result of the assessment is that we do have a serious gang problem here on the Oneida Reservation which will only get worse with time and inaction. The key findings were:

- Gang activity has been occurring on the Oneida Nation Reservation for approximately 20 years and, based upon the assessment, has either stayed steady or increased over the past two years. There are five primary street gangs that are currently active within the Oneida Reservation area, with estimated 75-150 individuals involved in gang activity to one degree or another.
- Gang affiliation on the Oneida Reservation primarily involves adolescent and young adult males between the ages of 12 and 25; however females are also involved, with an increasing amount of gang affiliation occurring among younger individuals within our community.

These are statistics we cannot choose to ignore, as adults and community members it's all our responsibility to make sure the problem does not progress in our community.

The Community Action Team has tried to be proactive over the past 10 months and have been working to address our community issues. Some of our activities have been to hold monthly meetings for interested community members to give updates and plan future events. We have a board of directors that meets quarterly to discuss community issues and work on policies. The C.A.T. has been working on a Graffiti Removal policy and a Nuisance and Public Peace Ordinance. The C.A.T. has also formed a partnership with the Pow-Wow Committee to help bring awareness to the event and to help deter gang activity there. We are currently planning the 2012 Culture Camps which take place during the summer and are attended by our local youth as well as youth from the Milwaukee area.

I had begun a youth program with high school aged Oneida youth and got valuable feedback about what type of programs they would like to see and participate in. I will continue meeting with the schools and youth in our area and continue to gather feedback and offer prevention education.

I recently wrote and submitted a Coordinated Tribal Assistance Solicitation Grant with the help of the Oneida grant office and Officer Matt Ninham. With the grant we are looking to expand current programs such as the Champions Basketball program, Culture Camps, we are also in process of developing a major lacrosse camp. With the grant dollars we also plan on sending a youth group to the National UNITY Conference in 2013.

We are working on many projects to help improve the safety and enhance the quality of life here on the Oneida Reservation and surrounding communities.

Wells named Hillcrest Principal

Kristin Wells

Kristin Wells has recently been named principal of Hillcrest Elementary School in the Pulaski Community School District (PCSD).

"It is an interesting, exciting and challenging time in education. The Pulaski Community School District's focus is on meeting those challenges that face our children," Wells said. "I am excited to be a part of Hillcrest Elementary School and their role in educating students and reaching high academic standards for all. As I begin this new chapter in my career, I look forward to working with the staff and families at Hillcrest to address the needs, interests and abilities of all the students."

Since 2002, Wells has served as the principal of the Keshena Primary School. During her time as principal, she achieved many accomplishments, including leading the alignment of 4K-5 curriculum in all core subject areas, planned district-wide in-service events in all core subject areas, began a successful 4K full-day program, started a Support One Student Program for at-risk students and worked with local law enforcement community on creating uniform revisions to a school crisis/safety plan.

Most recently, in February 2012, Wells won the Wisconsin State Reading Association Outstanding Administrators Award.

"Kristin defiantly stood out among the candidates that applied for this principal position," PCSD Superintendent Dr. Mel Lightner said. "She has a proven record of programs and leadership. We are glad she has chosen Hillcrest and the Pulaski Community School District."

Wells earned her Bachelor of Science degree in elementary education, with a minor in environmental education, from the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point in 1995. She also has a master's degree in educational leadership from Marian College of Fon Du Lac.

Wells lives in Howard with her husband of 13 years, Trevor, and their two sons Cole and Mason. When she is not working, she enjoys watching her sons play sports and spending time with her family and friends.

Heritage Hill's 35th Anniversary Celebration

On Saturday, May 12, 2012 from 10:00am-4:30pm we invite friends, families and supporters of Heritage Hill to help us celebrate our 35th year! This family event will feature our annual historic sheep shearing and pancake breakfast.

Additional activities include: games and crafts for children, a petting zoo, butter making, Rhia the Trick Horse, a time line of the arrival of buildings to Heritage Hill, photos of the early years of Heritage Hill, a historic school lesson, the music of Randy Peterson and an 1860's reenactment of an historic baseball game. The Milwaukee Cream Citys will be facing off against Green Bay celebrities in this fun and educational game.

Several demonstrators will be sharing their skills at basket making, weaving, spinning, felting and dying. A special presentation will be given by Lee Somerville discussing her book, "Vintage Wisconsin Gardens." She will be available for a book signing and discussion.

Heritage Hill's 35th Anniversary Celebration takes place on Saturday, May 12.

Admissions are $7.00 for adults; $6.00 for seniors (over 62) and $5.00 for children age 4-17. Children 3 and under are free. Heritage Hill Members are free! The pancake and porkie breakfast is $3.00 per person.

Heritage Hill is a living history site in Green Bay, Wisconsin comprised of over 25 historic buildings and interpreting history from the 1600s-1900s. It is open to the public from May through September as well as special events, and offers educational programming and private event space year round.

The park is located at 2640 S. Webster St. in Green Bay. For more information about a Heritage Hill Opening Day or general park news call 920-448-5150 or visit www.heritagehill-gb.org.

The Oneida Thunderhawks lacrosse team took on the Green Bay Metro Rebels squad in an away game played at Lombardi Middle School on Monday, April 23, 2012. The T-Hawks scored the first goal of the game but slowly fell behind, finding themselves in a five goal deficit. Trailing 2-7 in the 4th quarter Oneida made a furious rally that fell just short. The final score was Oneida 5, Green Bay Metro 7. Devonte Pointer scored three goals to lead the team in scoring.

Cty H Rec Center Names March Members of the Month

By Kyle Casper
Recreation Supervisor

The Oneida Recreation Department on Cty H has recently named its members of the month for March. Members for each area were chosen based on their effort and level of participation for the month in one of the Department's core areas.

In the area of Sports and Fitness, youth are encouraged to reach 60 minutes of physical activity per day. This will increase the level of physical fitness for each participant. For the month of March, Jaynoa Johnson was the member for the boys reaching this goal 12 times for the month. Aja Wilber was the member of the month for the girls for reaching this goal 18 times for the month.

In the area of Arts and Crafts, this month's medium was braiding. The member of the month chosen for was Sadie Schuman. Sadie is a delight to have in the art room. She is a calm and patient person and her energy and enthusiasm to create with bright colors is contagious. Keep up the great creating!

Youth learn about the aspects of the six pillars of character development and how to express those characters by participating in Character Club as part of Social Recreation. This month the emphasis was on fairness. This month's member of the month was Miranda Smith. Miranda showed fairness by treating others equally, taking turns, and playing by the rules.

The Learning Center enhances the educational development of each participant. Students are encouraged to complete their homework assignments to improve on their GPA. The member of the month was Nathan Leeman. Nathan demonstrated hard work and dedication to his school work. Even with a spring break week included, Nathan completed his homework assignments when he had them and also read 10 days this month for at least 15 minutes each time.

Another highlight for this past month was our March Madness program. Two days each week for the whole month each of our core areas offered a basketball related activity for kids to participate in. Youth were given points for participation, placing in the top 3 of an activity, and also received bonus points if they completed all four daily activities. At the end of the month, the youth who earned the most points got to pick out a prize. The top 5 for the month in terms of points were as follows: Miranda Smith – 415 pts., Kiona Leeman – 330 pts., Kennedy Kaquatosh – 225 pts., Sadie Schuman – 220 pts., and Jaydee Johnson – 210 pts.

Youth Baseball Registration Deadline Drawing Near

By Kyle Casper
Recreation Supervisor

The Oneida Recreation Department is currently accepting registration for certain youth recreation baseball programs. The deadline to register for T-ball (5 – 6 year olds), Pee Wee (7 – 8 year olds), and Little League (9 – 12 year olds) is May 2nd.

Little League practices will begin in early-May with a tryout for all new players to Little League held on May 3rd at the Site I ball diamond from 6:00 – 7:00.

Regular season games for Little League will begin on May 29, while T-ball and Pee Wee will begin on June 4. You may register at the Civic Center or Cty H Rec Center or by contacting Kyle Casper at 833-0010 or kcasper@oneidanation.org.

Unfortunately we did not get enough youth registered to have a Babe Ruth team this season. Babe Ruth is for ages 13-15. We hope to offer this program again in the future if we get enough youth to register.

TRIAD Program Enhanced with Nutrition Classes

Good News! Oneida Diabetes Team is proud to announce enhancements made to the TRIAD Program. The TRIAD program is a structured exercise program for patients diagnosed with diabetes on behalf of collaboration between the Oneida Community Health Center Diabetes Team, Health Promotion Disease Prevention Department, and Oneida Family Fitness.

To improve participant success, Registered Dietitian and Certified Diabetes Educator, Betty Schwantes will be providing monthly nutrition classes at Oneida Family Fitness Education Room, covering the following topics:

1. Carbohydrate Counting/Plate Method,
2. Label Reading,
3. Navigating the Grocery Store, and
4. Sports Nutrition for Diabetes.

Beginning May 1, 2012, TRIAD program participants will be required to attend the group nutrition classes within 12 months. A $25 Oneida Retail Gift Card will be offered to those who attend at least one nutrition class every 3 months. Stay tuned for informational flyers with dates and times.

For more information, please contact Margaret VanDen Heuvel, Diabetes Program Supervisor, at (920) 869-4941.

Giving the gift of clear vision

LensCrafters gave 45 students vision exams and 36 received prescription glasses.

ONSS students participated in this event on Tuesday, April 24, 2012. Forty-five participants received vision exams. Of this number, 36 of the participants received prescription glasses at no cost to the families. This means 80% of those seen Tuesday required prescription glasses!

For the past 20 years, LensCrafters has been partnering with OneSight®, a family of vision care programs dedicated to restoring and preserving clear vision to those in need through outreach, research and education, in order to hand-deliver the gift of sight to those in need worldwide. With 284 million children and adults suffering from poor vision because they lack access to proper eye care and eyewear, OneSight works together with trained volunteers from LensCrafters to collect donated eyeglasses and coordinate Global Clinics to give these individuals free eyewear, eye exams and the ability to live a fuller life.

A special thank you to Michelle Myers, Jocelyn Liljestrom and Jolene Valladares for making this event possible for our students. Yaw^ko.

Information for patients who utilize OCHC On-Call Nurse

Registered Nurses (RN) are available for patient phone calls – 24 hours a day/7days a week. When the clinic is closed the RN is home. They do not have access to medical records or pharmacy information.

When to call and speak with the RN *After Clinic Hours:

- You/your child have an urgent health care need/question that cannot wait until the next open day of the clinic.
- Don't call the RN when you are having a life threatening issue. For example, chest pain, difficulty breathing, or bleeding profusely from a wound. Access the nearest emergency department to get medical attention as soon as possible. Call 911 as needed for intervention. Call the Contract Health Services Department to report the visit within 72 hours to ensure coverage.
- The RN's on call also work 40+ hours per week at the OCHC medical clinic, in addition to providing on call services. Calling in the middle of the night with a concern that is not urgent is not appropriate.
- On call staff does not determine Contract Health eligibility. You need to contact the Contract Health Department when the clinic reopens to check on eligibility.

Program looks to preserve language

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

A grant-funded program is looking to curb the downward trend of Oneida speakers in the community.

The Administration for Native Americans Creating Language Learning Environments program is a two-fold language initiative that focuses on matching novice speakers with seasoned language veterans. The program also works on improving the interface of the tribe's language website.

"We're updating (the website), adding more information and we are working with UWGB to make it smoother," said Laura Cornelius, Curriculum Specialist.

Along with the website, the program also developed a mentor/mentee program to facilitate learning for people just learning Oneida. The program did require people to test into the program.

"We wanted people with a language background already. We didn't want to start at square one with someone who hasn't had the language. Because of the state of emergency with our language we wanted people who were up and running and just go with it," said Cornelius.

The candidates were interviewed by experienced speakers and tested on pronunciation and enunciation.

"We wanted to see their fluency in the language," she said. "We had 18 people apply and we had 10 come in for assessment."

Roughly 55 people are taking part in the program, learning on their own with their own schedules. Program participants felt a need to immerse themselves in the language for further understanding. The idea to hold monthly potluck meetings was born.

"Most people are in their own little camps learning the language. Our thought was to get everybody in a place to

The green and gold have gone extra green donating 50 trees to Oneida as part of the Packers Green Team First Downs for Trees program. The shade trees were planted around the Oneida Community Health Center (OCHC) by employees from the OCHC, Oneida Department of Public Works (DPW) and community members on Arbor Day, April 27.

According to Oneida Forester Dan Brooks, the OCHC was chosen because of its lack of foliage.

"We thought the health center was a perfect location, it's sort of centralized, we can get a lot of community involvement," he said. "(Tree cover) reduces wind velocities, if you've ever been in and out of the health center; it's extremely windy across there."

The saplings are a mix of maples, linden, and disease resistant elms as well as flowering crab trees and lilacs.

Judge orders NCR to resume clean up of Fox

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) ~ A federal judge's ruling has opened the door to full-scale cleanup of a Wisconsin river polluted by toxins from a bygone papermaking era.

Judge William Griesbach ruled Friday that NCR Corp. alone is responsible for the costs of cleaning up the Fox River in northeastern Wisconsin. He said the harm caused by toxic polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, in the river can't reasonably be divided among all of the paper companies likely responsible for discharging them.

The judge ordered NCR to begin running at least three dredges 24 hours a day, five days a week, through Nov. 12.

Dredging work ended last season and was to have resumed this month. But NCR and Appleton Papers Inc., which held the majority share of the company doing the actual work, stopped paying for cleanup, arguing that other parties should be helping with the cost.

State and federal regulators had asked the judge to order NCR to keep paying for the cleanup. The overall project is expected to cost more than $1 billion.

"We're pleased with the decision," said Beth J. Olson, a water-program leader with the Wisconsin

Oneida Business Committee meeting wrap: April 25, 2012

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

The Oneida Business Committee (OBC) worked through their agenda with ease during the April 25 OBC meeting at the Norbert Hill Center.

Present: Ed Delgado – Chairman, Greg Matson – Vice-Chairman, Tina Danforth – Treasurer, Vince DelaRosa – Councilman, David Jordan – Councilmember, Brandon Stevens – Councilmember, Paul Ninham – Councilmember

Absent: Patti Hoeft – Secretary, Melinda Danforth – Councilmember

Minutes

OBC meeting minutes were approved from the April 11 meeting and the April 18 emergency meeting.

Resolutions

A resolution allowing a fireworks display at the Taste of Oneida event was approved. The scaled back one-day event formally known as the Family Carnival is set for June 9 behind the Norbert Hill Center.

Fee to trust applications for three locations were approved. The locations were the 1200 block of Crestwood Drive, W200 block of County Road S, and the W1100 block of Reformatory Road.

Directors/Managers Quarterly Reports

The Internal Services quarterly report was accepted. Division Director Joanie Buckley's report highlighted goals and achievements of the departments housed under the Internal Services' umbrella.

Boards, Committees, and Commissions

Cathy L. Metoxen, Arlene Danforth, Rochelle Powless, Yvonne Jourdan, and Peril Huff were appointed to the Personnel Commission. Leslie Wheelock was appointed to the Oneida Total Integrated Enterprises Board.

Reports were accepted from the Oneida Gaming Commission, Oneida Election Board, Oneida Powwow Committee, and the Oneida Arts Board. Reports from the Oneida Nation Veterans Affairs Committee and South Eastern Oneida Tribal Services were deferred.

Standing Committees

Legislative Operating Committee (LOC) meeting minutes were approved from the April 4 meeting.

The OBC took action sending three referendum questions to the first available General Tribal Council (GTC) meeting. The questions will ask the GTC if they approve of absentee voting for tribal elections, if the Chief of Police position should be elected, and if tribal employees required to attend GTC meetings should be exempt from the $100 GTC meeting stipend.

April 20 meeting minutes for the Finance Committee were approved.

Meeting minutes for the March 1 Community Development Planning Committee were approved.

General Tribal Council

The OBC set July 2, 2012 at 6 p.m. as the date and time for the Semi-Annual GTC meeting. The meeting will be held at the Radisson Hotel and Conference Center. The agenda is yet to be set.

A petition regarding a per capita plan along with changes to the GTC meeting payment process was acknowledged as received.

New Business

The OBC deferred a request to post an internal audio/visual position within the M.I.S. department.

A proposal from the Oneida Farmers' Market was deferred for two weeks to allow the Chief Financial Officer a chance to offer input on funding for the request to move the market due to construction.

A motion was passed to activate funds the casino expansion project.

Travel Reports

Paul Ninham, Region 5 Tribal Environmental Program Management Conference, February 20 – 23, Chicago, IL. The travel report was approved.

Vince DelaRosa, Oneida Total Integrated Enterprises meeting and dinner, January 9 – 10, Brookfield, WI. The travel report was approved.

Vince DelaRosa, SEOTS community meetings, February 24 – 25, Milwaukee, WI. The travel reports were accepted.

Brandon Stevens, National Republican Congressional Committee event, March 20, Washington D.C. The report was accepted.

"Anything that can help improve the outdoor environment out there is going to be a big benefit out there for the visitors and staff that work there," said Brooks.

Tree planting volunteer Mike Finney recounted digging maple saplings from the ditch and replanting them with his grandmother.

"That's why I like planting trees, you've to be an optimist, because they'll be here after you're gone, and you've got to be doing it for other people as well as yourself," he said.

The tree planting was planned for Arbor Day, but no one planned on the unseasonably warm weather that caused the saplings to start budding three weeks early.

"We worked with the apple orchard and we used their cooler for storage, so we could maintain the trees' dormancy," said Brooks.

Beyond the benefits the trees provide by filtering the air, reducing erosion, and adding property value, Brooks is grateful for the chance for Oneida to work with other area communities also participating in the tree planting program. Oneida and other Wisconsin municipalities wrote letters of support to get additional grant funds from the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) for more trees.

"I think it's great. I think anytime we can get communities together to work on a common theme together it just brings us all a little closer," said Brooks.

Passing On...

Damp, Yvonne "Puts"
November 1, 1946 – April 28, 2012

Yvonne "Puts" Damp, 65, Oconto Falls, died peacefully Saturday evening, April 28, 2012 at Community Memorial Hospital surrounded by her family. She was born November 1, 1946 in Oconto Falls to Gordon and Marie (King) Heimke. Yvonne grew up in rural Oconto Falls where she attended pubic schools, graduating from high school with the class of 1964. Following graduation, she attended cosmetology school in Green Bay and worked for several years at Majestic Beauty Salon in Oconto Falls.

On March 12, 1966 she married Wayne Damp in Menominee, MI. The couple has lived in Oconto Falls for all of their married lives where they raised two children. Yvonne also worked in laundry services at Community Memorial Hospital for over 20 years. As a devoted wife, mother and grandmother, "Puts" will fondly be remembered for being a great cook and baker for the large dinners she'd make for her family and friends. She was also a good listener and friend to many.

Survivors are her husband of 46 years, Wayne Damp, Oconto Falls; their two children, Wendy (special friend, Sean Houska) Damp, Scott (Kate) Damp, all of Oconto Falls; four grandchildren, Jacob (fiancé Angel Picard) and Mariah (fiancé Marc Monfort) Oestreich; Scott W. Jr. and Max Damp; one great grandson, Trent Jacob Oestreich; four brothers, Ron (Mary) Heimke, Abrams; Gary (Glori) Heimke, Todd "Doc" (Sandra) and Roger "Eb" (Terri) Heimke all of Oconto Falls; many nieces and nephews.

She was preceded in death by her parents and in-laws, Jim and Lorraine Damp.

Visitation with the urn present will be held after 12 noon Thursday, May 3, 2012 at Jones Funeral Service in Oconto Falls (920-848-2222 or visit: www.jonesfuneral.com) until the time of service. Memorial services will be held 2 pm Thursday at the funeral home with the Rev. Paul Heykes officiating.

HUD awards grants to provide affordable housing

WASHINGTON – The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development awarded more than $56 million to 76 tribal communities throughout the nation to improve housing conditions, promote community development and to spur local economies with construction projects and jobs. The competitive grants awarded are part of HUD's Indian Community Development Block Grant (ICDBG) Program that address a wide variety of community development and affordable housing activities for low- to moderate-income families.

The recipients will use these grants to develop viable communities including rehabilitating housing or building new homes or to purchase land to support new housing construction. The funding can also used to build infrastructure such as roads, water and sewer facilities. To stimulate economic development and job growth, recipients use the grants to establish commercial, industrial and agricultural projects. Recipients also use the funding to build community and health centers, or to start businesses to support the community including shopping centers, manufacturing plants, restaurants or convenience stores and gas stations. Specific examples of this sort of economic and community development include:

The ICDBG program was established in 1977 to help Indian tribes and Alaska Native villages to meet their community development needs. Federally recognized tribes, bands, groups, nations or eligible tribal organizations compete for this funding.

Indian Community Development Block Grant Awards

- Wisconsin Ho-Chunk Nation of Wisconsin Black River Falls $600,000
- Lac du Flambeau Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians of the Lac du Flambeau Reservation of WI Lac du Flambeau $600,000
- Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin Oneida $600,000
- St. Croix Chippewa Indians of Wisconsin Webster $600,000

Oneida's grant of $600,000 will be used by the tribe to provide infrastructure of water, sewer and roads to sustain the construction of 40 housing units for single adult families on the Oneida Reservation. The proposed site is ideally situated within walking distance of the Oneida Community Health Center and the Oneida Day Care center.

From 1A/Language

practice speaking. We can encourage and help each other," Cornelius said.

The potlucks are held at Bear Paw Café with the blessing of both Bear Paw Keepsakes and Bear Paw.

"(Bear Paw Café owner Arlie Doxtator) has been kind to open up his space. It was a really nice offer from them and open their doors to the language. It's nice to see Oneida businesses support the language," she said.

For recently turned seven-year old Ernest Stevens IV the program fits nicely into his goal of becoming a language teacher. When he was six he became the youngest person to test out of the level one program.

He used books, flash cards, CD and computer based audio and video along with face-to-face interactions to practice and study. His parents also required him to use Oneida in certain situations such as asking for food and water or randomly identifying animals.

"We want to track his progress and allow him to grow and learn more from those who are teaching on a regular basis. He wants to grow up to be a language teacher, so we wanted him to learn from those who are teaching now as well. We also want him to learn as young as possible, so he can begin teaching as early as possible," said his father Ernie Stevens III.

"We may have missed days here and there but we made an effort to keep him engaged with the language through specific lessons or just day to day things," his father added.

According to Cornelius, language is the key to existence for the tribe.

"It's a fact, if you don't have your language you no longer exist as a nation. If you don't have the language you can't have your culture because all of your ceremonies are done in the language," she said. "It is extremely important that we continue to encourage the issue of language revitalization within our community."

The grant is in the second year with one year remaining. Cornelius has identified another grant they have targeted to continue the program.

"I think the grant was a stone that hit the water and all of these people are the ripples that wanted to learn the language," said Cornelius.

Skenandoah power outage report

By Kevin Rentmeester
DPW Electrical Manager

This is a brief review of the events of the power failure at Skenandoah in case anyone has questions.

On Tuesday night April 17th I received an emergency call from Jeremy Van De Hei stating that there was smoke and buzzing coming from the electrical room. Several lights and equipment were not working in the building. Jeremy called WPS to shut off power. En route, I called two of my electricians for back-up and equipment. This was an extremely hazardous situation.

Before WPS arrived we were able to isolate some of the electrical equipment to prevent possible damage. Because there was a high possibility of an electrical explosion, we could not further investigate the problem until WPS shut the power off.

After WPS arrived it was determined that the utility transformer on the exterior of the building had a catastrophic failure. The maintenance and repair of this equipment is the responsibility of WPS. The smoke from the transformer had entered the building through the electrical conduits. WPS immediately called in several crews to replace the transformer.

We shut off all interior breakers and notified WPS that after they were complete, we would have to check out all interior wiring before we could re-energize.

We returned the following morning with DPW electrical and HVAC crews to check out all equipment and panels to assure that it was safe to re-energize the building. Once we completed this, Jeremy called WPS to re-energize the building. They arrived a little over an hour later. Once Skenandoah was re-energized we did a recheck of building components to make sure everything was operational. Damage appeared to be limited to a TVSS unit.

The actions of DPW prevented severe damage and a lengthy outage to the Skenandoah complex.

Overtime

Of first concern in such a situation, is always the safety and welfare of anyone involved. Decisions to call personnel in are made based on information available at the time. Once employees are called in outside of their normal shift, there is a possibility of incurring overtime costs. Also considered in these situations is the risk of further damage to buildings and equipment, if no action is taken. Given the severity of this problem and potential risks, it was the decision of the DPW Facilities Director and Electrical Manager to request electricians to report to the building and to have the maintenance technician stay at the building until WPS made a determination of the extent of damage to their equipment. It was still not known for sure whether critical equipment was also damaged inside the facility.

The DPW Facilities Director and DPW Electrical Department Manager both reported to the building as soon as they were contacted of the situation. Since they are salaried, there are no overtime costs associated with their response. In addition, the DPW Area Manager and Development Division Director were immediately notified and updated on the situation as more information became available.

Once the determination was made that WPS had to replace and/or rebuild their transformer, the decision was made to allow the employees to go home since it would take the WPS crews at least eight hours to get equipment operational again. WPS continued to work throughout the night to have the equipment replaced by morning. If they hadn't, that half of the Skenandoah building would have been without power during normal working hours all of Wednesday. Fortunately, we do not have to pay for any costs incurred by WPS technicians.

In this incident, the three hourly DPW employees that reported to Skenandoah were clocked in four hours each on Tuesday night. One of the electricians had scheduled three hours personal time for Thursday, resulting in only one hour of overtime to be paid. The maintenance technician was not allowed time off during the week because he was previously scheduled to paint rooms at the Health Center. The Health Center operations had prepared a schedule of when rooms would be made available to paint each day. In order to stay on schedule and not disrupt the operations any further, the employee ended up with 4.5 hours of overtime for the week. The other electrician had Thursday and Friday scheduled for vacation and he did not receive any overtime for reporting to the building that night. The overtime for these 3 employees for this pay period was approximately $123 total.

Insurance Claim

Insurance claims are the responsibility of the Risk Management Department. Whenever there is property damage, DPW informs Mary Olson and/or Robert Keck in the Risk Management Department, as was done with this incident. They will advise us on what documentation they need such as reports, invoices, quotes, etc. if a claim is to be submitted or whether the accrual fund can be used to pay for expenses. As a guideline, the first $2,500 is paid by the department incurring the expenses. Total costs exceeding that amount may be covered by the accrual fund. An insurance claim is generally made only if the expenses exceed the $25,000 insurance deductible.

In this situation, the minimal amount of overtime will be covered by the Facilities Department. We are also waiting for the assessment of the damage to the Transient Voltage Surge Suppressor (TVSS) and costs to repair or replace it. Risk Management will make a determination on how to proceed with claims after we submit the total expenses for labor and equipment on this incident. They will also evaluate whether a claim can be submitted to WPS since their equipment failure caused the damage. On a positive note, because this surge protector was in place and functioning properly, it protected motors and other equipment in the Skenandoah building from major damage.

CenturyLink offers telephone assistance to individuals living on Tribal Lands

Low-income consumers may qualify for assistance that will reduce the cost of basic monthly telephone service. BACKGROUND ON BUSINESS

Five Nations Flooring, Inc

Offering Native customers a different option

By Travis Cottrell
Kalihwisaks

Michael Bacon has been working in the flooring business for more than 20 years. During a down economy Bacon found steady work doing various side jobs. He then decided to become his own boss and established Five Nations Flooring, Inc.

"We specialize in all types of flooring. Residential, commercial, you name it. Whether it's carpet, vinyl, wood, ceramic, a custom area, we install everything," Bacon said.

Being president and majority owner of Five Nations Flooring, Bacon is involved in all aspects of the business. His business also offers special pricing options to Oneida Tribal citizens.

"I'm basically an installation company but I do some sales also. If a tribal member comes in to the store with their tribal I.D. we use Five Nations Flooring to get them a better discount than they would get by going through Floors by Design," said Bacon.

Bacon's business shares a warehouse and office space with Floors by Design, another flooring company that Bacon has worked for.

"Because of my association with Floors by Design I can get flooring at a lower rate and I pass those savings on to customers," Bacon added.

So far work has been consistent for the young business.

"Five Nations Flooring has been in business since December 21st of 2011 so were coming up on six months pretty quick. So far business has been steady. Sometimes I'm out working seven days a week," said Bacon.

The flooring business recently completed a project for the Oneida Casino, installing new flooring in the security offices at the Irene Moore Activity Center.

"Right now I'm focused on catering my business to the Oneida Reservation and its tribal members. That's really the reason I started Five Nations Flooring, to give tribal customers another option, one that can get them high quality work at a discounted price," Bacon said.

Mike Bacon has over 20 years of experience in the flooring industry. Bacon recently became the president of his own flooring business.

Eventually Bacon would like to expand his business to provide neighboring tribes with flooring services. But for the time being the amount of work in Oneida continues to increase.

Five Nations Flooring prides itself on great customer service and invites potential customers to call for more information.

"If they have an idea of what they like they can call for an appointment and I would be more than happy to drive to their home and look at the area, take some measurements, and throw out some numbers," said Bacon.

Stamping Out Hunger at the Oneida Post Office

Letter Carriers getting ready to collect food on May 12, 2012

ONEIDA, WI—Letter carriers at the Oneida Post Office will "Stamp Out Hunger" on Saturday, May 12, when the annual food drive celebrates its 20th year. On that day, letter carriers will collect non-perishable food donations from homes as they deliver mail along their routes.

The National Association of Letter Carriers (NALC) Food Drive – held in conjunction with the Postal Service – is the largest one-day food drive in the nation. This joint effort will help feed families in all 50 states. Last year, 70.4 million pounds of food was collected across the country, resulting in more than 1 billion pounds of food collected since the drive began 20 years ago.

Closer to home, letter carriers at the Oneida Post Office are getting ready for this year's event and hoping to exceed last year's total of 378 pounds of food collected. "With the commitment of our employees and the support of community, we're excited to participate in this year's food drive," said Oneida Postmaster Cheryl Koenig. "We're asking everyone throughout the community to help us make this the most successful food drive in its 20 year history. Leaving a donation is as simple as leaving a bag of non-perishable food by your mailbox."

To participate in the 20th Stamp Out Hunger food drive, people are encouraged to leave a sturdy bag containing non-perishable foods, such as canned soup, canned vegetables, pasta, rice or cereal next to their mailbox prior to the time of regular mail delivery on Saturday, May 12.

Oneida letter carriers will collect these food donations as they deliver the mail and take them to the local food bank.

"Many families are struggling to make ends meet and put food on the table during these challenging economic times," said Koenig. "Food banks, pantries and shelters need our help as more families count on them for support."

Partners of this year's drive are the Campbell Soup Company, Feeding America, United Way, AFL-CIO, Valpak, AARP, Uncle Bob's Self Storage, and the National Rural Letter Carriers' Association.

The Postal Service receives no tax dollars for operating expenses and relies on the sale of postage, products and services to fund its operations.

Child Care

Recently it was brought to my attention regarding parent's concerns at our child care facilities. A team has been formed, along with management members, to insure the best interests of our children's needs are being taken care of. Although in its early stage, the team is investigating instances brought forward by some of the parents and after an audit is completed, the team, working with management, will address these concerns and provide feedback and corrective measures should they be needed.

ORCCC

This facility is growing in leaps and bounds. All of the wing structures have been erected and work is continuing. Some of the buildings are being wrapped and roofing materials are being laid. The main building has windows and solar panels installed. A minor glitch in the sprinkler system did arise, however, this problem has been fixed and construction is moving forward. Once this facility is completed it will be a place for our elders to move into and be proud of their Oneida heritage.

Larsen Road

This project is on schedule. A vendor has been selected and negotiations are ongoing to award the project. Construction should begin at that site in early May.

Also at this time the West Wind One Stop has been closed for remodeling and should be finished by late July or early August. This remodeling was contemplated to mirror the construction on West Mason Street, which is moving along nicely. Please continue to utilize one of the other One Stops available.

Councilman

This past week I had the opportunity to attend the Federal Review for the Head Start Program. Interaction with federal regulators required me to be interviewed about the Head Start Program and the many reports they issue throughout the month. Working with the Head Start Policy Council, we shared the monthly financials, the assessments being done, By-Laws for the Council, SOPs on how the Council members are appointed and monthly reports done by the managers of the different departments within Head Start.

After a weeklong review, the regulators' report shows the center is well within compliance of federal regulations and the center is doing a fantastic job. Some minor issues were noted and are being taken care of to correct them.

A big THANK YOU goes out to the Head Start Director, Joan Christnot, as well as the members on the Head Start Policy Council, and most of all to all the hard working teachers and employees of the Head Start Program.

Dream Homes

In a prior article I talked about the interest rate disparity in some of these homes. On or about June 1st those individuals whose interest rates are at 5% or 6% will receive a letter from the Division of Land Management outlining the process/criteria for refinancing their loan to the lower rate of 3.5% for elders and veterans and 4% to everyone else.

One of the criteria is the loan must be current. Other criteria will be spelled out in the letter. The refinancing will be for the current loan balance only and no cash disbursement will be given. There will be a $250.00 Administration fee associated with this refinance. The original fee was to be $500.00; however, the Land Commission did lower this rate. The estimated effective date of the first payment will be August 1st. The fee will not be waived.

Reservation Economic Summit

Last month Brandon Stevens, Tina Danforth and I had to opportunity to attend the RES. As well as the primary meetings, I also attended a number of seminars where we learned about business leadership, finance and investments, economic development, Tribal leadership as well as other topics. The seminars provided a well-rounded curriculum and new tools to bring back to the work area.

One area the summit dealt with was Internet Gaming. Quickly becoming the wave of the future, we were able to meet with a marketing guru about his ideas on how to build the perfect internet gaming site. We also met with the directors of OTIE, Nick and Terri Ni, about hiring more tribal members on the contracts awarded to OTIE.

Conclusion

Again I want to thank you, the general membership, for taking the time to read these articles and as always I am available to meet with you, should you so desire. I can be reached at 920-869-4482 or you can e-mail me at djordan1@oneidanation.org.

Traveling to Meetings

An open letter to Mr. Vince DelaRosa

Concerning the proposal that you had in the paper a little while back, are you seriously thinking that you could up the contingency of attending meetings in order to get the per capita payments?

If that is what you plan, have you thought about the people that live any distance from Oneida and the cost of getting there? Also, what happens if the meeting runs too long and we would have to stay overnight, we don't get our hotel and meals paid for by the tribe.

I live far enough away that I have to make sure I am making the trip worthwhile, doctor's appointments and grocery shopping all in the one day.

I can't believe that if this was put before the GTC that it would pass, and I sure if you got it on the agenda there would be an uproar or at least there should be.

I guess you need to think about the people that got you where you are today and if you want to keep that cushy job.

ONCOA Clarification

ONCOA is thankful for Vince DelaRosa's Housing Plan Presentation, however, ONCOA has not taken any action on Vince DelaRosa's Housing Presentation at this time.

From 1A/PCB

Department of Natural Resources. "We're looking forward to the project moving forward again."

NCR did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

NCR had dumped PCBs into the river between 1954 and 1971 as a byproduct of making carbonless paper. Production of PCBs was banned in 1979 after they were shown to cause cancer in wildlife and were likely carcinogenic to humans.

NCR had argued that other parties are also responsible for cleaning up the river. Its expert had concluded that NCR was responsible for only 9 percent of the PCBs in this season's cleanup area.

The judge said he pinned the costs on NCR in part because of the potential harm to the public should the cleanup be halted or slowed. If it's later determined that NCR paid too much, the company would be free to ask other parties to contribute to the cost, Griesbach added.

Earlier this month, Griesbach relieved Appleton Papers of its responsibility to pay, saying it had no direct liability for dumping PCBs. However, it is still responsible for certain indirect costs of remediation. Appleton Papers has spent more than $200 million in three years toward cleanup efforts.

Unfinished Business

1. Approve memorandum of agreement (MOA) – Business Committee and Trust/Enrollment Committee

Sponsor: Melinda J. Danforth

Excerpt from March 28, 2012: Motion by Patty Hoeft to defer this item to the April 11 Business Committee meeting, seconded by Vince DelaRosa. Motion carried unanimously

Motion by Vince DelaRosa to defer this item back to the Trust Committee, so that they can weigh in on the question of Division Director as it's titled in the draft we have before us, seconded by Patty Hoeft. Motion carried unanimously

New Business/Requests

1. Rescind Business Committee blanket travel authorization for BC liaison areas

Sponsor: Ed Delgado

Motion by Brandon Stevens to rescind Business Committee blanket travel authorization for BC liaison areas, seconded by Patty Hoeft. Motion carried with one opposition:

Opposed: Tina Danforth

For the record: Tina Danforth stated I opposed because one, the document that you submitted says that it would increase transparency of where and how we spend our time when we are not in the offices, from 8 to 4:30. While that may be an issue, it doesn't address the issue by rescinding a blanket travel order. The other thing too is, it also increases the cost of travel because by the time things come here to get approved, then it goes on to the concur system and once it's on a concur system, then it has to get approved by an officer and once an officer approves it then the tickets and hotel accommodations can be made. Until that is done, we can't make any bookings and now we can't book in advance and get lower fares. I actually had a case, where I had a travel request in the queue for concur and for some reason it didn't get approved by an officer and it was never noticed to my office and the day before my trip, I find out that because it was never approved in the queue for concur, it didn't get booked and because it didn't get booked, we lost the fare and because we lost the fare, then I had to get a very late fare notice. I was never informed until the day before that it never got approved. So that issue is going to continue to happen probably even more so because again, they're not getting approved through the system, because they have to get approved here and once they're approved here they have to get approved by an officer and it really increases the amount of fares. Those fares are only locked in for 24 hours and if you don't get to it in 24 hours it's gone.

Travel Reports

1. Treaty of Canandaigua, Nov. 9-13, 2011, Canandaigua, NY

Sponsor: Patty Hoeft

Motion by Vince DelaRosa to approve the travel report along with the recommendation that we work with our Cultural Heritage Department to see if they can find a way to ensure somehow our Tribe is connected to this event on a regular basis, seconded by Paul Ninham. Motion carried unanimously

Travel Requests

1. Indian Health Service Bemidji Area pre-negotiation meeting, May 15-17, 2012, Bloomington, MN

2. Review Oneida Golf Enterprise Board response to audit findings regarding issuance of complimentary items

Excerpt from March 28, 2012: Motion by Patty Hoeft to direct that the Oneida Golf Enterprise Board meet with the Business Committee in executive session at the next meeting, to explain the finding to the audit and prior to that meeting the nature of their discussion also be put in writing and submitted to the Business Committee, seconded by Vince DelaRosa. Motion carried unanimously.

Motion by David Jordan to defer for two weeks, giving the two new board members time to review the information, seconded by Paul Ninham. Motion carried unanimously

Unfinished Business/BC directives

1. Review Oneida Golf Enterprise Corporation breakeven analysis report – Bobbi Webster, President

Excerpt from March 28, 2012: Motion by Patty Hoeft that the Oneida Golf Enterprise Corporation provide a breakeven analysis to the Business Committee in two weeks, seconded by David Jordan. Motion carried unanimously.

Motion by Patty Hoeft to defer for two weeks, seconded by David Jordan. Motion carried with one abstention:

Abstained: Tina Danforth

For the record: David Jordan stated basically it is the same reason, because of the two new board members who are coming on, for them to look over all this information.

2. Re-designate Hobart Strategy team

Sponsor: Melinda J.

Present: Vice Chairman Greg Matson, Secretary Patty Hoeft, Council members Melinda J. Danforth, Vince DelaRosa, David Jordan, Paul Ninham, Brandon Stevens
Excused: Ed Delgado, Tina Danforth

Call to Order and Roll Call by Vice Chairman Greg Matson at 1:34 p.m.

Approve the agenda
Motion by Brandon Stevens to approve the agenda, seconded by Vince DelaRosa. Motion carried unanimously

Open Session
1. Adopt resolution using emergency action to repeal new Pardon and Forgiveness Law for 6 months and reinstate former Pardon Ordinance to provide additional time to create standard procedures necessary to implement the new law
Sponsor: Patty Hoeft, Tribal Secretary
Motion by Patty Hoeft to adopt the resolution, seconded by David Jordan. Motion withdrawn.
Motion by Vince DelaRosa to send the existing law to the Law Office and the LRO to work within 120 days to clean up any outstanding procedural issues, including recommendations on existing SOPS to get the pardon process moving forward, seconded by Paul Ninham. Motion carried unanimously
For the record: Vince DelaRosa stated the only reason I agree with the compromise is because we really need to get something moving. Preferably, we would try and get a pardon policy in place immediately. I'd like to stick with the existing policy but I do understand some of the concerns that the Council members have raised, along with some of the staff from the Gaming Commission and I've heard at least two other complaints. For that reason, in terms of compromising and trying to move forward, that's the reason why I advanced the motion and I appreciate the Committee's support.
Motion by Vince DelaRosa to adopt the resolution as submitted, regarding the emergency amendments to repeal the Pardon and Forgiveness Law and adoption of the Oneida Pardon Ordinance and that we strike line 56 and add that it would be a 120 days, instead of six months extension. Motion failed with no second.
Motion by David Jordan to defer this until next week Wednesday, the 25th, with the noted changes and a clean resolution, seconded by Brandon Stevens.
Motion carried unanimously
2. Appoint members to the temporary Pardon Screening Committee to include Vicki Deer, representative for Oneida social services, Lisa Skenandore and Eric Boulanger, Oneida Police Department representatives, and 4 members of the Oneida Business Committee that include the Tribal Secretary
Sponsor: Patty Hoeft, Tribal Secretary
No action.

Public Hearing Notice

11:30 a.m. • Norbert Hill Center, 2nd Floor - (BCCR)

May 1, 2012

Purpose:
Canons of Judicial Conduct Response Law

These Canons are intended to govern the conduct of Judges and Judicial Candidates under the Judiciary Act. These Canons also apply to law clerks, Judiciary staff attorneys, paralegals, court administrators, and others who are in close and constant working relationship with a Judge. The Canons establish overarching principles of judicial ethics; create a base from which all Judges are expected to strive; provide guidance and assist Judges in maintaining the highest standards of judicial and personal conduct; and establish a basis for the regulation of conduct through disciplinary measures. Specifically, the Canons require:

- A Judge to uphold and promote the independence, integrity, competence and impartiality of the Judiciary and avoid impropriety and the appearance of impropriety.
- A Judge's judicial duties to take precedence over all of the Judge's personal and extrajudicial activities, which shall be conducted in such a manner as to minimize the risk of conflicts with the obligations of judicial office.
- A Judge to avoid financial and business dealings that tend to reflect adversely on his or her impartiality or interfere with the performance of his or her judicial responsibilities.
- Judges and Judicial Candidates to affirm and display the respectful integrity and dignity of a person qualified to hold a position on the Judiciary and recommends they refrain from any political activity which might interfere with the performance of his or her judicial duties.

Public Hearing Process

I. Testimony:

A. Oral: There will be a 5 minute limit for all oral presentations. Each participant is encouraged to provide a written transcript of his/her oral testimony, to be submitted while present at the public hearing or within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the below named individuals.

B. Written: For those who cannot attend the scheduled public hearing or do not plan to speak at the hearing, the Oneida Tribe encourages those to submit written testimony. A maximum of ten (10) pages, doubled spaced, can be submitted within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the Tribal Secretary (Patricia Hoeft) or to the Legislative Reference Office Paralegal, Tonya Boucher, at the Norbert Hill Center, 2nd floor or mail to PO Box 365, Oneida WI 54155.

If you would like to obtain a copy of the above proposed law or have any questions as to the public hearing process you may contact Tonya Boucher at the Legislative Reference Office, via GroupWise tboucher@oneidanation.org Or call 1-800-236-2214 or 920-869-4240. # Wisconsin News

Occupy Madison demonstrators ordered to leave city owned lot

MADISON, WI (AP) – A Dane County judge has ordered an encampment that began as an Occupy Madison demonstration to leave a city-owned lot.

The judge denied a temporary restraining order that would have prevented city officials from removing the campers. They have until noon Tuesday to leave the site.

The Occupy Madison movement began last October as a demonstration against economic inequality and social injustice. But the encampment has evolved into a gathering spot of mostly homeless people. About 50 to 60 people have occupied the site.

Mayor Paul Soglin says the encampment has become a haven for drug use, assault and property crime. Soglin tells the State Journal the encampment will be treated as a hazardous waste site during cleanup because of reports of needles and bodily fluids.

UWSP prof to speak on poor students' barriers

STEVENS POINT, WI (AP) – A University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point instructor plans to deliver a talk on psychological barriers low-income college students face.

Jody Lewis is an assistant professor in the college's psychology department. She's scheduled to present a talk entitled "Social Class in Education: Psychological Factors Limit Upward Social Mobility" on campus the evening of May 10.

Lewis says her research focuses on factors that prevent poor students from graduating, how to improve classroom activities and testing methods and motivating students.

Obama names Jodi Gillette to Native American post

WASHINGTON (AP) – President Barack Obama has named a member of the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe to serve as his senior policy adviser for Native American affairs.

Obama on Friday announced the appointment of Jodi Gillette to advise him on Native American issues on the White House Domestic Policy Council. Gillette previously worked on Indian issues at the Interior Department.

Obama says Gillette has been a key member of his administration's efforts in Indian Country. He says she'll continue to ensure that Native American issues will have a seat at the table.

Gillette is an enrolled member of the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe, in North Dakota and South Dakota. She holds degrees from Dartmouth College and the University of Minnesota.

House GOP responds with own bill to protect women

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) – House Republicans determined to show women voters that they have their interests at heart on Wednesday announced plans to renew the Violence Against Women Act, the federal government's main domestic violence program.

The GOP proposal set up a possible showdown with a somewhat different version that Senate Democrats have advanced and has been pending for several weeks. The Senate began debate Wednesday on the Democratic version as talks continued.

VAWA, first enacted in 1994, has a history of being bipartisan and noncontroversial, but that's changed this election year. Democrats have accused Republicans of waging a war on women, and Republicans, led by presumptive presidential nominee Mitt Romney, have responded by emphasizing their sensitivity to women's issues.

The Senate bill has 61 sponsors, including eight Republicans, but parts of it have met resistance from others in the GOP.

Sen. Chuck Grassley, R-Iowa, joined by Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, is preparing an alternative that would alter several Democratic provisions. Their alternative would cap visas available to legal and illegal immigrants who suffer abuse at 10,000 a year, compared to 15,000 proposed by the Democratic bill offered by Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt. It does not specify, as the Democratic bill does, that violence against gays, lesbians and transgenders are part of the act. The Leahy bill expands the authority of Native American officials to handle cases of abuse of Indian women by non-Indians. The Republican substitute permits tribal authorities to go to federal court for protective orders on behalf of abused Native American women.

The base Senate bill would reauthorize VAWA for five years with funding of $659.3 million a year, down $136.5 million a year from the last VAWA act, which expired several months ago. The money goes to such programs as legal assistance for victims, enforcement of protection orders, transitional housing aid and youth prevention programs.

Sponsors of the House bill, which is still being drafted, said it would be close to the Grassley-Hutchison approach. It was introduced by 12 GOP women lawmakers and three members of the Republican leadership, including Majority Leader Eric Cantor of Virginia.

"We are not going to be looking at the controversial issues that would actually detract from VAWA," said Rep. Sandy Adams, R-Fla., the chief sponsor.

Rep. Kristi Noem, R-S.D., said that "unfortunately, in Congress there are some who'd like to make this a political play. They'd like to make a cheap shot and try to politicize it in an election year."

At an earlier news conference with a Native American woman who spoke of her experience with sexual abuse, Senate Democratic women also warned of the bill becoming a political football.

"Let us not put the country in jeopardy because the House wants to put forward a Republican-only bill," said Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif.

"These women don't deserve political theater," said Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash. She said she hoped the House would act in a bipartisan way. "We want to make sure they don't move us backwards."

The Senate Democrats insisted that they had not sought to pick a political fight with provisions on illegal immigrants or Native Americans. Boxer said that no women had ever been excluded from assistance in past VAWA acts and their bill was simply making that clear.

Adams said the House bill also differed from the Senate version by increasing resources for sexual assault investigations, spending more to reduce the backlog in rape kits and assuring that more money goes to victim programs instead of to Washington offices. She said the House bill could reach the floor for a vote by mid-May.

Boys and Girls Club of America

Alumni Selected for 2012 Hall of Fame

San Diego, CA – The Boys and Girls Club of America (BGCA) has been responsible for molding some of the greatest minds in America into the leaders of today. "Great Futures Start Here" is the nonprofit organization's motto, as they continue to reach out for the best interests of American youth across the country.

On May 2, NIGA's Chairman Ernie Stevens Jr. was inducted into the BGCA Alumni Hall of Fame during the organization's national convention in San Diego. The hall of fame features pro athletes, accomplished business leaders, Olympians and even award-winning actors.

Full list of Inductees:

- Cuba Gooding Jr., Academy Award-winning actor
- Ne-Yo, Grammy-winning singer/songwriter
- CC Sabathia, New York Yankees star pitcher, 5 time MLB All-Star, 2007 Cy Young
- David Lindsay-Abaire, Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright ("Rabbit Hole")
- Powers Boothe, Emmy-winning actor (Fox series "24 )
- Misty Copeland, soloist, American Ballet Company
- Anthony Lee Ervin, winner of seven NCAA swimming titles and a 2012 Olympic contender
- Ernest Stevens Jr., Chairman of the National Indian Gaming Association, leader/advocate
- Major General Darren W. McDew, Commander at Andrews Air Force Base

The diverse selection of actors, musicians, military veterans and leaders illustrate the tremendous job BGCA has done serving over 4.1 million youth over the past century.

Today, there are over 4,000 clubs across the country, providing youth with opportunities in education, fitness, social recreation, teen issues, and bullying prevention. These youth development programs have given teens and youth supervision for activities after-school and on weekends.

Ernest Stevens Jr.

The Oneida Boys Club taught Ernest Stevens Jr. how to be a kid and got him back into school. His much-needed male role models gave him the chance to compete in sports and helped him develop self-discipline. Today, Chairman Stevens is highly regarded for his strong stance on sovereignty and Indian self-determination.

Since partnering with American Indian tribes, the BGCA have provided outreach to over 90,000 American Indian youths. They now have 196 clubs in Indian country and 9 more on the way.

Tribe to raise barrels dumped in Lake Superior

RED CLIFF, WI (AP) – A Wisconsin American Indian band plans to lead an effort this summer to raise barrels dumped into Lake Superior during the Cold War.

After four years of planning, crews are set to raise 70 of the Department of Defense drums containing ammunition parts from Lake Superior.

The Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa is leading the effort. Funding comes from a Defense Department program to clean up munitions dumps on Indian territory.

Wisconsin Public Radio reports the project has been talked about since it was first made public in the 1970s that some 1,500 barrels are on the lake's bottom four miles from Duluth, Minn.

Seventy is considered a number that could give a scientifically accurate sampling to confirm whether or not the 55-gallon barrels are an environmental threat.

Corn and Soybean FSA Loan deadline approaching

Appleton, WI – Producers interested in a Farm Service Agency Marketing Assistance Loan (MAL) are reminded that May 31, 2012, is the deadline to put 2011 crop corn and soybeans under a 9-month loan.

A MAL is available to producers who share in the risk of producing a crop. To be eligible, a producer must maintain continual beneficial interest in the crop from harvest through the earlier of the date the loan is repaid or Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) takes title of the commodity.

In addition, commodity loan eligibility requires compliance with conservation and wetland protection requirements; beneficial interest requirements, acreage reporting and ensuring that the commodity meets CCC minimum grade and quality standards. The quality of the commodity in farm storage must be maintained throughout the term of the loan.

Violating provisions of a marketing assistance loan may trigger administrative actions, such as assessing liquidated damages, calling the loan and denial of future farm-stored loans.

For more information or to apply for a MAL, contact your county office at least a week prior to the time you would like the loan.

The Great Lakes Inter-Tribal Council (GLITC) will support member tribes in expanding self-determination efforts by providing services and assistance. GLITC will use a broad range of knowledge and experience to advocate for the improvement and unity of tribal governments, communities, and individuals. Throughout these activities, GLITC will maintain deep respect for tribal sovereignty and reservation community values.

Harvard University making a difference in pursuing education

No tuition and no student loans

Harvard University announced that undergraduate students from low-income families will pay no tuition. In making the announcement, Harvard's president Lawrence H. Summers said, "When only ten percent of the students in elite higher education come from families in the lower half of the income distribution, we are not doing enough. We are not doing enough in bringing elite higher education to the lower half of the income distribution."

If you know of a family earning less than $60,000 a year with an honor student graduating from high school soon, Harvard University wants to pay the tuition. The prestigious university recently announced that from now on undergraduate students from low-income families can go to Harvard for free... no tuition and no student loans!

To find out more about Harvard offering free tuition for families making less than $60,000 a year, visit Harvard's financial aid website at:

A safety training is required on all construction sites and this will be available for all the certified monitor training. This certification will allow participants to be qualified to be on a construction site doing site monitoring. Through the tribe's process each one of us have a role in projects and this will enhance the quality and the quality of all the projects that we have to be involved in.

Great Team Work! This is the Oneida Way.

Obama announces Senior Policy Advisor for Native American Affairs

WASHINGTON, DC – Today President Barack Obama announced the appointment of Jodi Gillette as Senior Policy Advisor for Native American Affairs. As a member of the Domestic Policy Council, Gillette will advise the President on issues impacting Indian Country.

"Jodi Gillette will be an important member of my Administration's efforts to continue the historic progress we've made to strengthen and build on the government-to-government relationship between the United States and tribal nations," said President Obama. "She has been a key member of my administration's efforts for Indian Country, and will continue to ensure that Native American issues will always have a seat at the table."

Jodi Gillette, Senior Policy Advisor for Native American Affairs, White House Domestic Policy Council

Jodi Gillette, an enrolled member of the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe in North Dakota and South Dakota, was previously the Deputy Assistant Secretary to the Assistant Secretary-Indian Affairs for Policy and Economic Development in the U.S. Department of the Interior. Prior to joining the Assistant Secretary's staff, she served as Deputy Associate Director of Intergovernmental Affairs and Associate Director of Public Engagement, where she was responsible for the communication and interaction between tribal nations and the White House. She played a key role in the White House Tribal Nations Conference in 2009 and 2010, where the President hosted tribal leaders from across the U.S.. Prior, Ms. Gillette had served as executive director of the Native American Training Institute in Bismarck, a non-profit offering technical assistance and training to tribal, state and local governments in the area of human service delivery systems. She also had served as an economic development planner for her tribe in Fort Yates, N.D. Ms. Gillette holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in Government and Native American Studies from Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H. (1991) and a Master of Public Policy degree from the University of Minnesota's Humphrey School of Public Affairs in Minneapolis (2003).

DD Form 214 - Social Security Benefit

Please share this with anyone who had active duty service between January 1957 to December 31, 2001, and planning for retirement. In a nutshell it boils down to this:

You qualify for a higher social security payment because of your Military service, for active duty any time from 1957 through 2001 (the program was done away with 1 January 2002). Up to $1200 per year of earnings credit credited at time of application - which can make a substantial difference in social security monthly payments upon your retirement. You must bring your DD-214 to the Social Security Office and you must ask for this benefit to receive it!

Social Security website: http://www.ssa.gov/retire2/military.htm

This is something to put in your files for when you apply for Social Security down the road.. It is NOT just for retirees, BUT anyone who has served on active duty between January 1957 to December 31, 2001.

FYI - this benefit is not automatic, you must ask for it!

We've all been on active duty between 1957 and 2001 or know someone who has.

Passing on good information for all you military folks when you apply for social security. I know this may be too early for some of you to think about social security but, keep living and you will get there.

Elm runs toward conference contention

By Travis Cottrell
Kalihwisaks

West De Pere High School junior Bryce Elm braces himself at the starting line of the 1600-meter track event. The gun sounds and Elm sprints out ahead of the pack. His lead quickly increases to 10 feet, 20 feet, then 30. He easily wins the race while making the one-mile run look effortless.

Elm has been participating in distance running since he was in seventh grade. For him running long distances was always where he excelled.

"I've always run distance; I never found myself to be a sprinter. I tried it once and it didn't work out so well," Elm said.

For Elm the longer the distance the stronger he is in that event. But running in the Phantom's track meets two times per week can cause some physical fatigue.

"My favorite event to run is the two-mile, I've been running the two-mile back to back for the past three weeks so the coaches gave me a little break from that event," said Elm.

Elm's body may be getting a rest from his favorite event but his mind is still focused on his two-mile time.

"For the two-mile I am fourth in the conference. But I am not that far away from the top so I think it's going to be a close one this year. My goal is to be at ten minutes flat for a two-mile time. If I get that then I think I'll have a good shot at winning the conference," Elm said.

During the 2012 high school track season Elm has been registering some impressive times

"So far this year my best two-mile time is 10 minutes and 17 seconds. So I have a few seconds I need to trim. But today I ran my mile in four minutes and 51 seconds so I think it's going to be close," Elm said of his running times.

Although Elm is the most competitive in his distance events he participates in athletics year round to stay in shape.

"I do cross-country in the fall, wrestling in the winter, then spring track, and I play baseball in the summer," Elm said.

However after taking part in all of those sports Elm still wants to compete in the events where he sees the most success.

"My favorite sport to play is probably wrestling. I don't really like running in particular but I am good at it and I like winning," Elm said while cracking a smile.

Elm's future goal is to run cross-country and track at the college level.

"I would like to do some college running. That's my goal for down the road. So far I have one college in mind for running, Concordia in St. Paul, Minnesota. They sent me a letter and are interested in me for cross-country and track," said Elm.

More letters from college programs may arrive over the next year. By rule colleges cannot speak with high school athletes until they finish their junior year. But if Elm continues to run two-miles in 10 minutes, more college recruiting letters should find their way to Elm's door.

UND alums to start anti-Fighting Sioux campaign

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) ~ The University of North Dakota's alumni association is starting a campaign to get rid of the school's Fighting Sioux nickname.

The association's director and the chairman of the school's foundation are holding news conferences in Fargo, Bismarck, Grand Forks and Minot on Tuesday.

They're seeking support for Measure 4. If voters approve the ballot measure in the June primary election, the Board of Higher Education will be able to carry out plans to retire the nickname.

The NCAA says the nickname is offensive to American Indians, and the association says it will penalize UND if the name keeps being used.

State law now requires that the university's teams be known as the Fighting Sioux. If the ballot measure is approved, that law will be repealed.

TRIAD Program Enhanced with Nutrition Classes

Good News! Oneida Diabetes Team is proud to announce enhancements made to the TRIAD Program. The TRIAD program is a structured exercise program for patients diagnosed with diabetes on behalf of collaboration between the Oneida Community Health Center Diabetes Team, Health Promotion Disease Prevention Department, and Oneida Family Fitness. To improve participant success, Registered Dietitian and Certified Diabetes Educator, Betty Schwantes will be providing monthly nutrition classes at Oneida Family Fitness Education Room, covering the following topics:

1. Carbohydrate Counting/Plate Method,
2. Label Reading,
3. Navigating the Grocery Store, and
4. Sports Nutrition for Diabetes.

Beginning May 1, 2012, TRIAD program participants will be required to attend the group nutrition classes within 12 months. A $25 Oneida Retail Gift Card will be offered to those who attend at least one nutrition class every 3 months. Stay tuned for informational flyers with dates and times.

For more information, please contact Margaret VanDen Heuvel, Diabetes Program Supervisor, at (920) 869-4941.

Report: Counties fail to meet child welfare rules

OSHKOSH, Wis. (AP) _ Child protection workers across Wisconsin have made numerous mistakes that have led to children being hurt and even killed, according to a report published Sunday.

A review of state records by Gannett Wisconsin Media found that county agencies failed to meet formal state child welfare standards in one-third of the most serious cases of abuse and neglect in Wisconsin in 2010 and 2011.

The Oshkosh Northwestern said reports from the Department of Children and Families show that counties failed to meet standards in 46 of the 129 incidents involving abuse or neglect that were officially characterized as "egregious" in 2010 and 2011.

Of those 46 cases, 29 involved guardians who had been reported to authorities at least once before a child was hurt or killed.

The cases included the death of 2-year-old Jovani Martinez, who was killed over spilled milk in 2010. The 40-year-old boyfriend of the toddler's mother punched the toddler repeatedly for shaking his bottle and sprinkling milk on his newborn sister. The blows perforated the Racine boy's intestines, broke his ribs, and lacerated his liver and pancreas.

Jovani's mother waited several days before taking him to the hospital, where he died.

The state later determined that county child protection workers, who had been alerted to trouble at the boy's home eight times since 2007, failed to take proper action. The agency's assessments of the family were incomplete and untimely, the state said.

Kimberly Day, coordinator of the National Coalition to End Child Abuse Deaths, called the findings alarming.

"There's a pretty large spectrum of what can happen as a result of these types of incidents, but death is the most tragic. And that does happen," Day said.

Wisconsin officials, however, stopped short of calling it a problem in a state where 1 out of every 270 children - a total of 4,839 - were victims of abuse or neglect in 2010 alone.

"I don't necessarily think that we have a crisis or problem, that we're missing abuse that we're not seeing," said John Elliott, deputy administrator in the Department of Children and Families' Division of Safety and Permanence. "We don't think we're broken now, but we think there's room for improvement."

The agency outlined its investigation standards in 2007 in a 72-page document. It details items such as the amount of information child protection workers should gather, the speed at which they should act and the criteria on which to base decisions.

The public disclosure reports, as well as audits of nine counties examined by the state since 2010, cite inadequate practices such as child protection workers failing to gather enough information to properly determine whether to investigate abuse claims, as well as agencies taking too long to complete investigations, incorrectly dismissing referrals and losing information.

Supervisors of county agencies said they work diligently to ensure they're correctly interpreting and following the rules. But insufficient resources, confusing standards and the complexity of the job can get in the way.

Oneida Community Integrated Food Systems

The Oneida Food Distribution Program

Special to Kalihwisaks

The Oneida Food Distribution Program opened its doors in the old Oneida tribal bldg. on July 1, 1980. It operated under the umbrella of the Great Lakes Indian Tribal Council (GLITC) until Sept. 30, 1983.

It was at that time that the Food Distribution Program on Indian Reservations (FDPIR) was officially activated here in Oneida on Oct 1, 1983 to the present time.

The program is administered at the federal level by the Food & Nutrition Service (FNS), an agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, or USDA as we know it. FDPIR is managed locally by either Indian Tribal Organizations (ITO's) or an agency of a state government. Currently there are approximately 257 tribes receiving benefits under FDPIR through 98 ITO's and 5 state agencies.

The agreement to administer the FDPIR is between the state agency, in this case the Oneida Nation, and USDA. Therefore, we are required to operate within the USDA guidelines as well as Oneida policies & procedures.

The USDA agreement or contract requires the ITO's to order, receive, warehouse, and distribute USDA commodities according to the USDA 501 handbook of regulations. Also to offer nutrition education with the help of state, federal, and Oneida nutritionists, as well as outreach to potentially eligible households with information of the services we provide, and finally, referral to other entities that can meet needs that we in the Food Distribution Program cannot satisfy.

Our service area is the rural areas of Brown and Outagamie counties as well as those of Door, Kewaunee, and Manitowoc. Inside the reservation boundaries any eligible household can receive our services. Outside the reservation only eligible Indian households can be serviced. We cannot service any city or town that has a population of over 10,000 with the exception of Green Bay that is based on a waiver agreement reached with USDA in 1992. This allows our program to service Indian households if they meet program eligibility criteria. The prevailing rule of eligibility maintains that low-income American Indians, and non-Indian households residing on a reservation, and those Indian households living in approved areas near a reservation, that contains at least one person, who is a member of a federally recognized tribe, are eligible to participate in the Food Distribution Program.

Those communities that we cannot service directly are Allouez, De Pere, Ashwaubenon, Appleton, Kaukauna, and Grand Chute.

Households are certified based on income and resource standards set up by the federal government, and must be recertified as often as necessary, or at a minimum of every 12 months. Households may not participate in the Food Distribution Program and the Food Stamp Program (SNAP) in the same month.

Each month, participating households receive a food package to help them maintain a nutritionally balanced diet. We offer a nutritious food package consisting of fresh fruits and vegetables as well as wholesome meat products of frozen ground beef, chicken, turkey hams, and roast beef, and when available, ground buffalo and regular hams during the fall season. We also have a full line of canned fruits and vegetables in addition to an assortment of fruit juices, cereals, and other wholesome products.

Our food package from the USDA is worth approximately $100 per person per month, and is well balanced in all food groups. Over the years our caseload has fluctuated between 400 to 1000 certified participants. The average caseload in 2011 was over 500 clients monthly. In order to be an effective program, the Food Distribution Program continually assesses the needs of its participants through various surveys and questionnaires, to make sure we are addressing all of our requirements.

The Oneida Food Distribution Program is actively involved and an integral part of OCIFS (Oneida Community Integrated Food Systems) originally established in 1994. OCIFS was formed to develop a strong food infrastructure for the Oneida Nation. It includes tsyunhe'hkw^, Oneida Nation Farms, Apple Orchard, Oneida Comprehensive Health Division, and Food Distribution program.

SEOTS Summer Youth Programs

By Mark W. Powless

On Monday, June 18, 2012 Southeastern Oneida Tribal Services will be kicking off another summer of youth activities. Our youth programs will be offered to two different age groups. Ages 7-11 will meet every Monday and ages 12-16 will meet every Thursday. Neither group will meet during the week of July 4th. We will also have a college student working as our summer intern assisting with the youth this year.

The theme for the summer programs is 'I am a Leader'. It is a result of feedback from our summer youth participants in 2011. We will explore leadership from an Oneida cultural perspective as well as the American perspective. The exploration will include featured speakers who are considered leaders in their fields as well as visits to organizations that have assumed a leadership role in the community. During our past programs, the goal for SEOTS was to create a fun and exciting program that would broaden the minds of our youth. This year will be no exception!

During the field trips, we will journey as far as Chicago and the Oneida Reservation. Parents should dress their children appropriately. We will also conclude the programs with the much anticipated trip to Six Flags Great America. Parent chaperones are encouraged to attend as well, although space is limited. There is no cost for participation; however we do ask that parents send a bag lunch with their children.

For more information, including a complete schedule of events, SEOTS will be hosting a parent information meeting on Wednesday, June 6 at 6:00pm. All interested parents and youth are encouraged to attend.

One man standoff causes site lockdown

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

A 30-year old Antigo man surrendered to police after a 4 ½-hour standoff on Commissioner Street in Site I in Oneida on Saturday afternoon.

At 10 a.m. on Saturday morning the man's ex-girlfriend notified police he was at her residence on Echo Lane in Ashwaubenon with a handgun. He then left the residence.

Officers from the Oneida Police Department located the man's car in Site I about a half-hour later when the standoff started as the man refused to exit his vehicle.

Police utilized a robot from the Brown/Outagamie County bomb squad to negotiate a surrender while the robot operator was able to determine the man was drinking and had a handgun through a monitor. The robot also placed stop sticks around the vehicle in an attempt to immobilize it.

Around 3:00 p.m. the suspect surrendered to Oneida Police Officers and SWAT team members. After his surrender, a loaded handgun along with a shotgun with ammunition was recovered.

Authorities confirmed only one shot was fired and it was from officers attempting to disable the suspect's vehicle.

The standoff forced a lockdown in the area including the Oneida Community Library along with the Civic Center, which was hosting a basketball tournament. It also closed sections of Highway 54 and no vehicles were allowed in or out of Site I.

He was arrested officially arrested by the Ashwaubenon Police Department and is being held in the Brown County Jail. Personnel from the Oneida Police Department along with the Brown County Sherriff's Department, Ashwaubenon Police

McLester sees history go full circle

Lee "Gordy" McLester III has had a life-long interest in Oneida history which led to his involvement with the Oneida History Conferences and in helping to create six books concerning Oneida's past.

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

In recognition of Older Americans Month, the Kalihwisaks will interview Oneida elders for the month of May.

Lee "Gordy" McLester III tried to decline being interviewed for the Kalihwisaks Elder Month series, but considering he's produced over 500 videotaped interviews of Oneida elders, it seems only appropriate to start with him.

McLester is the son of Lee G. McLester Jr. and Pearl "Schuyler" McLester. His father got a job as a machinist in Detroit and moved the family there when McLester was two-years-old. They stayed until the end of War World II.

It was there McLester developed an interest in Oneida history after having learned there were three Oneida communities from grandparents and people around him. He tried to learn more about their shared past.

"I went into the library at school and I tried to find out as much as I could. The little research I did as a grade school person, there wasn't anything. There was a paragraph, two paragraphs, one paragraph, no paragraphs, in different books, but there was nothing comprehensive," he said. "The only time you had something Indian was Thanksgiving."

When the McLesters returned to Wisconsin, the young scholar tried again.

"We came back here and it was much the same. When I went into the libraries in Seymour, they had two paragraphs, one paragraph, no paragraph, in the school system. It just wasn't there, and I wanted to learn more about it," he said.

After high school, McLester served in the Marines Reserves and later went to vocational school. He married Betty Benson and they moved to Milwaukee where he worked in a plant and at the post office.

"But I didn't really care for the environment, so we moved back probably around 1961- 62. We got a piece of land around here, and at that time there was nobody on this road. The roads were gravel if you could get down them. The electricity … was about a half a mile away," he said.

At the time, there were no loans available for building on the reservation. With the help of their families, the young couple built a basement and lived in it for two years.

"At that time we were able to get electricity down here, but we didn't have any kind of running water, no telephone, and we had to cut wood for the heat," he said.

Eventually, McLester was able to get discarded lumber from dismantled refrigerator cars and a $500 loan from a revolving fund from Oneida.

"Proverbial one stick at a time," he said.

McLester's children were going to school, and running into the same void of information when it came to Native American history as he did.

"We went to the school board, and they said 'that's all we have, we don't have anything. If there's going to be something, it's got to be developed.' So what we did is a group of us parents got together and we got some people to help us," he said. The group got help from people working on the land claim, and developed curriculum. The effort also started the home school coordinators program, now referred to as Youth Enrichment Services (YES) Advocates.

"At the same time there was a group of us that we

Five Oneida students were among those who were recognized at the University of Wisconsin - Green Bay's 12th annual Celebrating Success program that was held on the university's campus on Friday, May 4, 2012.

Noelle Metoxen - Oneida Nation High School, Mariah Metoxen - Seymour High School, Emily Pelky - Seymour High School, Freddie Miller - Oneida Nation High School, and Jessica House - Oneida Nation High School were the Oneida students who were nominated for the award.

The Celebrating Success program rewards local African-American, Native American, Hispanic, and Asian high school students who impact their schools and communities in a positive manner.

Each area school nominates three juniors who have done well academically, demonstrate good role model traits, and positively impact their communities and their future.

Department, Hobart/Lawrence Police Department and Outagamie County Sherriff's office responded to the incident.

The man was considered wanted on parole violations. He was arrested on three felonies that include being a felon in possession of a firearm, recklessly endangering safety, and failure to comply with officers attempting to take a person into custody. He also faces misdemeanor charges of possession of a firearm while intoxicated, and intentionally pointing a firearm towards another.

Oneida Police Department Chief Rich Van Boxtel credits the cooperation of the participating agencies in resolving the incident.

"This incident demonstrated the ability of local law enforcement to come together to deal with an emergency. Being able to have Oneida Police, Ashwaubenon Public Safety, Brown County Sheriffs Department, Hobart - Lawrence Police, and Outagamie County Sheriffs Department respond to an emergency to work collaboratively and ensure the safety of our community resulted in no one being hurt and a peaceful resolution to the incident," said Van Boxtel.

Housing, proposed mega-farm discussed at special OBC meeting

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

The Oneida Business Committee (OBC) held a special meeting on Thursday, May 3 engendering discussion of the state of housing on the reservation.

Present: Ed Delgado - Chairman, Greg Matson – Vice Chairman, Patty Hoeft – Secretary, Councilmembers Paul Ninham, Brandon Stevens, Vince, DelaRosa, and David Jordan.

The first item on the agenda was a request from the Oneida Housing Authority (OHA) Director Dale Wheelock to activate $1.6 million from the Financial Year (FY) 2012 Indian Housing Program (IHP) funds for construction of 8 to 10 homes in the Green Valley Neighborhood. Wheelock explained that the single family houses would be half rentals and half for home ownership. He stated the fund modification was necessary due to current construction being held up by a lawsuit.

"We could be in construction in June. It keeps from laying off some of our construction workers as well as have some prime time for construction," said Wheelock.

The lawsuit causing the modification request involves an Oneida contractor who is also an employee of the Oneida Nation. Recently, the OBC has been enforcing the Independent Contractor Policy passed in the early 1990's. Chief Council Jo Anne House explained why enforcement was necessary.

"That policy said if you're an employee of the tribe, you can't work for the tribe as a contractor," she said. "We put that together because … that leads to liability for the tribe beginning with taxation and employer-employee taxes, contractor taxes, and it just goes downhill from there, because if there's an injury on the job, and the individual's determined in an IRS audit that they're an employee of the tribe, then that injury on the job becomes the tribe's employment issue."

Chairman Ed Delgado expressed concern about a lack o input concerning the construction of the three-bedroom houses.

"I'm feeling quite slighted here because I called this meeting on the pretext that we were going to decide somewhat how this site would look. Would it be all single family, or would it be a combination of duplexes and single family. I don't see any option for that," said Delgado.

Wheelock replied that the housing plan had been in place for two years.

"That was laid out before we even submitted the grant application for the infrastructure," he said.

Councilman Vince DelaRosa expressed concern over the estimated cost of construction for each home, but Councilman Greg Matson spelled out the debate of building inexpensively versus building quality.

"At $124,000 you can build a two-by-four structure, limit the R (value) in the insulation, cut back on some of the amenities that are now in place, and if that is the ultimate goal, then for sake of conversation, to build a cheaper structure, then we would as Business Committee would have to own that decision, and we're OK with providing the members with … more burden placed on them on the maintenance of that home," said Matson.

Secretary Patty Hoeft brought up a concern that the proposed project will also be delayed by an injunction concerning the bid process.

"It's more likely than not," answered House.

The OBC passed the modification request with the make-up of the houses to be decided by the Community Development Committee.

The OBC deferred the July 2, 2012 GTC Agenda, as well as an Environmental Resource Board (ERB) opposition to Oneida Tribe partnership with Holsum Dairies, LLC, however they held discussion on the proposed 4000 head dairy.

ERB Chairman Tom Oudenhoven stated that his board needed to meet to discuss the tour of Holsum's facilities they had conducted on Wednesday, May 2.

"I'm still upset with the water, the need for high capacity wells," said Oudenhoven.

Delgado raised the issue of bringing in revenue.

"We should be turning over quite a bit of profit in the lease of our lands and in the use of our lands," he said. "If we're going to be a successful tribe, we have to utilize what we have and make some money out of the investments that the General Tribal Council has made in the purchase of land."

Correction: In the May 3, 2012 Kalihwisaks on page 6B, the Kalihwisaks printed an article DD 214 Increased Social Security Benefits for Vets.

Spotlight on Social Security

Military Service and Social Security

By Ken Hess
Social Security Public Affairs Specialist for Wisconsin

Each year, on November 11, America observes Veterans Day and honors the men and women who have served in our nation's Armed Forces. Many of our Vietnam era veterans are now nearing retirement age or are already there. It is important that they — and other American service personnel — know just what retirement benefits they can count on from Social Security as they make their future financial plans.

Like most of the civilian workforce, all current military personnel pay Social Security taxes and earn Social Security coverage. Earnings for active duty military service or active duty training have been covered under Social Security since 1957. Also, earnings for inactive duty service in the reserves (such as weekend drills) have had Social Security coverage since 1988.

Ken Hess

In addition to regular military pay, Social Security adds special earnings credits to an individual's Social Security record when he or she serves in the military. The extra earnings are for periods of active duty or active duty training. If, for example, a person served in the military between 1957 and 1977, he or she has been credited with $300 in additional earnings for each calendar quarter in which active duty basic pay was earned. These extra earnings may help someone qualify for Social Security or increase the amount of their Social Security benefit.

The number of credits an individual needs to qualify for Social Security depends on his or her age and the type of benefit. Any future Social Security benefit payment depends on a person's earnings, averaged over a working lifetime. Generally, the higher a person's earnings, the higher his or her Social Security benefit will be.

And remember that Social Security is more than retirement. If a worker becomes disabled before reaching retirement age, he or she may be eligible for Social Security disability benefits. A disabled worker's spouse and dependent children also may be eligible for benefits. If a worker dies, the widow or widower and dependent children may be eligible for Social Security survivors benefits.

If you, or someone you know, were wounded while on active duty in the military, find out more about what Social Security can do by visiting our website designed specifically for wounded warriors: www.socialsecurity.gov/woundedwarriors. There, you will find answers to a number of commonly asked questions, as well as other useful information about disability benefits and Supplemental Security Income (SSI).

Veterans and others who are within 10 years of retirement age should begin planning for retirement. A good place to start is with Social Security's Retirement Estimator at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator. For more information, you can read our fact sheet, Military Service and Social Security, which is available on our website at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10017.html.

After the favorable Supreme Court decision in 1985, activity on behalf of the New York Land Claims was accelerated considerably. That meant a lot of political contacts had to be made by the negotiators and the Oneida Land Claims Commission members. In that context, I visited the home of Edward "Teddy" Kennedy in MacLean, Virginia for an event. His sister, Eunice Schriver was there. Governor Ann Richards (Texas) was there, too. Teddy attempted to capture her quote from the previous Democratic convention and said "Poor George (Bush). He can't help it if he was born with a silver spoon in his mouth". I was sitting next to Governor Richards and I whispered "He didn't get it right, did he?" She acknowledged that he did not. The quote was "Poor George. He can't help it if he was born with a silver foot in his mouth."

On one occasion, Bill Gollnick had an appointment to attend a reception at the home of J. Willard "Bill" Marriott in Potomac, Maryland. Mr. Gollnick was unable to attend and asked if I would and I did. I arrived about ten minutes early (not advised) and Bill Marriott asked me if I would like to see his Ferraris. So, I viewed them all, about ten and sat in half of them. They were in a special building adjoining his house. Then, he proceeded to show me the furnishings, which were European antiques.

I was there to converse with Senator Robert Joseph "Bob" Dole. He served in Italy in WW II and was wounded twice. He was the chairman of the Committee on Finance. I discussed our problem about some current legislation with him and he quickly said "We're not going to let that happen". That's all I needed to know.

Joan Rivers has a very swank apartment on Park Avenue in New York. She was hosting a fund raising event for Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan. Her dog had a cute little silk house underneath the grand piano. Joan has a library that she showed me. I'm always interested in libraries and books. I asked Senator Moynihan about the Treaty of Canandaigua. He responded, "Ah, yes! Timothy Pickering". He proceeded to tell me the whole story. Timothy Pickering was the Commissioner sent to the Treaty negotiations by President George Washington. Senator Moynihan was an historian and he knew the histories of the tribes in the state of New York, which he represented. That was revealing. I did not have to educate him on the matter as I had so many others of his station.

I was the Area Vice-President for NCAI (National Congress of American Indians) for the Minneapolis Area. Alvina Grey Bear was the representative from the Dakotas and Helen Sanders Mitchell was the Secretary. We became fast friends. Alvina was from Standing Rock Reservation and Helen was from the Quinault Reservation in Washington State. She came from a timbering tribe and she actively worked in the woods. She owned her own lumbering business. Years later, she sued the United States (representing one hundred other members) for mismanagement of their timber—and won! The case is now known as the Mitchell case. Alvina has passed on to the Spirit World. Helen is currently a board member of The Indian Land Working Group.

Lucy Covington was from the Coville Reservation in Washington. She was also a rancher and a fighter for the tribal lands. On the other side of the political fence was Senator Henry M. "Scoop" Jackson. The majority of the Business Committee was in favor of termination, but they called it liquidation, where every member would get a payment. Lucy employed Charles Trimble as her PR man in the fight. She won! Senator "Scoop" Jackson was slated to introduce the termination legislation. Before this event and at my request, he had arranged for an Air Force Carrier to take Soila Federico and her mother to the Burn Hospital in San Antonio. He was the Chair of the Armed Services Committee. Soila died after 23 days there. She had fallen in a black iron vat of rendering lard. Sonia was her identical twin sister. The Federico family (mother and many children) lived across the border in Old Mexico. The mother would regularly go to Super Markets in the United States (mostly Tucson) and collect all the meat scraps they discarded. She brought them home to render out (fry out) the fat. The children were so hungry for meat that they tried to fish out the pieces floating on top of the black caldron, which was sitting on a very hot fire. Soila slipped and fell in backwards with her face, hands and feet not having been burned. I regularly went to their home on many occasions. They had a black iron wood stove in the adobe house and a dirt floor. The Army Burn Hospital was outside of San Antonio. She was given the best of care there.

There are many more notable persons that made a difference in my life over the years, and I will cover their activities in another column in the future.

Annual Cleanout and Planting Party

GREEN BAY, WI – As part of On Broadway, Inc.'s (OBI) ongoing community development efforts, OBI announces the 2012 Planter Cleanout Day and Planting Parties. The cleanout day is scheduled for Thursday, May 17 from 9 a.m. until noon. The Planting Party is scheduled for the following Thursday, May 24, from noon until dusk. OBI is currently seeking volunteers for both dates.

"It's great to see people coming together to enhance and beautify the Broadway District", said Christopher Naumann, Executive Director of On Broadway, Inc. "This community pride has really contributed to the resurgence of the Broadway District over the past sixteen years."

Partnerships have been crucial to the project's ongoing success. Plant content and maintenance are provided through partnerships with various businesses and organizations. The Broadway Business Improvement District, Schroeder's Flowers, the Green Bay Botanical Gardens, and Wild Ones have been valuable partners with On Broadway, Inc. in these efforts. Stone Silo Prairie Gardens and Tidy Landscapes, LLC also assist with ongoing planning and management as well. OBI is grateful for such strong community investment by its partners.

The Broadway District underwent its first phase of the streetscape improvement project in 1998 which resulted in the addition of new benches, planters, and lighting elements. This project began to beautify the Broadway District, creating a comfortable, safe, and appealing pedestrian friendly, urban atmosphere. Year after year, the planter pots along Broadway have blossomed into one of the great draws of the public realm, with over 50 planters blooming with great varieties of color and life.

For more information or to volunteer for the cleanout and/or planting dates, visit www.onbroadway.org or contact Christopher Naumann at chris@onbroadway.org.

In states that follow the federal guidelines, the subscriber must have a household annual gross income at or below 135% of the Federal Poverty Guidelines for a household of that size; or participate in any one of the following programs: Medicaid, Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (Food Stamps), Supplemental Security Income (SSI), Federal Public Housing Assistance (Section 8), Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP), National School Lunch Program's Free Lunch Program, or Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF).

Residents of American Indian and Alaskan Native tribal lands may qualify for up to an additional $25 of enhanced Lifeline support monthly and a credit of up to $100 on their initial installation charges. An individual living on tribal lands may qualify for Lifeline and Link-Up discounts if he or she participates in one of the programs listed above, the Bureau of Indian Affairs General Assistance, Tribally Administered Temporary Assistance to Needy Families, or Head Start (only for those households meeting its income qualifying standard).

Lifeline eligible subscribers may also qualify for reliable home high-speed Internet service up to 1.5Mbps for $9.95* per month for the first 12 months of service. Further details are available at centurylink.com/internetbasics

If you live in a CenturyLink service area, please call 1-800-201-4099 or visit centurylink.com/lifeline with questions or to request an application for the Lifeline program.

BACKGROUND ON BUSINESS

Cornelius becomes partner in funeral home

Helping others is the nature of the business

By Travis Cottrell
Kalihwisaks

Matt Cornelius has always had a passion for helping people; his desire to help has led him to his current position of co-owner of Lyndahl Funeral Home and Cremation Services.

Cornelius has been employed as funeral director at Lyndahl since July of 2009.

"My heart lies in working with people. So that passion ties in with this profession. I remember looking on the internet for jobs and I saw Funeral Director and I laughed at it. Then I decided to look into it and I saw it involved working with families and found out that it is actually right up my ally," Cornelius recalls.

However, carrying out the required tasks of the business took some getting used to.

"I wasn't sure how this career was going to go because working with deceased people was the hard part for me. But once I got into it and realized this is my job, this is what I am supposed to do I was fine with it," Cornelius said.

Now that he has taken on the role of co-owner, Cornelius shares the duties with fellow owner Chris Daley; he has a hand in every aspect of the business.

"Being a co-owner comes with its own set of tasks. Working with payroll, bills, and business partners, things of that nature. As a Funeral Director it starts out with taking the first call, we take the call and go out to the hospital of the home, wherever the death occurred. We also meet with the families to work out the details, coffin choice, flowers, catering, veteran services. All the work behind the scenes," said Cornelius.

Serving as a Certified Funeral Celebrant is another service Lyndahl has to offer, typically for individuals who wish to not have a religious ceremony.

"This is a celebration of life, where I meet with the family, and based upon the stories they share with me of their loved one, I officiate a service that brings forth a life story that stays in the hearts and minds of family and friends," Cornelius said.

Matt Cornelius

At the end of the day it is Cornelius' desire to help to others that makes his career worthwhile.

"I love working with families. There are a whole variety of personalities out there so there is always a change. I want the families to be able to say at the end that we got every area perfect"

Cornelius recommends advance funeral planning for those considering their funeral options.

"The families that preplanned before the death of their loved one, have relatively little work left to do. With larger families, and extended families, the obituary itself can be a daunting experience. We gather all information and are able to make things manageable," Cornelius said.

If you are looking for a caring professional who will take time to assist in putting together a plan suited to your needs, Matthew Cornelius is available. Please call Lyndahl Funeral Home and Cremation Services and ask for Matt at (920) 499-1223*.*

Green Bay Elite opens a new gym in Appleton

(DePere, WI) On Saturday, May 5, 2012 the Green Bay Elite Cheer Company (GBE) will open a new training facility at 2127 W. Nordale Ave in Appleton, WI. The Grand Opening will be 1:00pm – 3:00pm.

The event will kick off with a welcome from gym owners, Cherokee Greendeer and Julie Sprangers. Also present will be gym coaching and support staff, GBE Booster Club board members and current GBE all-star athletes. They will be giving tours of the facility and providing information on the upcoming 2012-2013 competition season.

This facility is the second gym for GBE. The program began in Green Bay in 1999. This second location has been in the planning stages for approximately 2 years and has finally come a reality. "We are so excited to bring our nationally recognized cheer program to the Fox Valley and grow our GBE family", said Greendeer.

Oneidas back Dallas co. buy of NY sausage maker

VERONA, N.Y. (AP) ~ Hofmann Sausage Co. of Syracuse, N.Y. has been acquired by Dallas-based Zaccanelli Food Group with help from the Oneida Indian Nation.

Hofmann's new chief executive officer Frank Zaccanelli says Monday that he plans to transform Hofmann hot dogs and sausages into a national and international brand. Hofmann, founded in 1879, is currently sold in central New York and other markets along the East Coast.

Oneida Nation Enterprises is the lead investor. The Oneida's Turning Stone Resort and Casino will be the marketing center for Hofmann events.

Other investors include Syracuse University head basketball coach Jim Boeheim and former Dallas Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach.

Financial terms of the deal were not disclosed.

Treasurer's Report

By Cristina Danforth
Oneida Tribal Treasurer

A few weeks ago, I had the honor of giving the opening remarks and dancing at the "Common Ground Concert" at the Meyer Theatre featuring Jennifer Stevens. The event was attended by more than 750 people and was a celebration of dance and song between the Native and European societies. It was an uplifting experience to watch the differences between our cultures and to witness how well they flowed together. The level of talent displayed was exceptional and it was truly an honor to be asked to participate on behalf of the Oneida people. Thank you to all that were involved for your dedication to our arts.

Working with the community is very important to me. Every chance I get, I try to get out there and find out what the real issues are that are facing our members. Recently I was asked to meet with a Tribal member about a topic of importance. The conversation was very enlightening and made me realize just how much work still needs to be done in order to correct the problems we face. Cooperation and a common goal seem to be lacking in some areas that are clouded by anger, frustration, and greed. These are very tough topics to address. How to change the mindset of one person is nearly impossible not to mention an entire group. The question is where to start? As an elected official, it is my job to safeguard the assets and ensure our money is being used as wisely as possible. While this does not entail personality conflicts or conflict resolution, I have a duty to the GTC that requires me to be accessible for community member meetings and to do what I can to address situations.

Many situations arise on a daily basis and sometimes I find myself so overwhelmed with a demand for my time from Tribal member concerns that my day-to-day tasks suffer. While unfortunate, I would not have it any other way. By being involved with as much as possible and where I am asked is truly an honor for me. I was elected to help our people and to enlist change and those are the challenges and tasks I fight for at each and every meeting. If I see or hear something that does not look or feel right, I question it. Some take it as criticism and respond defensively while others engage my inquiries and explain their position in an appropriate manner. I would hope everyone would see that for me, nothing is personal, everything is professional and necessary to complete the tasks assigned to me by GTC.

While we have our share of negatives throughout the community we also have many positives. There are many areas throughout the Tribe that are interested in the common good and go out of their way to lend their assistance and expertise when needed without worrying about compensation or budget dollars. These departments should be applauded for their selflessness and ability to see beyond their immediate areas. They are not interested in building their staff beyond what is reasonable and their desire is to complete their own work and help others where and when they can. This is the future I hope for the Tribe which is based in our original roots of crossing clan lines to help those in need. If we could all learn to give of ourselves and let go of our idiosyncrasies; our society could thrive and become what we all hope for.

Tina Danforth

OBC Forum...

Paul Ninham
Councilman

At our last Business Committee meeting of Wednesday April 25th, the Business Committee adopted amendments to the Independent Contractor Policy which prohibits the departments of the Tribe from entering into contracts with vendors who are also employees of the Tribe. Although I support Oneida Tribal members who are entrepreneurs, I also have to look out for the best interests of the Tribe as a whole. This action is an emergency action, it is intended to provide sufficient time to acquire a clear answer regarding the possible liabilities facing the Tribe.

The Internal Revenue Service has identified a concern regarding this type of employee-contractor relationship. And, based on discussions with the Tribal government liaison in the IRS, this concern is growing. Rather than risk tax liabilities and limited Tribal funds, it is my opinion that we should protect the Tribe from this risk and seek clarification. The Business Committee has directed the Law Office answer this question as quickly as possible from the IRS via a Private Letter Ruling or a worker classification opinion.

I believe our legal staff has worked diligently to find solutions regarding this area of the law for many years and helping us to understand what the risks are and how we can avoid them. The Business Committee is now asking them to explore a legal fix that could allow the Tribe to enter into contracts with Tribal members so we avoid harming the Tribe and the member owned business. In the meantime, I stand by my vote regarding the Independent Contractor Policy amendments because I know that this is only a temporary measure and in the best interests of the Tribe, its membership, and those members who own businesses who are also employees of the Tribe. Once we get the IRS ruling, we can revamp the Independent Contractor Policy or omit it, whichever is more appropriate to better reflect our goals to build a strong economy and reduce all risks to the Tribe.

Quarterly Summaries for Jan. - Mar. 2012

Initial Review

Rule 9(D) - Criteria for Acceptance:
The Initial Review Body shall accept an appeal for appellate review if one or more of the following elements are sufficiently alleged to exist in the original hearing body decision by the Appellant in the Notice of Appeal:

(1) A violation of constitutional provisions;
(2) The decision is outside the scope of the authority or otherwise unlawful;
(3) The decision is clearly erroneous and is against the weight of the evidence presented at the hearing level;
(4) The decision is arbitrary and/or capricious;
(5) There is exhibited a procedural irregularity which would be considered a harmful error that may have contributed to the final decision, which if the error had not occurred, would have altered the final decision;
(6) There is a presentation or introduction of new evidence that was not available at the hearing level which, if available, may have altered the final decision.

To conserve time and space provided, the Oneida Tribal Judicial System will only put into print the Initial Review Decisions which have been denied. The cases that have been accepted at Initial Review will be published when the final adjudication has been entered.

Trial Court Cases

Matthew J. Denny Sr., DH Cash Management Services vs. Chad Fuss, Assistant GM-Finance. Docket No. 11-TC-147, January 23, 2012. Judicial Officers Mary Adams, Jean M. Webster, Leland Wigg-Ninham presiding. This case involved a complaint from a vendor involved in the bidding process for a new Cash Service Project. Petitioner, Matthew J. Denny Sr., filed a complaint on December 23, 2011 seeking a preliminary injunction halting the awarding of the project to another vendor. On January 17, 2011 Respondent, Chad Fuss, filed a Motion to Dismiss claiming that an aggrieved party must filed a complaint with the Indian Preference Department to investigate and if the department deems necessary, file a suit on the Petitioner's behalf. Sec. 57.14 of the Indian Preference Law requires an investigation by IPD must be conducted. The court was not aware this has been done. Petitioner may file with the IPD as required under Sec. 57.14. Dismissed without prejudice.

Larry D. Jordan vs. HRD/Benefits and Crawford & Company. Docket No. 11-TC-137, March 5, 2012. Judicial Officers Jean M. Webster, Mary Adams and Leland Wigg-Ninham presiding. This case arises out of Petitioner, Larry D. Jordan's claim that he suffered a covered injury while at work on June 21, 2011. Mr. Jordan had surgery on June 24, 2011 and was off work until September 5, 2011 and seeks compensation for time off of work, partial permanent disability and unreimbursed medical expenses. The medical expenses are at issue because Mr. Jordan received care from a provider not approved by the employer. The court found Mr. Jordan's injuries were not covered under Chapter 13 of Oneida Worker's Compensation Law.

Denial of benefits affirmed.

Matthew J. Denny Sr.. DH Cash Management Services vs. Chad Fuss, Assistant GM-Finance. Docket No. 12-TC-023, March 5, 2012. Judicial Officers Mary Adams, Jean M. Webster, Leland Wigg-Ninham presiding. This case involved a complaint from a vendor involved in the bidding process for a new Cash Service Project originally filed on December 23, 2011. The Trial Court dismissed the complaint without prejudice and allowed Mr. Denny to follow the Chapter 57 process of the Oneida Indian Preference Law. Once a party files a complaint then the Oneida Indian Preference Department conducts an investigation. IPD found Mr. Denny failed to meet the minimum eligibility requirements in the Request for Proposal to advance to the bidding process. The IPD is the agency to bring suit against the violator not Mr. Denny. This in accordance with sec. 57.14-3 and 57.14-4. Dismissed with prejudice.

From 2A/McLester

had a common interest and we began to search out the people of these other communities. So we became very good friends with people throughout Iroquoia all the way from Buffalo and up towards Montreal and into New York. We would go to some of the ceremonies and tour as much as we could, and again we wanted to expose that to our children," he said.

McLester's father got him a job at the machine shop where he worked, and later the two started a machine shop business with a friend.

"It was a small shop, a job shop, we contracted out from the bigger companies, and we did that for about 17 years. During that time my father and many of my relation had interest in the tribal government, so some of them were serving on the tribal council … I had an interest in tribal government because of the land and I live on tribal land, so I should know what the hell is going on," said. He served as a councilmember of the Oneida Business Committee (OBC) for six years.

"In those days the tribal council was not a full time job. … You attended meetings, and no matter how many meetings you attended, the compensation was $5 a month. It didn't make any difference if you attended one meeting, if you attended 10 meetings," he said. "My kids were at a certain age where I felt it was too time consuming, so I didn't run."

However, he returned to office in the early '80's as secretary and served another six years.

McLester worked for Oneida Bingo just as the waters were beginning to be tested for Indian gaming.

"At that time the slot machines were not legal, we didn't have a compact. And so you were running on a day-to-day basis not knowing whether or not if the feds were going to come in and try and confiscate the machines because they had done it with some of the northern tribes, and they threatened to do that here," he said. "Fortunately, things worked out, got a compact."

He watched as the Oneida Casino went from 60 gaming machines in 1991 to 1200 in 1994. He used his experience to start a consulting business working with other Indian nations across North American.

"I've been fortunate enough to work, and see and get to know many of the people on different reservations. As an example, when went to open up a casino in Saskatchewan, we put 200 Indians to work, 75% of those people never had a job before," he said.

"People see all the casinos, maybe it's a devil in disguise, and that can be true. But at the same token, I look at the casino as kind of like a stove in the middle of the room, that stove can heat you, but it can also burn your house down, so if you don't tend to the stove."

His consulting work led him back to his love of history. He was asked by the OBC to organize an Oneida history conference to create a paper trail that would support the land claim in central New York State. From the conference came the book The Oneida Indian Experience: The Two Perspectives.

"Out of all the presenters, approximately 75% were from academia, and the other 25% was from Oneida," he said.

There have been several history conferences over the years, and McLester has had a hand in producing five more books focusing on different aspects of Oneida's past.

"In 2007, in the last book that came out which is A Nation Within a Nation, the situation was 75% of the input in the book was from Oneidas, 25% was from academia, it had come full circle," he said.

Also as part of the quest for history, McLester began interviewing Oneida elders on video.

"We started out at 65 and up, then went to 62, tried to get as many as we could," he said. "From '96 to 2007 we interviewed in excess of over 500 elders, and we had that all put on video tape. These were all turned over to the Culture Program."

Currently, McLester is working on a book about the churches in Oneida as well as trying to get access to diaries kept by John Archiquette from 1880-1910 found at Yale University. He's also involved with the Oneida Hymn Singers, and is interested in their history as well.

"I do think there are some songs that are sung that are not necessarily what you would call an English hymn. It goes behind that and it goes further than that. And not all the songs, you've got the hymnal now, and they've got words printed out in there, but they don't have the tunes or the melodies, but there's some of these singers that know these melodies and tunes that are not in the book. That's the kind of think that it's not puzzling, but it's a curiosity, and I'm trying to establish and see what I can find," he said.

He believes the Hymn Singers play an important role in Oneida community and history.

"Keeping it alive in terms of sharing these songs for people in the future, because one of the biggest things about singing with the hymn singing is that it's not for you personally, it's for the person who's asked you to come, and the singers don't go unless they're asked," he said. "The majority of the time when we sing someplace, it's for somebody that passed. It's not for the people that passed, it's for the people that are being left behind, and we're there to assist them and help them … When a person passes, you've got two different groups; you have the ones that are mourning and the ones that are there to help. It's the same principle, because you're there as the helper for the ones that are in mourning because their minds are cloudy, and that's part of what the hymn singing is about."

When asked what's the biggest change he's seen in Oneida, he states he's amazed by the educational progress its citizens have made.

"I think the biggest is the economic growth, and the standard of living has been really phenomenal. The education level has risen far beyond anybody's expectations for the general populace of the tribe. It was not unusual … during my father's and mother's time to finish the eighth grade. Now, my granddaughter's working on her PHD. It's only within two generations you see a tremendous amount of growth, and I think its beginning … in time it will pay back. It probably won't show for another two generations," he said.

From 1A/OPD honors

worked for nearly 24 continuous hours by OPD. Communication and teamwork were integral parts of the case as multiple shifts worked the case.

"As a department it was nice because we always work together. I think (the award) is usually granted to one officer one time and to be honored for our team effort really boosted our sense of moral," said King Jr.

OPD officials are quick to say they didn't think they went above what is asked of them daily and that they aren't patrolling to win awards.

"It really didn't seem like we did anything different, it was just us doing our job," said Martin.

Ninham thought the teamwork within the department and the Outagamie County Sheriff's office ensured a positive outcome for the case.

"Teamwork defines us as a police department. I always say there is no difference between departments its just a different patch on the shoulder. We train together, go to calls together and get to know each other," said Ninham.

"If we didn't do what we did the situation could have been much worse. If we lost some youth community members the ripple effect would have been felt everywhere."

OPD Chief of Police Rich VanBoxtel is extremely proud of the work the officers did on this case.

"The awards are secondary. The majority of them have kids, putting their kids faces on these kids faces who needed help was trying the very least," said VanBoxtel. "I don't think anyone of them went into this thinking that there doing this to get a plaque or certificate for their desk. That's not what they're there for. Cases like this is why they're here. There here to make a difference in one person's life at a time and make sure they get the help they need when they need it."

Ninham honored for gang prevention efforts

Oneida Police Department (OPD) Officer Matt Ninham was honored by the Ho-Chunk Nation for his gang prevention work on reservations across the state.

Ninham was presented Pendleton blanket during the annual Crimes Against Children in Indian Country conference April 26 in Wisconsin Dells, WI.

"Matt does a very good job with those presentations. For some of them it was quite enlightening," said OPD Chief Rich VanBoxtel.

Ninham has been doing the presentation for about four years and it's the first time he has been officially recognized for his eye-opening presentation that puts communities on notice about the gang problem on reservations.

"It's not just about what I'm doing it's about what we are doing as a department and NAGIA (National alliance of Gang Investigators' Association). I think it's something cops should do, not just write tickets and arrest people," said Ninham.

Sergeant accused in child porn case resigns

MILWAUKEE (AP) _ The Milwaukee County sergeant accused of producing child pornography has resigned from the sheriff's department.

Philip Wentzel is a former spokesman for the department. The 44-year-old Wentzel is accused of taking pictures of young girls who were sleeping or drugged at a Fond du Lac County campground and then trying to trade the photos on the Internet.

WTMJ radio (http://bit.ly/JbXAoQhttp://bit.ly/JbXAoQ ) says Wentzel faces up to 30 years in prison and $250,000 in fines if he is convicted.

WI state parks in line for campsite upgrades

MADISON, Wis. (AP) _ Nearly 20 state parks are developing plans to add or upgrade dozens of electric campsites.

Work is expected to begin this spring on as many as 66 new or upgraded electrified camping sites at 11 parks, including Big Foot Beach, Blue Mound, Bong, Buckhorn, Hartman Creek, Interstate, Lake Kegonsa, Kohler-Andrae, Point Beach, Rocky Arbor and Roche-A-Cri.

Another seven parks _ High Cliff, Peninsula, Wildcat Mountain, Kettle Moraine North and South, Yellowstone Lake and Devil's Lake _ expect to add up to 338 upgraded or new electrical sites beginning this fall.

The effort is part of a larger $7 million state Department of Natural Resources plan to improve more than 200 publicly owned properties across the state. Plans call improving roads, parking lots and signage.

NATOW produces "Native Wisconsin" Special Section for Tourism Week

Stephanie Klett, Secretary of the Wisconsin Department of Tourism and Aimee Juan, Executive Director of NATOW, show off the cover of the new "Native Wisconsin" special section to the St. Paul Pioneer Press. The tab was distributed in the May 6 newspaper in celebration of Tourism Week.

Native American communities in Wisconsin are putting out the welcome mat for Twin Cities visitors this summer. Native American Tourism of Wisconsin (NATOW) is partnering with the St. Paul Pioneer Press to produce a 12-page special section on "Native Wisconsin" to be included in the Sunday, May 6 newspaper to more than 600,000 readers. The section was produced in celebration of Wisconsin Tourism Week, as well as National Travel and Tourism Week May 5-13.

The special section highlights each of Wisconsin's 11 sovereign nations, plus offers a calendar of events for 2012. The 11 tribes in Wisconsin include the Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, Forest County Potawatomi Tribe, Ho-Chunk Nation, Lac Courte Oreilles Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, Lac du Flambeau Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, Menomonie Nation, Oneida Tribe of Indians of WI, Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, Sokaogon (Mole Lake) Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, St. Croix Band of Lake Superior Chippewa and Stockbridge-Munsee Band of the Mohicans.

Stories and pictures tell about tribal locations and enterprises in Wisconsin. The calendar of events lists pow-wows, heritage celebrations, performing arts, concerts, festivals and outdoor activities. Plus, the section will appear on TwinCities.com for 30 days – the site has more than 1.9 million unique users each month.

NATOW was launched in 1994 as a state wide initiative by Great Lake Inter Tribal Council. The group's focus is to promote tourism featuring Native American heritage and culture.

MA Senate hopeful explains heritage listing

BRAINTREE, Mass. (AP) ~ Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Elizabeth Warren said Wednesday she listed herself as having Native American heritage in law school directories because she hoped to meet people with similar roots.

Warren, a Harvard Law School professor, said she never tried to use minority status to get teaching jobs and criticized the campaign of Republican Massachusetts Sen. Scott Brown for suggesting that may have been the case.

"I listed myself in the directory in the hopes that might mean that I would be invited to a luncheon, a group, something that might happen with people who are like I am," Warren said during a campaign appearance in Braintree, according to the Boston Herald.

The listing did not produce any such contacts, and she later stopped using it, Warren said.

Law school directories from the Association of American Law Schools from 1986 to 1995 put Warren on the association's list of "minority law teachers" when she was teaching at the University of Texas and the University of Pennsylvania.

According to the directories, the list is made up of "those legal educators who stated they were members of a minority group."

Warren, who grew up in Oklahoma, has said she's proud of her family ties to Cherokee and Delaware tribes - a heritage she said she learned through stories passed down to her from older family members.

On Wednesday, she accused Brown's campaign of using the Native American listing as a way of insinuating that she was not qualified for her job.

"The only one as I understand it who's raising any question about whether or not I was qualified for my job is Scott Brown and I think I am qualified and frankly I'm a little shocked to hear anybody raise a question about whether or not I'm qualified to hold a job teaching," she said.

Brown himself has not made such a claim, though his campaign manager has said the story raises questions about Warren's credibility.

Asked about the controversy following a speech in Boston on Wednesday, Brown said of Warren: "I think she needs to answer the questions that are still lingering out there."

The story first surfaced last week when the Herald found a 1996 article in Harvard's student newspaper, the Harvard Crimson, about student dissatisfaction about the number of women and minority professors on the Harvard Law faculty. In the story, Harvard Law spokesman Mike Chmura referred to Warren as Native American.

DNR: Infected Wis. deer came from north

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ The Department of Natural Resources says tests show a deer that tested positive for chronic wasting disease in northwestern Wisconsin did not come from an area where the disease is currently found.

The Milwaukee Journal Sentinel reports the DNR says a lymph node from the 3-year-old doe came from the same genetic stock tissue taken from other northern Wisconsin deer.

The DNR says the findings mean the deer did not somehow find its way to the north and that it likely did not come from a game farm.

The agency announced last month that the deer, shot last fall, tested positive for chronic wasting. The disease has been known to persist in southern Wisconsin since 2002.

The disease eats away at a deer's brain, causing it to eventually die.

UW-SP invites fish farmers to northern Wisconsin

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ The University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point is inviting fish farmers to a workshop in far northern Wisconsin later this month.

UW-Stevens Point, UW-Extension and the Wisconsin Aquaculture Association are planning "Aquaculture Unplugged" at the college's Northern Aquaculture Demonstration Facility in Red Cliff on May 31.

Fish farmers will get a chance to share best practices and learn practical skills they can use back home. Walleye researcher Robert Summerfelt and international pond culture expert Charles Mischke are both slated to speak.

The cost is $50 per person and covers the workshop, handouts, lunch and a fish fry. More information is available at www.wisconsinaquaculture.com .

Survey finds no sign of bat disease

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ Wisconsin wildlife officials say another survey has turned up no sign of a deadly bat disease.

White-nose syndrome causes bats to wake up during hibernation and quickly deplete their energy stores. Federal wildlife officials estimated in January the disease has killed as many as 6.7 million bats in the eastern United States and Canada.

The state Department of Natural Resources conducted a survey of more than 100 potential hibernacula in the winter of 2010-11 and found to traces of the disease.

DNR officials say a survey of 114 sites this past winter found no sign of the disease, either. But they remained convinced the disease is bound to appear sometime.

New legal challenge filed against UP nickel mine

By John Flesher
AP Environmental Writer

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. ~ A private club in Michigan's Upper Peninsula has filed a federal lawsuit to halt construction of a nickel and copper mine, saying Kennecott Eagle Minerals Co. did not obtain necessary federal permits.

The 250-member Huron Mountain Club, which owns 19,000 acres of forested property that comes within 3.3 miles of the mine site, contends the project under development in northwestern Marquette County would damage the Salmon Trout River and nearby wetlands. Also at risk are endangered species, club members' property values and a culturally significant site where American Indians worship, the club argues.

Activities that could do such damage require permits from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, according to the lawsuit, which was filed Sunday in U.S. District Court in Grand Rapids. The suit targets Kennecott Eagle for not getting the permits, and the Corps and other federal agencies for failing to demand the company seek them.

"Kennecott's unauthorized construction work and proposed operation of the Eagle Mine consequently are illegal," the suit said.

Judge Robert Holmes Bell rejected the club's request for an order to immediately halt work on the mine, but scheduled a hearing for June 6.

The suit is the latest potential legal hurdle for Kennecott Eagle, a subsidiary of London-based Rio Tinto, which is targeting an ore deposit expected to yield up to 300 million pounds of nickel and 200 million pounds of copper. The mine would be the only one in the U.S. devoted primarily to production of nickel, an ingredient in stainless steel and products such as batteries, magnets and ceramics.

Kennecott Eagle applied for a state permit to construct the mine in 2006. The Michigan Department of Environmental Quality approved it the next year, a decision upheld by an administrative law judge. Opponents, including the Huron Mountain Club, have asked the state Court of Appeals to take the case.

The company has nearly finished construction on surface facilities, while the drilling of an underground tunnel to the ore body is about halfway complete, spokesman Deb Muchmore said. Kennecott Eagle plans to begin extracting minerals next year.

"While we have not had the opportunity to review the claims of the suit, we will vigorously defend our legal position," Kennecott Eagle President Adam Burley said in a statement. "We will also defend the jobs of our workers and those the project has created in Michigan's Upper Peninsula."

Portions of the mine will be drilled directly beneath the Salmon Trout River, home to the rare coaster brook trout. As groundwater seeps into the subterranean chambers, the river's level will drop and adjacent wetlands will shrink, the lawsuit says. It contends the waterways also will be affected as the company places fill material in the chambers after ore is removed.

The suit argues that the federal Clean Water Act and the Rivers and Harbors Appropriations Act require permits from the Army corps for such activity.

Before issuing the permits, the corps would have to analyze potential effects on the environment, threatened and endangered species and Eagle Rock, a 60-foot-high outcrop near the tunnel entrance, said Rick Addison, an attorney for the Huron Mountain Club. The Keweenaw Bay Indian Community says the rock is a sacred site where generations of tribal members have worshipped. The company has fenced off the rock and promises to grant access for religious ceremonies.

New High-Level Advisory Council to Guide Big Brothers Big Sisters' Native American Mentoring Work

PHILADELPHIA~ Philadelphia-based Big Brothers Big Sisters of America has established a high-level Native American Advisory Council to guide the organization in its strategic efforts to expand one-to-one staff-supported mentoring services to help Native American children achieve in school and succeed in life.

The Advisory Council, which will meet quarterly, assembled for the first time in Philadelphia in early April. The group will support and guide Big Brothers Big Sisters and advise on matters of cultural competence as the national mentoring network increases its volunteer and donor base to serve more Native American children.

"The Big Brothers Big Sisters Native American Advisory Council is extremely important as we support our affiliates in their work to provide one-to-one staff-supported mentoring services to more rural and urban Native American families and communities," said Big Brothers Big Sisters of America Director of Native American Mentoring, Ivy Wright-Bryan, a member of the Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe in Nevada. "Longstanding studies, complemented by our real-time Youth Outcomes Survey data, illustrate the effectiveness of these services in helping youth overcome adversity to succeed in school; avoid risky behaviors and have higher self-esteem and aspirations. To hold ourselves accountable for these outcomes, we need support from experts such as those who have agreed to serve on the Native American Advisory Council," she added.

Members of the Council include:

1. Margo Gray-Proctor (Osage), President, Horizon Engineering Service Company;
2. Ernest Stevens Jr. (Oneida), Chairman, National Indian Gaming Association;
3. Lucille Echo Hawk (Pawnee), former Strategic Advisor for Indian Child Welfare Programs, Casey Family programs, and founder of Native Americans in Philanthropy;
4. Andrea Maril Fisher, Chief Executive Officer, Big Brothers Big Sisters of Northern New Mexico;
5. Juana Majel-Dixon (Pauma), First Vice-President, National Congress of American Indians;
6. Jared Ivins-Massey (White Mountain Apache), co-President, national U.N.I.T.Y. Council;
7. Josie Raphaelito (Navajo), Program Coordinator, Center for Native American Youth;
8. Quintin Lopez (Tohono O'odham), co-President, National Congress of American Indians Youth Commission

With support from the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP), Big Brothers Big Sisters established its Native American Tribal Community Initiative in 2008. The program serves more than 4197 Native American children, 42 percent of whom are matched with Native American mentors. Local Big Brothers Big Sisters affiliates serve 25 tribal reservation communities and 10 pueblos, where Native American staff, with the help of advisors and elders, carefully match youth with mentors and provide ongoing support to the adult volunteers, mentees and the children's families. Big Brothers Big Sisters' local affiliates are engaged with tribal reservation and urban/community-based businesses; educational and vocational training institutions; non-profit groups; and faith-based institutions that serve Native Americans.

Oneida WIA Job Training Summer Youth Work Experience Program 2012

The Oneida Job Training Program is taking applications for the 2012 Summer Youth Work Experience Program. The program provides career exploration and work experience opportunities for youth ages 14 – 18 who are attending school or returning to school full-time in the fall. The youth will be paid $7.25 hr, and are eligible to work a maximum of 24 hours a week. The program will run June 18th – August 10th. The program includes 28 positions - 8 WIA federally-funded positions, and 20 TANF-funded positions.

Requirements for the 8 WIA federally-funded positions are:

- Enrolled with a federally recognized Tribe, member of an Alaskan village or Hawaiian Native, and
- 30 -day resident of our service area, and
- Meet federal household poverty income guidelines, or
- Medically-diagnosed disability (cognitive, emotional or physical which includes ADD, ADHD, LD, and ED). Youth will be considered a household of one for income purposes), or
- Youth living out-of-home through a court-ordered placement. Youth will be considered a household of one for income purposes.

Requirements for the 20 TANF-funded positions are:

- Someone in the household is an enrolled Oneida living on the Oneida Reservation, or living in Brown or Outagamie County, or
- Enrolled Native American with dependent children living on the Oneida Reservation , and
- TANF recipients or TANF eligible households. Income guidelines for TANF are 185% of the HHS Poverty-Income Guidelines. Badger Care and Food Share recipients meet these income guidelines.

It seems like it was yesterday when we learned to ride our bikes together, discovered that we both liked to dance and speak our language. It seems like we were never apart and everyone knew we were best friends.
When we decided to go to school, we made sure we were going to be roommates.
When you finally landed that first job after all your hard work, I was the first to say "congratulations."
When you said you wanted to help the youth on the reservation, I said, "Let's do it together."
Then came a time when you told me that you have a mental health problem, like depression and anxiety.
Now I know that anyone can experience mental health problems, even Native People. We thought we knew everything, yet I really didn't understand what a difference my support can make in your recovery.
Well, I am here for you. I will be here for you.

Language Classes Challenging, Educational

By Joelle Thomas
Thunderhawk Times

ONHS students Tasha Stevens and Jessica House attend Oneida Language classes every morning before coming to school. Their language class, which is taught by Salihokt Leander Danforth at the Oneida Language House, actually takes the place of a first hour class at ONHS.

Tasha and Jessica have been taking the class since January along with Jessica's mother and Tasha's auntie, Toni House.

The class is challenging, both girls agreed. "It's a mental workout," said Tasha. "Yes," said Jessica, "It's way harder than any other language."

When asked what they are learning and what was the coolest thing they've learned so far, Tasha said, "Everything I'm learning. Learning about our language, how to speak it, communicate, and our ceremonies." Jessica said, "Nouns, animals, how to greet people, word stems and how to identify works easier than before."

The girls have one common goal for taking the class. Jessica's sister, Jasmine, has a baby on the way, and, as Tasha put it, "I am preparing to teach the language to Jasmine's baby." Jessica said the same thing.

Even though the class is hard, both girls plan to continue with the class. "It goes on for years. It's never over," said Tasha. "You can always learn more language." Jessica said, "Will I continue to learn our language? Of course I will."

Tasha and Jessica then come to school for the start of second hour and have a regular schedule for the rest of the school day.

In our next issue, Tasha will have a feature article on what it's like in their class.

Counting Down the Days

ONHS students play a game of lacrosse as part of the Culture Day celebration on Friday, May 11.

By Josanna Cornelius
Thunderhawk Times

As of today, Thursday, May 10, we have 20 days of school left until summer, counting today.

Our annual Language and Culture Day was Friday, May 11.

We have off on May 25 and May 28 for Oneida Day and Memorial Day, making a four-day weekend as we get closer to the end of the school year. The 28 is also the mark of a first-quarter moon.

The first week of June has graduation for the class of 2012 on Friday, June 1. We will also be having final exams. Then, on Tuesday June 5, we have a half-day for our last day of school. Eighth grade graduation is that day and then we are headed off to summer vacation.

I hope these 20 days zoom by. I can't wait to get out of school, mainly just so I can sleep-in every day. Plus summer's my favorite time of the year.

Buffalo Sticks and the Health Video

By Josanna Cornelius and Thunderhawk Times Staff

In Health Class we are working on a video. It's on the buffalo sticks we have just received as a different choice for our snack break from the Oneida Farms. We have an actual buffalo head in our scenes, and someone is hanging on to it to peak around the corners and scare people. The point of that is to make everyone drop the unhealthy snacks out of their hands, and to get the buffalo sticks instead.

The snack room is supervised by student council advisor Carol Johnson. Carol said that the school was "very grateful" for the donation and that she has heard good things from the students about the buffalo sticks.

When compared to beef, buffalo has 70 to 90% less fat and about 50% less cholesterol.

Oshkosh Multi-Cultural Preview Day and UW-O

By Josanna Cornelius
Thunderhawk Times

On Friday, April 20, Guidance Counselor, Tom Kenote, and Teacher Aide, Kahnya Cornelius took twenty-five ONHS students to UW-Oshkosh for the annual Multi-Cultural Preview Day. The purpose of the trip is give minority students exposure to the university.

Students on the trip included Kalene Beechtree, Emmitt Big Medicine, Jaleesa Caldwell, Paul Christjohn, Colleen Cornelius, Kayla Danforth, Brandon Doxtator, Jessica House, Adrian Huff, Billie John, Josanna Cornelius, Guadalupe Martinez, Diego Metoxen, Matias Metoxen, Noelle Metoxen, Michael Mills, Rachel Ninham, Eveyonna Ortega, Devonte' Pointer, Oscar Schuyler, Natasha Stevens, Tracey Stevens, Joelle Thomas, RJ Webster, and Kylene Welch.

It took like an hour and half to get to UW-Oshkosh; it wasn't that long of a ride like Madison was. There were quite a few schools there and all kinds of different races.

During part of the program, there was an Asian comedian who was pretty funny, I thought. He was on stage for about an hour and he was pretty funny but only the Asians in the crowd were mainly laughing because he kept saying stuff in their language so the rest of us didn't always know what he was talking about.

After that a bunch of college girls and guys that went there were on this dance team. They gave a performance, it was ok I guess.

Then we ate lunch there was a great variety of things that were all pretty good. I thought it was the best part really. Then, we went back to where we first were and all the schools were split up into groups for a tour of the college and the buildings there.

Oshkosh seems like a nice place to go to college to.

La Nova Pizza, Worth the Price

By Kendrick Powless
Thunderhawk Times

In my experiences eating pizza in the Buffalo, NY, La Nova Pizzeria is by far the best place to offer pizza by the pie. La Nova's is good because their pizza is simply amazing. The sauce, the crust, the toppings, the way it's cooked, are superior to any pizza you can try in Green Bay.

And I'm not alone. According to ONHS Oneida Language and Culture Teacher, Sonny Hill, who has traveled all over the US and Canada, said, "There's no pizza like it. I've eaten pizza everywhere and there's nothing like it anyplace else."

La Nova's has also gotten a reputation for their wings. According to Joey Todaro III, who started La Nova's back in 1994, Buffalo Wings are "not the top selling appetizer in the pizzeria industry." Todaro is credited with introducing wings to the industry.

Not planning a trip to Buffalo any time soon? No problem! La Nova's will deliver the pizza and wings overnight to your door. The price—around $70 and up delivered—might seem outrageous at first, but once the pizza hits your taste buds the money will seem like nothing compared to the taste, texture, and presentation.

According to La Nova's website, all pizzas ordered from their website are shipped within the US FedEx Standard Overnight Shipping. All orders must be in by 2:00 p.m. Eastern Standard Time. Saturday orders are an extra $12.50 per package.

Reviewing the Packers Draft

By RJ Webster
Thunderhawk Times

Let's face it, in 2011, the Packers defense was horrible. And I mean, horrible.

Ted Thompson likes to say that the Packers are always looking for the best player available, but he better make sure that the best player the Packers pick plays defense. The Packers need some help in all three phases of defense—line, linebacker and back.

Thompson should probably start with a whole new defensive line built around BJ Raji and Ryan Pickett. A defensive back would also be a good start, especially if Nick Collins doesn't come back. Linebackers are also a need, except for Clay Matthews.

Note: This article was written and set to be published before the actual draft. Ted Thompson must have been thinking the same way I was, because his draft was nearly all defense. The following were the Packers' draft picks:

Round 1, pick 28 (28th overall): Nick Perry, OLB, Round 2, pick 19 (51st overall): Jerel Worthy, DE, Round 2, pick 30 (62nd overall): Casey Hayward, CB, Round 4, pick 37 (132nd overall): Mike Daniels, DE, Round 4, pick 38 (133rd overall): Jerron McMillian, SS, Round 5, pick 28 (163rd overall): Terrell Manning, LB, Round 7, pick 34 (241st overall): Andrew Datko, OT, Round 7, pick 36 (243rd overall): B.J. Coleman, QB.

War against SD tree bugs enlists unlikely fighters

By Veronica Zaragovia
Associated Press

SPEARFISH CANYON, S.D. ~ Joe Shark's Native American heritage taught him to be leery of the timber industry on the South Dakota reservation where he grows apples and gooseberries, but a threat from an enemy no larger than a fingernail impelled him to grab a saw and join the loggers.

For more than two decades, tiny pine beetles have been a colossal pain for two competing camps in the forests of the Black Hills region - the American Indians seeking to preserve the trees and the timber workers who are chopping down thousands for profit. The infiltration of the bug has left countless trees dead, severely threatening both missions.

It has reached such epidemic levels lately that Shark and other tribal farmers with longstanding opposition to logging aren't just muting their resistance but chipping in. They're helping to clear the infected trees in order to save the non-infected ones.

"I don't agree with logging, and I never have, (but) I know in my heart I'm doing the right thing," said Shark, who spent a week this spring training to join the scores of loggers. "We are warriors for the land, and we have a duty and obligation to take the steps to leave something for the next generation."

To ensure that the fallen trees aren't wasted, the Native Americans are hoping to put the wood to use by building wooden homes on the notoriously run-down and poverty-stricken reservation.

So far, the Lakota Logging Project has trained about 15 Native Americans, including Shark, with plans to train many more. It marks the largest-scale project to date involving a nonprofit group aiming to help combat the beetle epidemic, said Adam Gahagan, senior forester with Custer State Park.

"The Black Hills are sacred to our people," said Ramona White Plume, 51, a resident of the reservation. "For generations, people have gone into the Black Hills and haven't desecrated it. Trees are a living entity. They have families also."

Angel Munoz, who owns a Rapid City logging company with his wife Barbara, said he isn't surprised that the fight to save the trees is drawing unlikely allies considering that the pine beetle threat is worse than it has ever been.

"It's getting kind of rough," Munoz said.

The mountain pine beetles attack in cycles, infecting the wood with a fungus that gives it a blue hue. While the first discovery of this beetle in the area dates back to around 1900, the most recent epidemic began in the 1990s on pine trees from Baja California in Mexico to British Columbia in Canada. The insects have infected a swath of the western United States that threatens the timber industry, already ailing from the hobbled housing market.

The blue stain can cut the wood's value by two-thirds, said Carson Engelskirger, forest programs manager with the Black Hills Forest Resource Association. The coloring doesn't affect the strength of the wood, but consumers mistake the fungus for mold or a defect, relegating the lumber to being used for purposes such as crating or the backing of inexpensive chairs.

Bill Coburn, a procurement forester with Neiman Timber Co. in Spearfish, S.D., said his biggest concern isn't the color of wood but rather thinning the forest to reduce the destruction and expansion of the epidemic.

While driving through the winding roads of the Black Hills, Coburn pointed out daubs of rust-colored trees killed by the beetles among the lush green pines. He worries about the fire hazards posed by the dead trees, the costs associated with picking them up from the roadways and the negative effect the spotty hillsides could have on property values.

"If we are really, truly serious about removing the cancer that's growing in this area, you don't leave any parts of the cancer left on the landscape," Coburn said.

Because beetles are poor fliers and rely on wind to help them move, the best way to slow the infestation is by taking down the infected trees. Dense, overgrown forests strengthen the epidemic and they enable beetles to release a concentrated attractant that draws hundreds more beetles to the tree. The insects burrow beneath the bark, endlessly chewing and releasing the fungus until the tree is corrupted from the inside out and dies, eventually falling to the ground.

Dave Ventimiglia, who co-founded the Lakota Logging Project, said the nearby Native American community can benefit in return. He hopes to eventually raise the $150,000 it would cost to build a saw mill on Pine Ridge reservation. That would allow loggers to bring back logs to the reservation and hopefully replace the dilapidated mobile homes in which so many of its residents live.

A contract with the South Dakota Game, Fish and Parks Department allows the Lakota loggers to remove 20,000 beetle-infested trees from Custer State Park. For each tree cut down, the crew makes $10. So far, the Ventimiglias have put in $30,000 of their own money to front training and equipment costs.

WI DNR appointee didn't refer waste violation

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ A top political appointee at the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources chose to handle a complaint against a waste hauler internally instead of referring the case to the state Department of Justice for prosecution, DNR records show.

Scott Gunderson, executive assistant to DNR Secretary Cathy Stepp, "made an extra effort" to deal with the complaint internally last year even though the agency's enforcement staff urged that the case be referred to the Justice Department, the Wisconsin State Journal reported Sunday.

The DOJ could have imposed fines of tens of thousands of dollars, the State Journal reported. Instead, Gunderson decided to ask district attorneys in Waukesha and Jefferson counties to issue five citations against Herr Environmental and fine the Oconomowoc company $4,338 - the minimum forfeiture for the permit violations.

DNR staff had found the company was treating fields with so much human waste from septic tanks it risked poisoning nearby wells. The lead DNR investigator called the permit violations "among the worst" he'd seen.

Gunderson and Steve Sisbach, a law enforcement program manager who worked on the case, defended the decision to issue citations. They said it could force the company into compliance faster rather than waiting for the Justice Department to act.

Gunderson, a former Republican state representative, received $750 in campaign contributions from the owner of the company, Richard Herr, and Herr's wife in 2006 and 2008, the State Journal reported.

Last week, Gunderson said he forgot when he agreed to oversee the case that he accepted their political contributions. The Herrs are major supporters of Republican campaigns, as well as some Democratic candidates. Even if he had remembered, Gunderson said, it would not have influenced his decision.

Normally, the case would have been assigned to DNR Deputy Secretary Matt Moroney, who said he handed it to Gunderson because he was acquainted with another officer from Herr Environmental. But agency records show Moroney, also a political appointee and the former executive director of the Metropolitan Builders of Greater Milwaukee, intervened at least once on behalf of the company prior to his recusal.

A state ethics administrator found that Gunderson and Moroney did not violate the state's ethics code in their handling of the case. Jonathan Becker, head of the state Division of Ethics and Accountability, said the state's ethics code did not prohibit Gunderson's participation because he received the contributions as a legislator, a position he no longer holds.

Critics say the handling of the case raises questions about whether the political and business ties of top DNR administrators appointed by Gov. Scott Walker are influencing their handling of law enforcement cases.

Kathleen Falk, a Democratic candidate for governor, renewed her call Sunday for Stepp's immediate removal as DNR secretary. In a statement, Falk said the report shows "a dangerous culture of cronyism and favoritism" and said if elected governor she would conduct a top-to-bottom review of the agency to remove any political interference.

Enforcement by the DNR has dropped in the past two years, with the issuance of violation notices reaching a 12-year low last year. Referrals to the Department of Justice also are down, from the 12-year annual average of 65 to 21 in 2011.

Stepp and other administrators blame the drop on lack of staff and a change in philosophy that emphasizes cooperation with businesses and bringing violators into compliance earlier rather than relying on prosecution.

Clarity from the Office of the Ombudsman on the subject of a 'Health Board'

By Dianne McLester-Heim, Oneida Ombudsman 920-490-3713

As the Oneida Ombudsman- with a responsibility to the members of General Tribal Council and the community as identified by the direction of the 2005 GTC motion creating the position and stating that the Ombudsman is to "listen to the concerns of the employees of the health center and tribal community members…"; I am providing the following information to bring clarity to a currently brewing issue.

At this point in time, there is a 14 page document entitled "Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin Health Board of Directors Bylaws" that appeared as part of the April 25, 2012 Business Committee (OBC) meeting in the form of an 'Add On' to the published agenda and meeting packet. It is the understanding of the Office of the Ombudsman that a motion was made and carried on that day to submit this document to the Oneida Law Office and/or the Legislative Operating Committee for review to be brought back to the OBC on May 9, 2012. The Office of the Ombudsman has also become aware that there is talk-rumor-allegation within the community and organization that the development of a 'Health Board' has come as a result of recommendations made by the Ombudsman in a 'complaint' brought before the OBC in executive session. THIS IS NOT THE CASE.

As an Organizational Ombudsman I am a designated neutral party that works to achieve fairness of process, equity, justice, equality of opportunity, and respect. With that said, the Office of the Ombudsman has never made a recommendation for or against a 'Health Board'. What the office brought forward was a system concern, not a complaint, regarding current structure and the potential implications of the structure. The information brought forward included a possible personnel concern and personnel matters are not appropriate in public forum. For that reason alone, the entire matter was identified with the OBC in executive session. A part of the concern that was brought forward identified that since the action take to 'interim' remove the position of a General Manager, there is no identified process for addressing potential concerns that directly impact day-to-day (administrative) actions or personnel matters of anyone at the 'Division Director' level within the organization. GTC has issued a directive and re-affirmed the action of restricting the OBC to legislative policy development and refraining from day-to-day actions and personnel matters. The current system Oneida- as an organization- is functioning with contains a gap for where such matters need to go to be addressed and/or acted upon.

Based upon some concerns the Office of the Ombudsman has been hearing, it seems as though the Oneida Community does not have a clear understanding of the fact that the Health Division has two directors. It seems as though the Oneida Community does not have a clear understanding of what each director is responsible for. It also seems as though the Oneida Community does not have a clear understanding that the directors within the Health Division do not have authority over each other or the subject matter of the others area of responsibility. As a result, many members of the community are under the impression that there is one person in the Health Division who is responsible for the entire functioning and service delivery. The fact of the matter is that there are two parties, each responsible for different aspects of the functioning and delivery of services within the Health Division.

Within the duties and actions of an Ombudsman, there is a responsibility to assist with identifying possible options to address concerns/situations. Possible options are often also referred to as 'suggestions' and/or 'recommendations'. The Office of the Ombudsman did identify possible options within the information it brought forward to the OBC. The focus of these possible options was specifically directed to looking at the Health Division due to the identified community confusion about how the Health Division is currently structured to operate. The possible options identified by the Ombudsman (not to say the only options) included:

- A comprehensive review of how and why this division came to be structured using a "matrix" structure and the impact/effectiveness of using such a structure
- A return to a "functional" (single director) structure
- Do nothing and just maintain the status quo

The OBC took action to accept the information provided by the Ombudsman and moved to create a sub-committee to look at the matter and bring more information back to the committee. Another motion was made within the OBC requesting the development of 'Health Board' policies.

As your Ombudsman, with a responsibility to fairness of process, I provided communication to the OBC seeking information as to why policies would ever be developed without first identifying: what is the purpose (intent) of the policies, what concrete information identifies and supports that such policies are needed, what are the policies intended to accomplish and why, and is the issue/concern at hand actually a policy related/driven matter? In my communication with the OBC I also stated that it would be wonderful to see information communicated back to the organization and community about what was looked at, how other IHS funded clinics are structured, what options were explored, what the impact of those options would be for Oneida, and what is being looked at as 'next steps'. This type of communication would display respect for and a value of community members; especially in relation to such core services within the Oneida community.

To date I am not aware of what has or has not been looked at so I respectfully cannot comment on that. What I have seen is the 14 page "Oneida Tribe Of Indians Of Wisconsin Health Board Of Directors Bylaws". As the Ombudsman I do have questions and concerns that relate to process, application of process, and potential impact of actions as they are outlined in this document. This is not a statement in support of or against a 'Health Board'…it is statement of concern for application of fairness process, equity, justice, and respect for directives of GTC. While the questions that surface in these areas are many at this point, there is a very specific concern the Office of the Ombudsman has as it could impact the functionality of the Ombudsman. While the document includes having this board provide reports to GTC including information about interaction/collaboration with the Ombudsman, it also states that the day-to-day management of the Ombudsman is to be under this board. This directly works against the established function and standards of practice of the Ombudsman. It places the Ombudsman under the authority of the board which creates a conflict of interest as the Ombudsman is to be neutral party representing process not any part of management or the organization. It does not fit with the Ombudsman's responsibility of being an ear to concerns of the tribal community members as their concerns are not just related to the Health Division. It does not match with the identified structure of authority as stated in the Ombudsman's terms of reference which also states that change or amendment to the Oneida Ombudsman Position/Program should be a decision of GTC. Finally, it goes against the Standards of Practice as defined by the International Ombudsman Association and the Oneida Ombudsman has accepted and adopted these Standards of Practice to ensure ethical and professional functions of the Office of the Ombudsman.

National School Nurse Day

Celebrating the Caregivers

More than a century after Lina Rogers Struthers became the first school nurse in the United States there now are about 76,000 school nurses caring for students nationwide.

Those professionals will be recognized May 9 during National School Nurse Day, an annual observance that recognized the vital work of the school nurses and promotes increased understanding of their role.

It's also an opportunity for school nurses to pause to take pride in their careers and their contributions.

"Healthy children learn better is a simple truth, and school nurses help remove barriers to academic success," Linda Davis-Alldritt, president of the National Association of School Nurses (NASN), said in a statement.

National School Nurses Day was established in 1972 and is celebrated on the Wednesday during Nation Nurses Week, which runs from May 6-12. The theme of this year's observance is Advocacy, Access, Achievement: Making the Connection.

Brief History of School Nursing

In October 1902, Lina Rogers Struthers began working in the New York City school system as part of the month-long experiment to reduce health-related absenteeism. Promising results quickly followed and the city extended Struthers' appointment and she later was appointed superintendent of school nurses.

Spurred by the progress in New York, other cities followed suit in quick succession and hired school nurses, including Los Angeles, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago.

The need for school nurses remains just as acute, Davis- Alldritt said, with children facing "more challenging issues today than in past decades."

"School nurses reduce absenteeism, provide better attendance rates and care for students in school so parents have to come pick up their children much less often,: Davis Alldritt said.

The Role of a School Nurse

For some children, the school nurse may be the only primary care provider they see on a regular basis. Nurses must deal with a wide range of illnesses and conditions, including seizures, diabetes, asthma and life-threatening allergies.

In addition, a school nurse's duties and responsibilities may include:

Reporting to public health officials to help identify and prevent epidemics and disease outbreaks.

Functioning as a first responder to incidents on campus

Administer medication, monitoring respiratory status and blood glucose levels and observing for infectious diseases and physical and sexual abuse

Identifying and seeking to eliminate health threats in the school environment, such as allergens, unsafe equipment and facilities and lack of clean water

Provide screening and referral to encourage early intervention for vision and hearing problems.

Serving as a liaison among healthcare providers, school personnel and families

The lives of many children can be enriched and transformed because of the competence and commitment of a school nurse, who manages complex health issues with specialized knowledge, skills and compassion.

"It is absolutely essential that the entire school community work with the school nurse to stay informed on public health issues, the latest research, and policy that affects the health, well-being and safety of our students,: said Avis-Alldritt, the NASN president.

Meet Oneida's School Nurses

Char Kizior is the school nurse for the Oneida Early Head Start / Head Start Program. Char has been in this role with the Tribe for 8 years. Char was on the planning committee this year for the Wisconsin Association of School Nurses Annual Spring conference April 25th – April 27th. "It was an amazing experience to work with such a brilliant group of nurses." The experience was so amazing that Char will continue on the planning committee for another year.

Jocelyn Liljestrom is the school nurse for the Oneida Nation Elementary and High Schools. Jocelyn has been in this role with the Tribe since January 2012. No matter the challenge of taking on such a crucial role at the middle of the school year, Jocelyn has done a great job jumping in and getting done what needs to get done. Jocelyn attended this year's Wisconsin Association of School Nurses Annual Spring conference and will also be part of the planning committee for next year's event.

Having our nurses participating in professional groups such as the Wisconsin Association of School Nurses keeps their knowledge and skills current. This in turns benefits our students.

May 6th – 12th 2012 is National Nurses Week. Remember to thank a nurse.

Thank a nurse today!

CDC (Center for Disease Control and Prevention) and other public health agencies are honoring nurses during National Nurses Week, May 6–12, 2012. This year's theme is "Nurses: Advocating, Leading, Caring."

The nursing profession plays a critical role in improving patient outcomes, increasing access, coordinating care, and reducing health-care costs. The Affordable Care Act and the Institute of Medicine's Future of Nursing report place nurses at the center of health-care transformation in the United States. Numerous studies have shown that patients fare worse when nurse staffing is inadequate, with poorer health outcomes, more complications, less satisfaction, and greater likelihood of death. A 2011 report linked inadequate nurse staffing with increased patient mortality (1).

Hospitals remain the most common employment setting for registered nurses (RNs) in the United States, increasing from 57.4% of employed RNs in 2004 to 62.2% in 2008. Vaccination providers or those who supervise vaccination providers typically are nurses. In 2011, in the annual Gallup poll, nurses were rated the most trusted profession in United States for the 12th time in 13 years (2). Nurses' honesty and ethics were rated "very high" or "high" by 84% of poll respondents.

Ground broken on new Oneida Market and One Stop

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Oneida Retail Enterprise hosted a ground breaking Friday, May 11 for its new venture the Oneida Market and One Stop which will be built on the corner of Packerland Road and Larsen Road. Members of the Oneida Business Committee and Green Bay Mayor Jim Schmitt pitched into turn the sandy soil for the new store. Retail Operations Director Jack Denny stated the building will house an Oneida One Stop store and will be the new home for the Tsyunhehkwa store, to be renamed the Oneida Market.

"The market will be a place where the consumers can buy the Oneida tribally produced products," said Denny.

The One Stop side will sell fuel, convenience store items, and tobacco products.

The Oneida Market will sell bison and beef from the Oneida Farm as well as products from the Tsyunhehkwa Farm such as white corn and canned goods. The Tsyunhehkwa Retail Store has been undergoing restructuring in hopes to make it profitable. Denny stated the move from the Ridgeview Plaza at 3759 West Mason to the new corner location will make it more accessible.

"Basically, trying to increase the target mark, because (Tsyunhehkwa) is kind of stifled where it is. There's just a lot more traffic counts, a lot more people in this area," he said.

Partying leads to teen stabbing in Site I

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

A 16 year-old female is in custody after allegedly stabbing an 18 year-old female with a kitchen knife after a night of partying lead to a heated argument Tuesday morning.

Just before 6:00 a.m. the Oneida Police Department (OPD) responded to a home on Commissioner Street in Site I for a possible stabbing. According to OPD, eight adults ranging from 18 – 30 and four juveniles ranging from 10 – 17 were involved with no parents being present for the juveniles.

"With any party that's going on at 6 o'clock in the morning there is bound to be some alcohol involved and folks just don't get along at that time in the morning after they have been drinking all night," said OPD Chief Rich Van Boxtel.

Police are recommending charges including felony recklessly endangering safety and misdemeanor disorderly conduct.

This is the second incident within the last two weeks in Site I. Last week a lengthy standoff was resolved peacefully just feet away from where the stabbing took place. The location of the incidents has caught the attention of OPD.

"Where these things are happening, there's two buildings that are provided for our youth, where our kids are playing and it's absolutely a concern," Said Van Boxtel. "We will be taking some steps to ensure our kids our safe in our buildings."

An increase in neighborhood watch programs along with increased police presence in the community is planned.

The victim underwent surgery Tuesday for stab wounds on her right side. She is expected to make a full recovery.

OPD is still investigating the incident and has not ruled out more charges for others involved.

OPD canine officers receive protective vests

Area donor and Vest-A-Dog program make vests possible

By Travis Cottrell
Kalihwisaks

Dogs have been a prevalent force for nearly all law enforcement agencies across the country. What most people don't know is that nearly all of these canines work without the benefits of protective vests.

Within the state of Wisconsin there are over 250 canine officers, two of which call the Oneida Police Department home. Bo and Kano are the two canines that patrol the Oneida Reservation.

Thanks to a generous donation from Erica Alderson through the Wisconsin Vest-A-Dog program Bo and Kano are now equipped with bullet and stab proof vests.

"Every year we pick a different charity to work with and they are almost always animal related," said Alderson. "I had enough money to supply five dogs with vests and I picked the two here partly because when they do concerts at the casino I work with the company that does sound and lights so I do spend some time in this area and I wanted to pick the ones close to home."

The Wisconsin Vest-A-Dog program is a non-profit, tax-deductible organization that was started in 2005 to supply every canine officer in Wisconsin with a protective vest. One hundred percent of all donations made to the program go towards the purchase and shipping of these vests.

"I became involved in this program after the incident in Fond du Lac where the officers and the one dog were shot. I guess it never occurred to me that dogs would need a vest and I was also surprised that almost all law enforcement agencies weren't able to provide them because of the cost," said Alderson.

The cost per protective vest is $840. The cost in most cases is multiplied because law enforcement agencies will have more than one canine they need to supply vest for.

Considering the costs and efforts that go into housing and caring for canine officers makes the protective vests a worthwhile investment.

"The thing I really liked about the Vest-a-Dog program is that, according to them more dogs are injured from stabbing than shooting because they are so close, and these vests are stab proof as well as bullet proof," Alderson added.

The Oneida Police Department is certainly appreciative of the donation they have received.

Oneida Assistant Police Chief Eric Boulanger said of the donation, "A lot of the times depending on the nature of the call, when we don't want to go in we'll send the dogs in. When they go in unprotected they can be harmed easily. So we're very grateful to be receiving these vests. Makes us feel better knowing they have protection."

Although the protection is there, Alderson hopes that it is never necessary.

"I told all the officers I spoke to so far that I really hope you never need it but if you do need it I want it to be there to protect them because these guys (canines) are part of your family," Alderson said.

Oneida Business Committee Wrap:
May 9, 2012

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

A lengthy discussion about the possible re-organization of the Emergency Management Homeland Security (EMHS) area dominated the May 9 Oneida Business Committee (OBC) meeting.

Discussion focused on the EMHS role with the tribe and possibly placing half of the department under the direction of the Oneida Police Department's Chief. The OBC has also taken emergency action that bans EMHS personnel from carrying firearms. EMHS staff has carried firearms since the department's inception. The topic was deferred to the Oneida Police Commission for review and recommendation.

Present: Ed Delgado – Chairman, Greg Matson – Vice-Chairman, Patty Hoeft – Secretary, Tina Danforth – Treasurer, David Jordan – Councilmember, Paul Ninham – Councilmember

Absent: Vince DelaRosa – Councilmember, Melinda Danforth – Councilmember, Brandon Stevens - Councilmember

Oaths of Office

Cathy L. Metoxen, Arlene Danforth, Rochelle Powless, and Yvonne Jourdan all took the oath of office for the Personnel Commission.

Minutes

OBC meeting minutes were approved from April 25 and May 3.

Directors Quarterly Reports

The Government Services Division report was accepted.

Boards, Committees, Commissions

Quarterly reports from the Oneida Nation Veterans Committee, Oneida Land Claims Commission, Oneida Land Commission, and the Oneida School Board were accepted. The report from the South Eastern Oneida Tribal Services was deferred for the second time.

Standing Committees

Meeting minutes from the April 18 Legislative Operating Committee meeting were approved.

The establishment of the Oneida Comprehensive Health Board and by-laws was deferred to the Legislative Operating Committee. It is due back to the OBC during the June 13 meeting.

Meeting minutes from the May 4 Finance Committee meeting were approved.

General Tribal Council

Three petitions were acknowledged and sent for review by the OBC. The petitions and review are expected back in front of the OBC in 30 days. The petitions address a rent reduction for Oneida Housing Authority tenants, the review and change of the complaint process regarding the Oneida Childcare area, and the implementation of a new GTC meeting schedule along with a new per capita distribution plan.

Unfinished Business

A joint venture that would construct homes on tribal lands was deferred for two weeks.

A request to post an audio-visual position in the Gaming Division was approved.

A new location for the Oneida Farmer's Market was approved along with the additional cost to move it due to road construction on Highway 54. The market will be temporarily located at Red Willow Parkway for the 2012 season.

New Business

A Memorandum of Agreement was approved between the tribe and Indian Health Services regarding the Cora House community sewer was approved.

A limited waiver of sovereign immunity was granted for the Safe Routes to School grant. The grant is being used to construct paths around the reservation and totals $343,100.

Travel Reports

Patty Hoeft, Alliance for the Great Lakes meeting, October 21 – 23, 2011, Brookfield, WI. The travel report was approved.

Ed Delgado, Emerging Leaders Seminar Native Nations Institute, March 20 – 21, Phoenix, AZ. The report was approved.

Paul Ninham, State of the Indian Nations Address, January 26, Washington DC. The report was accepted.

Ed Delgado, Governor's quarterly meeting with tribal leaders, April 26, Red Cliff, WI. The report was accepted.

Ed Delgado, meeting at Indian Health Services regarding veterans benefits, April 15 – 18, Shakopee, MN. The report was accepted.

Additions

A travel report was accepted from Tina Danforth regarding meetings for the Native American Bank in January and February.

Passing On...

Webster Jr., John
June 12, 1928 – April 26, 2012

John Barclay Webster Jr., 83, of Greeley, CO passed away April 26, 2012 at North Colorado Medical Center. He was born June 12, 1928 in Burlington, WI to John and Hilda (Krueger) Webster. He grew up in Rheinlander, WI and graduated from Rheinlander High School in 1948. He received his Bachelors Degree from Colorado State College of Education, now UNC.

John married Carol Bunt on August 20, 1955 at St. Peter Catholic Church in Greeley. He worked as an insurance salesman and retired from Flood and Peterson Insurance. He was a Korean War Veteran stationed in Burtonwood, England as a Staff Sergeant. He played on the championship football team for Burtonwood and also played baseball and basketball.

He enjoyed bowling, golf, fishing, elk hunting and spending time with family and friends. He was a member of St. Mary Catholic Church, Elks Lodge and Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity.

He is survived by his Carol of Greeley; daughters, Victoria Swenson of Edmond, OK, Jennifer Egloff of Greeley; son, Timothy John Webster of Tulsa, OK; grandchildren, Ian Jones, Clarissa Jones, Darin Roth, Kenneth Swenson, Lance Roth, Kyle Swenson, and Garrett Webster; three great grandchildren; and sister, Mary Schroeder of Mesa, AZ. He was preceded in death by his parents; and brother, Joel Gene.

Recitation of the Rosary was held at 11 a.m. Tuesday, May 1, 2012 followed by Funeral Mass at 11:30 a.m. at St. Mary Catholic Church, 2222 23rd Avenue, Greeley.

Memorial Contributions may be made to "St. Mary Catholic School" or "American Heart Association" in care of Adamson Funeral & Cremation Services, 2000 47th Avenue, Greeley, CO 80634.

Oneida Land Commission

Community input sought in naming of structure, roads in Oneida

The Oneida Nation owns the following properties and, the Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input to name the following:

1. Oneida Residential Community Care Center – Building

The Oneida Residential Community Care Center is being built adjoining the Lee McLester, III Complex on South Overland Drive. Once ORCCC is completed, the residents at the Anna John Nursing Home will move into the new center. The Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input with the name of the building.

Original allottee:
Baptist King

2. Valley Green Housing Project – Roads

The Green Valley housing project on Florist Drive will be adding some tribal roads that will connect to Florist Drive, Valley Drive and Henry Street. The Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input with naming the potential roads.

Original allottees:
William Powless, Lewis Elm, Kate Elm & Peter Hill

3. Little Bear Development Center Conference Room

The Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input to approve the naming of the conference room in the Little Bear Development Center. Naming of a room is less formal than the naming of a road or building, so the Land Commission has been approached by the Planning Department to name the conference room The Ernest Stevens, Sr. Conference Room. If there are no strong objections received, the Commission will name the room by resolution.

Original allottee:
John Reid

All written recommendations will be submitted to the Division of Land Management. Tribal departments are encouraged to submit three names. Three recommendations will be presented to the Land Commission for final selection. The name selected will be translated into the Oneida Language through Land Commission resolution.

Submissions should include:

- Property to be named
- Location
- Recommended Name
- Reason
- Date
- Your Name or Department Name
- Tribal Enrollment number

Please submit recommendations in writing to:
Tina Hackett
Land Management Specialist
Division of Land Management
P.O. Box 365
Oneida, WI. 54155

All submissions are due by June 8, 2012.

Oneida Post Office Offers Tips During Dog Bite Prevention Week

Oneida, WI — A dog might be a man's best friend, but is it a letter carrier's? Warmer weather introduces the sights and sounds of local neighborhoods; filled with children playing, letter carriers delivering, and dogs barking. Many of these dogs are safely behind a fence or on a leash. However, there are some situations when a dog can be potentially dangerous.

"Letter carriers know first-hand about the prevention and the pain of animal attacks, and we want to help educate the community — especially parents and pet owners," said Oneida Postmaster Cheryl Koenig. "Several of our

More than 4.5 million people are bitten annually by dogs. Last year, nearly 5,600 letter carriers were bitten by dogs across the country. In the Lakeland District, which the Oneida Post Office is part of, there were 180 dog incidents. These numbers pale in comparison to the more than 2 million children who received dog bite injuries in a single year.

"Dog attacks are the most commonly reported childhood public health problem in the United States," adds Koenig. "Dog bite victims account for up to 5 percent of emergency room visits."

The following tips will help people avoid being bitten by a dog and offer advice on how to be a responsible dog owner.

How to Avoid Being Bitten

- Don't run past a dog. The dog's natural instinct is to chase and catch you. If a dog threatens you, don't scream. Avoid eye contact. Try to remain motionless until the dog leaves, and then back away slowly until the dog is out of sight.
- Don't approach a strange dog, especially one that's tethered or confined.
- While letter carriers are discouraged from petting animals, people who choose to pet dogs should always let a dog see and sniff them before petting the animal.
- If you believe a dog is about to attack you, try to place something between yourself and the dog, such as a backpack or a bicycle.

How to Be a Responsible Dog Owner

- Obedience training can teach dogs proper behavior and help owners control their dog in any situation.
- When the letter carrier comes to your home, keep your dog inside, away from the door, in another room, or on a leash.
- Dogs can be protective of their territory and may interpret the actions of letter carriers as a threat.
- Please take precautions when accepting mail in the presence of your pet.
- Spay or neuter your dog. Neutered dogs are less likely to bite. Humane Society of the United States (HSUS) statistics reflect that dogs that have not been spayed or neutered are up to three times more likely to be involved in a biting incident than neutered or spayed dogs.
- Dogs that haven't been properly socialized, receive little attention or handling, or are left tied up for long periods of time frequently turn into biters.

From 1A/Groundbreaking

There are three existing Oneida Retail Stores within a mile of the new store, but Denny said Oneida Retail has done their homework.

"We looked at traffic counts, (Wisconsin Department of Transportation) construction, we looked at everything; concentration of tribal enrolled members, where they live, where they shop, where they work, where they play. We looked at all these things, all these elements that make up a store or a site," he said. "We just want to own this area … people say the heart of Oneida is in Oneida out by Norbert Hill (Center), but the people live here, and the people shop here. This is a busy area, there's enough traffic to sustain the stores."

The new Oneida One Stop and Oneida Market will be completed towards the end of this year.

Like many artists Ken Metoxen struggles with creating pieces for his enjoyment or tailoring them for clients or the tastes of buyers. He admits this probably will always be a challenge he needs to overcome.

"I made this for me, this little one for myself, this one for myself, this for my son and everything else for other people," said Metoxen pointing to some clay pots on display in his home studio. "You pay a price, you have to sell your soul to the highest bidder. "

Metoxen's main focus now is Iroquois pottery but he also has dabbled in wood sculptures, wall hangings, stained glass, drums, and cornhusk dolls. His business is called Peace Stone Studios.

"It really is a little bit of everything. It just depends where I want to take it and I am not really sure where that is," Metoxen said.

Metoxen holds multiple college degrees but the schools never seemed to drive him to create.

"I didn't feel inspired about our culture (during school) it was more about abstract (art)," Metoxen said.

Metoxen then apprenticed under accomplished potter Rose Kerstetter in New Mexico.

Ken Metoxen stands in his studio surrounded by his pottery.

"I moved there and studied under her for about a year before she convinced me to go to the Institute of American Indian Arts (IAIA)," Metoxen said.

Metoxen thrived at IAIA as more emphasis was put on learning about culture when creating art.

After IAIA Metoxen spent time in the Army and had served as the Museum Director at the Oneida Museum along with multiple positions in the tribe's language department. The final straw that moved Metoxen to open his own business was a position in the Green Bay School District.

"I got sick of the work and listening to someone else," he said. "I was let go and focused on my pottery."

Kerstetter was still guiding Metoxen and he is quick to point out that he would like to use his business not only for profit but for the better of Oneida art.

"She keeps telling me she is not teaching me to win awards and get in galleries. She is teaching me to teach kids to revitalize traditional Iroquois pottery," Metoxen said.

Metoxen now is in flux as he navigates his way through the process of owning a business. He admires many business owners as he has realized the heart and soul that goes into starting one.

"I almost have more respect for people who have started a business and failed than people that have been successful," he said.

He also is working on getting Oneida art in Oneida places, a process he has found challenging.

"I have a product, I would like to sell it and I wonder how I can get the tribe to buy it. How do I find myself and where does Oneida pottery fit into Oneida," he asked.

Some students work to avoid huge college debt

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) ~ Roughly three-fourths of college graduates in the Duluth area are likely to carry debt. But the Duluth News Tribune found that some have been working hard to avoid it.

The newspaper reports that students graduating with little or no debt say planning, hard work and creativity have helped. Some have taken advantage of scholarships, others have found friends willing to share meal plans that don't get used.

Some say saving at a young age also helped. Some clip coupons or find other ways to save.

But for those who can't avoid loans, debt can be huge.

University of Minnesota Duluth students who took out loans graduate with an average debt of $31,000. Students at the University of Wisconsin-Superior are graduating with an average debt of $24,000.

Tribal lawyer charged in construction projects kickback scheme

LOS ANGELES (AP) ~ A tribal lawyer and three others have been indicted for a kickback scheme involving construction projects at a Southern California desert Indian casino.

Federal prosecutors in Los Angeles say attorney Gary Edward Kovall, who represents the Twenty-Nine Palms Band of Mission Indians, was paid kickbacks to convince the tribe to hire three co-defendants for projects at the Spotlight 29 Casino in Coachella.

Kovall lives in Ely, Minn.

Other defendants in Wednesday's 48-count indictment are Rancho Cucamonga contractor Paul Phillip Bards, David Alan Heslop of Templeton and Peggy Anne Sham Baugh, also of Ely.

Prosecutors say the bribery and kickback scheme was hatched by Kovall, who told the tribe to create a limited liability company to purchase real estate. Kovall then convinced the tribe to hire Heslop as company manager.

Chairman's Corner...

Ed Delgado
Chairman

Shekoli,

As we prepare for Memorial Day at the end of this month, let's remember our loved ones now gone. Let's also take time to remember those no longer with us who have served in the various branches of the military and let us never forget their sacrifices.

Childcare and Local Media

It is important we discuss the state of the Oneida Tribe and our children regarding the most recent events surrounding the Oneida Daycare Program: the employees, the parents and families, and most importantly, the children.

NBC news covered a story on concerns of parents about our Oneida Daycare Program, and many of you have questions about the news report and the quality and safety of our Daycare Program. Preceding the news report, parent concerns were heard by members of the Oneida Business Committee; allegations were investigated by both the Tribe's Education Department Director and Oneida's Internal Audit Department; and videos recorded at various locations within the daycare facility were thoroughly reviewed. At any point during the investigation process, if any child was identified as being abused, State and Tribal law requires that such abuse be reported to law enforcement authorities. To date, as the Internal Audit Department closes in on completing their investigation, my Office is not aware of any Police complaints being filed by any Tribal personnel responsible for conducting the investigation.

Throughout this whole process, the Oneida Business Committee has insisted that established Tribal law be complied with. Tribal law protects the fundamental right of all children to be protected against anyone who might endanger their safety. As stated above, all Tribal employees have the responsibility to report incidents of children being abused and neglected. In addition, Tribal employees also have rights and the Oneida Business Committee has insisted that any allegations against employees must be thoroughly investigated in accordance to our Tribal laws, and that no teacher or daycare personnel will be negatively impacted unless there is sufficient proof that wrong doing has taken place.

In closing, I am confident that we will get through this ordeal. And it is painful and the weight of protecting our children weighs heavily on all members of the Oneida Business Committee, Daycare personnel, and of course the parents who deserve to know that their treasured little-ones are in good hands when they drop them off in the care of the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin.

2013 Budget Development

The Oneida Business Committee continues its efforts to present a balanced budget to the General Tribal Council by the end of September. We have a ways to go. For too long, we have not adequately addressed Tribal spending habits and responsible return on investments. As Councilman, and now Chairman, I take my share of blame for not addressing these serious issues earlier. But we must move forward. This Business Committee must insist on responsible spending and responsible business/spending decisions. Our Division Directors must do the same and insist that directors under their supervision cooperate. Our businesses, both corporate and internal, must perform more efficiently. And our land, thousands of acres acquired at a price of tens of millions of Tribal dollars must be used effectively to serve the needs of the Oneida people, and for those lands designated for economic benefits (the farm) must be profitable. There is no reason that our farmlands to continue to be a drain on the Tribal economy.

Operation Greatest Generation

The recent honoring of World War II Veterans at the Operation Greatest Generation event, was attended by Indian and non-Indian veterans who participated in that war that took the lives of hundreds of thousands Americans. Attending the event were Tribal members Rose Kerstetter, Roy Huff, Warren Skenandore, Jim Begay and Ken Hill. Also attending, representing the Oneida Business Committee was David Jordan. All generations should remember of sacrifices of that generation, so many lives left unlived.

Thanks for reading.

Sincerely,
Ed Delgado
Oneida Tribal Chairman

Motion by David Jordan to accept the recommended appointees Cathly L. Metoxen, Arlene Danforth, Rochelle Powless, Yvonne Jourdan and Peril Huff to Personnel Commission, seconded by Vince DelaRosa. Motion carried unanimously
2. Oneida Total Integrated Enterprises-Bruce Danforth
Motion by Tina Danforth to appoint Leslie Wheelock to Oneida Total Integrated Enterprises board, seconded by Vince DelaRosa. Motion carried with one abstention and one opposition:
Opposed: Brandon Stevens
Abstained: Paul Ninham
For the record: Paul Ninham stated my abstention is due to attorney Wheelock is a very close relative of mine.
For the record: Brandon Stevens stated that the Chairman in his recommendation, recommended Bruce Danforth to serve on the OTIE board and with the OTIE board, this is essential that the board has consistency in the make-up of their board of directors. Especially with the 8A status that they hold, it shows a stability within the organization and the board, to be able to make their decisions. I understand Leslie Wheelock is very qualified. The consistency that we talked about up here as a committee we all agreed upon, the vast majority of us, had agreed upon and that we are changing that decision and I just want that to be noted.

Quarterly Reports
1. Oneida Gaming Commission – Shirley Hill, Chairwoman
Excerpt from April 11, 2012: Motion by Patty Hoeft to defer the Oneida Gaming Commission quarterly report for two weeks and the liaison to the Gaming Commission, Councilman Jordan, will work with them to ensure that we have a report, seconded by Paul Ninham. Motion carried unanimously

Standing Committees
Legislative Operating Committee
Melinda J. Danforth, Chairwoman
1. April 4, LOC minutes
Motion by David Jordan to approve the April 4, LOC minutes, seconded by Tina Danforth. Motion carried unanimously
2. GTC Meeting Stipend Payment Policy –Deleted from agenda
3. Forward GTC 2011 referendum questions
Motion by Brandon Stevens to forward GTC 2011 referendum questions to the next available General Tribal Council meeting for discussion, seconded by Paul Ninham. Motion carried with two oppositions:
Opposed: Tina Danforth, Vince DelaRosa
For the record: Vince DelaRosa stated I only opposed because I think the information that we advance to General Tribal Council has to be distinct, clear, analytical, thought-provoking, but it has to be to the point. This type of information I just don't think there is any relevancy. It has relevancy in other discussions, as it relates to enrollment and those types of issues, but as it relates to absentee, it does not. So that's one of the reasons I opposed. I also noted that there was a statistical error. The Treasurer caught that, so the data also needs to be accurate.

Finance Committee
Treasurer Tina Danforth, Chairwoman
1. April 20 minutes and e-poll
Motion by Tina Danforth to approve the April 20 minutes, seconded by Vince DelaRosa. Motion carried unanimously
For the record: Ed Delgado stated let the record show that the motion that was just approved, includes the minutes of 4-20-12 and the e-poll approving for those minutes.

Community Development Planning Committee (CDPC)
Vince DelaRosa, Chairman
1. March 1, 2012 minutes
Motion by Paul Ninham to approve the March 1, 2012 minutes, seconded by Vince DelaRosa. Motion carried unanimously

Quality of Life
Paul Ninham, Chairman

General Tribal Council
1. Preparation for semi-annual GTC meeting July 2, 2012, Radisson Hotel, Oneida
Sponsor: Patty Hoeft
Excerpt from April 11, 2012: Motion by David Jordan to defer for two weeks, with a follow up report provided and specify what time the meeting will be held, seconded by Paul Ninham. Motion carried with one abstention.
Motion by Tina Danforth to approve the July 2nd, 6 p.m. date for the next General Tribal Council semi-annual meeting, seconded by Vince DelaRosa. Motion carried unanimously
Motion by Brandon Stevens to call a special meeting in the middle of next week, to be called by the Chair, to make decisions on what will be on the July 2nd agenda, seconded by David Jordan. Motion carried with one abstention:
Abstained: Tina Danforth
For the record: Tina Danforth stated she is abstaining because she will not be available.
2. Petitioner Michael Debraska: Per capita plan, GTC meeting payment and number of GTC meetings per year
Sponsor: Patty Hoeft
Motion by David Jordan to acknowledge receipt of the petition and that the petition goes forward for a legislative analysis, fiscal and financial analysis and a legal and policy analysis, seconded by Brandon Stevens. Motion carried unanimously

Action in open session on items from Executive Session Discussion meeting of April 24, 2012

Reports

1. New York land claim settlement update – Ed Delgado/Diane House

Motion by Brandon Stevens to defer to May 8 BC Executive Session Discussion meeting, seconded by David Jordan. Motion carried unanimously

2. Chief Counsel report – Jo Anne House

a. Attorney Arlinda Locklear contract amendment for 12 months

Excerpt from April 11, 2012: Motion by Patty Hoeft to defer this request to renew the contract for Attorney Arlinda Locklear to the next Business Committee agenda, seconded by Greg Matson. Motion carried with one abstention.

Motion by Paul Ninham to approve third amendment to contract with Attorney Locklear, contract #2012-0412, seconded by Brandon Stevens. Motion carried unanimously

b. Attorney assignment chart

Motion by Paul Ninham to accept as FYI, seconded by Brandon Stevens. Motion carried unanimously

Motion by Paul Ninham to accept as FYI the Open Records request regarding contracts, seconded by Brandon Stevens. Motion carried unanimously

Motion by Paul Ninham to request Council member Melinda J. Danforth to submit a request to GTC to confirm Constitutional amendment regarding removal of Secretary from constitution and a report on the concerns raised regarding this, seconded by David Jordan. Motion carried unanimously For the record:

Vince DelaRosa stated he abstained because I'm really unclear what that motion… it sounded garbled. I wasn't sure exactly what we're… unless I misunderstood it, I wasn't exactly sure what that motion is proposing to do, but we need clarification on that issue. I think the Councilman mentioned that it was to reassure us. That's a big issue for us, so I'm sure we'll be speaking more on that issue, but I just abstained because I want to be clear that we are not moving prior to really understanding the legal issues associated with that and I know Melinda's been working on that a lot.

Motion by Brandon Stevens to accept the report regarding the Independent Contractor Policy and the request to bring forward emergency amendments at the April 25th BC meeting, seconded by Paul Ninham. Motion carried with one abstention:

Abstained: David Jordan

Motion by Paul Ninham to adopt the resolution regarding the emergency amendments to the Independent Contractor Policy, seconded by Brandon Stevens. Motion carried with one abstention:

Abstained: David Jordan

Motion by Paul Ninham to direct the Oneida Law Office to begin the process to request a Private Letter Ruling from the Internal Revenue Service regarding employees and independent contracts and that such costs shall be identified within the Oneida Law Office budget saving first or the legal services contingency funds if such funding is available, seconded by Vince DelaRosa. Motion carried unanimously

Motion by Brandon Stevens to direct the Chair and/or Vice Chair to meet with the Emergency Management Systems and Homeland Security emergency management, regarding the resolution #11-10-10-C, seconded by Paul Ninham. Motion carried with one abstention:

Writer's conference celebrates Indigenous arts

Returning the Gift, the national writer's conference which for 20 years has been a major instrument in Native writing, will be held this year on September 5-9 in Milwaukee.

Joseph Bruchac and Joy Harjo, two of the original founders of the conference, will be present as keynote speakers. Bruchac's sons, James and Jesse will also be present.

The theme of the conference will be "A Gathering of Words at the Gathering of Waters."

Events of Wednesday and Thursday will take place in and around the Hefter Center of the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee; Friday through Sunday's activities will take place at the Indian Summer Festival Grounds along Milwaukee's lakefront. At Hefter, there will be panels, workshops and presentations. There will be opportunities for individual manuscript evaluation and (weather permitting) an outdoor skills/ writing from nature session. Harjo and Bruchac will also be giving readings around Milwaukee.

Friday attendees at the RTG tent on the Festival grounds will participate in Indian Summer's "Education Day." In the evening, the Returning the Gift awards banquet will include music by Wade Fernandez. On Saturday and Sunday, Bruchac, Harjo and Fernandez will be among the featured Indian Summer performers. Other RTG participants will have the opportunity to perform at several of the Indian Summer venues throughout the festival. A National Indigenous slam competition will be featured, and sales of Native-written books will be anchored by Woodland Pattern Book Center.

Indian Summer is a spectacular festival that annually attracts 50,000 people over the three days. It includes music performance, a contest pow-wow, traditional villages from Wisconsin tribes such as Menominee, Oneida and Ojibwe; the ISMA Music Awards, lacrosse demonstrations, an artists' circle, traditional craft demonstrations, vendors, food, children's activities, fireworks, and much more. Performance run simultaneously on three large stages and other smaller stages and tented venues feature a wide range of events from fire dancers to puppeteers.

We invite you to be a part of this wonderful celebration of Indigenous arts. The Returning the Gift Conference is being sponsored by Yukhika-latuhse (She tells us stories), the Native writer's journal published by Oneida Nation Arts Program. The website Yuhkika-latuhse.org will provide more information, and it is here you can register. We hope to see you this summer!

Shakoti?nukú·lale? Latiksashúha?

Since the doors opened in August 2008, the agency has grown substantially with 14 staff members. Due to the increase in cases it is important to keep the community updated with the ongoing growth of the agency. Child Support will be making bi-weekly submissions to address the communities concerns and questions regarding child support as well as informing you of the goals and direction of the program. We are excited to develop some new community planned activities and stratified case management to meet the needs of all our families. Please keep your eyes open for our articles, as we will be answering frequently asked questions.

Wis. leaders can ban hidden guns at polls

MADISON, Wis. (AP) _ Wisconsin elections officials have shifted their rationale for banning concealed weapons at the polls.

Local election clerks have asked the Government Accountability Board whether voters can pack at the polls. GAB attorney Mike Haas concluded local governments can ban concealed weapons at the polls because elections qualify as special events.

Haas told the board Tuesday his staff has adopted a cleaner analysis from the state Justice Department. That agency concluded a provision in the concealed carry law that allows local governments to ban weapons in spaces they occupy extends to polling places, whether the sites are on government property or not.

Haas says his staff will advise municipalities to develop their own policies. He wasn't sure they would have time to make decisions ahead of the June 5 recall, however.

Plexus to build $50 million plant in Neenah

NEENAH, Wis. (AP) _ Plexus Corp. says its new $50 million high-tech manufacturing plant in Neenah will create 350 jobs.

Plexus says construction of the plant that will manufacture high-tech electronic components will begin in July. The company will receive up to $15 million in tax credits over a seven-year period through the state's Wisconsin Economic Development Corp. The tax credits will be tied to the company's capital investment, job retention and creation.

Neenah community development director Chris Haese tells the Appleton Post-Crescent (http://post.cr/JebX01 ) the new plant will also retain 1,000 jobs. Plexus will also build a $7 million data and development center near its global headquarters in downtown Neenah in 2013.

Native American women seek protections from abuse

By Suzanne Gamboa
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) – Diane Millich's ex-husband was never arrested for any of the more than 100 times he slapped, kicked or punched her before showing up at her Colorado workplace and firing a 9 mm pistol, wounding the co-worker who pushed her out of the way.

When he was finally arrested in New Mexico weeks after the shooting, he was treated as a first-time offender.

Why? Because while Millich is Native American, her ex-husband is not and all the domestic violence took place on the Southern Ute reservation.

Under a 1978 Supreme Court decision, non-Indians cannot be prosecuted by tribal courts for crimes committed on tribal land. Last July, the Justice Department recommended that Congress give tribes local authority to prosecute non-Indians in misdemeanor domestic and dating violence cases. The pending renewal of the Violence Against Women Act seemed a good chance to do that.

But the act has become entangled in election-year politics, with each party adding language on other issues that infuriates the other. Although the version the Senate passed 68-31 would follow the Justice Department recommendations and give tribes the power to prosecute non-Indians in tribal courts, the House so far has not. The House could change its mind and add the provisions as soon as this week when it is expected to consider the bill.

Millich said a change in the law certainly would have helped her deal with the abuse in her marriage, which began with slapping and pushing when she was a 24-year-old newlywed. After a year, Millich filed for divorce and sought a protective order, which her ex-husband mocked because he knew it would not be enforced.

"American Indian women do not have the same protections as non-Indian women. Federal law ... has a large gaping hole in it for abusers who are non-Indian," Millich, 49, said in a briefing for Capitol Hill staffers last week.

She said tribal and county authorities routinely refused to arrest her ex-husband, whom she did not identify by name. Once, she said, he called the county sheriff himself "to show me that no one could stop him," and indeed, two deputies came to their home and confirmed that they did not have jurisdiction to arrest him.

"I felt like I was walking on eggshells and knew inside that something terrible was going to happen ... After I fled he broke into the house, breaking windows, furniture and dishes. He cut the knuckles of his hands during the violence and smeared his blood over the walls, floor and my bedroom sheets," Millich said.

The day after destroying her home, Millich's ex-husband showed up at her Bureau of Land Management workplace with a gun. Although officials responded, he escaped and was at large for two weeks while she hid in a women's shelter, fearful he might find her, she said. Her ex-husband ultimately was offered, and took, a plea deal on an aggravated traffic offense.

"In the end, he was right in that he was above the law," she said.

Statistics on domestic and dating violence involving Native Americans and non-Indians are vague both because of varying ways tribes collect the information and because much of the violence is unreported. There is hope to improve collection of data.

A recent Census report found about 77 percent of people living on Native American and Alaska Native areas are non-Indian. About half of Native American women are married to non-Indians, according to the Justice Department.

Lisa Boothe, a spokeswoman for Rep. Sandy Adams, R-Fla., herself a victim of domestic violence who wrote the House version of the Violence Against Women Act that excludes the tribal provisions, said laws already exist to deal with non-Indian domestic violence against native peoples that takes place on tribal land.

Although the federal government has authority to prosecute domestic violence involving non-Indians, the cases often are not priorities, said John Harte, who has been lobbying in support of the provisions on behalf of Native American tribes. He said that in 2007, the Salt River Pima, Ariz., tribal police responded to more than 400 acts of domestic violence, many involving non-tribe members. That same year U.S. attorneys prosecuted only 21 misdemeanor crimes on Indian lands across the country, Harte said.

Another law gave some states all federal prosecution powers held by the federal government over non-Indians. The law originated in the 1950s as the country was enacting "termination policies" to assimilate tribes into the broader society and do away with reservations and tribes themselves, according to the Justice Department.

Though some local officials have good working relationships with tribes, the isolation of tribal lands and the lack of resources - states don't collect taxes within Indian Country - usually mean misdemeanor domestic and dating violence take a back seat. Often domestic and dating violence steadily worsens if the abuser is goes unpunished until the victim is seriously wounded or killed.

"Is it working on the ground? The answer is no," said Terri Henry, a tribal council representative for Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians in Charlotte, N.C.

The legislation also grants defendants the right to counsel if they can't afford an attorney, an impartial jury that includes non-Indians and a right to appeal. Non-Indian defendants would have the same rights in tribal courts as they have in state courts, according to the Justice Department.

House Passes VAWA with Weakened Tribal Provisions;

NCAI Voices Serious Concerns Regarding HR 4970

Washington, DC – Today, (May 16) the U.S. House of Representatives voted and passed a version of the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) reauthorization - HR 4970 - without any of the key tribal jurisdictional provisions intact. The National Congress of American Indians (NCAI) has serious concerns about the alternative provisions contained in the House bill and is calling on the House and Senate to restore the bipartisan and constitutionally sound tribal provisions in the Senate version of the bill, S.1925, that create local solutions to the epidemic of domestic violence experienced by Native women.

"Native women aren't safer as a result of the passage of HR 4970. In fact, the tribal provisions included in this bill create additional hurdles for Indian women seeking protection from violence on tribal lands, and that is unacceptable," said Juana Majel-Dixon, 1st Vice President of the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI) and co-chair of the NCAI Task Force on Violence Against Women. "Indian Country supports the bipartisan Senate VAWA bill, which contains constitutionally sound tribal provisions that provide local solutions that will deliver long-overdue justice to Native women and safety to tribal communities."

Passed by a vote of 222-205, the tribal provisions included in HR 4970 would be a step backward in contrast to the bipartisan Senate VAWA bill, supported by NCAI and tribes across the country. Over the past few days, H.R. 4970 has been amended to include provisions that have the potential to cause great confusion surrounding tribes' authority to issue civil protection orders and that could further endanger Native victims.

HR 4970 would "federalize" the issuance and enforcement of protection orders for Native victims, authorizing Indian victims of domestic violence or Indian tribes on behalf of Indian victims to seek protection orders from U.S. district courts against suspects of abuse. This approach fails to address the crux of the problem - a lack of local authority to handle misdemeanor level domestic and dating violence when the perpetrator is non-Indian. The legislation passed by the House is drafted in a way that undermines the safety and autonomy of victims.

On the other hand, S.1925 contains key tribal provisions that would empower the governmental authorities closest to the alleged criminal activity—tribal police and courts—to intervene early in acts of domestic violence committed by non-Indians within the tribe's territory, before the violence escalates to the point of serious assault or homicide. These provisions are limited in scope, do not infringe on existing federal or state court jurisdiction, and defendants who stand trial before a tribal court would have the full panoply of constitutional rights.

Stevens helps bring Crooked Arrows to the big screen

Ernie Stevens III able to bring passion for film making and his favorite sport together with first ever studio film about lacrosse Crooked Arrows

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Much like the underdog lacrosse team it portrays, the movie Crooked Arrows beat the odds to get released into select theaters starting Friday, May 18. For seven years, producer Mitchell Peck shopped the story about Native Americans and lacrosse to studios that weren't interested in either topic.

About two-and-a-half-years ago, Peck was introduced to Ernie Stevens III by a mutual friend. As co-producer Stevens contributed his knowledge about Iroquois culture and history to flesh out the story of the fictional Senequoit Tribe of the film.

"My soul job at the beginning was to make it culturally, socially, politically accurate as it relates to Native Americans," said Stevens.

The movie focuses on Joe Logan (Brandon Routh) who manages a small casino on the Senequoit reservation. Logan wants to expand for more economic growth, but to get support of the council, he's asked to coach the high school lacrosse team which struggles against better equipped elite prep schools.

"Native people will understand it and enjoy it, lacrosse players will definitely enjoy it," he said.

Stevens was also drawn to the film due to his background playing lacrosse.

"It's about us, it's about all the people who love and play lacrosse, but the spirit lies within where it came from, which is our people," he said.

Stevens' is hoping the movie will get a boost from the growing popularity of lacrosse as a sport, and vice-versa.

"Part of the goal of this film, I think it will happen, is getting kids of all ages, all nationalities, all countries to pick up a lacrosse stick," he said.

Stevens said he got a little frustrated when he felt the production team was focusing too much on collegiate style lacrosse.

"I told them to get up to Six Nations, see how they play, because the other goal was to figure out a unique, specific way that they win the … against the bad guys so to speak," he said. "It has to be done playing rez ball."

While Routh is an athletic actor who learned to play lacrosse for the movie, most of the Crooked Arrows team were lacrosse players learning how to act.

"The whole goal at the beginning for me was to both the story aspect to also just seeing it on screen was to employ lacrosse players and to turn them into actors, and I think they did a great job," he said.

Stevens was able to bring in Oneida lacrosse player Lakwaho McLester to play a historical role.

"He's actually in one of the opening shots," said Stevens. "He speaks in Oneida in that scene ... we had a collaboration of languages."

Stevens hopes to delve deeper into the story of the Crooked Arrows, their nation, and their game in films to come.

"Knock on wood, sequel, there's a lot more story to be told," he said.

The movie will open primarily on the east coast on May 18, and will open in New Berlin, Menomonee Falls, and Madison on Friday, June 1.

Call for nominations: 2012 NWTC Distinguished Alumni Award

Green Bay, WI - The Northeast Wisconsin Technical College Alumni Association is currently seeking nominations for the 2012 NWTC Distinguished Alumni Award.

For over 20 years, the Alumni Association has honored outstanding NWTC graduates from throughout the district for their professional achievements, community service, and contributions to technical education.

The 2012 Distinguished Alumni Award recipient will be recognized during the NWTC Educational Foundation Donor Recognition/Scholarship Banquet on August 2, 2012, in De Pere. The NWTC Alumni Association must receive all nominations by 4:00 p.m. on May 23.

To nominate an NWTC graduate or for more information, contact Crystal Harrison: crystal.harrison@nwtc.edu, (920) 498-5541, or (800) 422-NWTC, extension 5541.

The NWTC Alumni Association supports NWTC students, staff, and Foundation by enhancing the image and visibility of the college and providing student scholarships. Alumni Association members also network with professionals outside of their careers, have the opportunity to assume leadership roles as members of the Alumni Board, and participate in Alumni Association activities. For more information, go to www.nwtc.edu/alumni

Young Artisans' Event Returns to Artstreet

Green Bay, Wis. ~ Arts Events, Incorporated is pleased to present the Young Artisans' Event at Artstreet. Now in its third year of operation, the Young Artisans' Event gives ambitious new artists, ages eight to eighteen, the opportunity to display and sell their work during the event on August 25th and 26th, downtown Green Bay. The purpose of the Young Artisans' Event is to allow a diverse group of young and creative minds to come together and showcase their artwork and to establish themselves within Green Bay's art culture. From painting and photography to sculpture and jewelry, aspiring young artists will enjoy the enriching opportunity of experiencing an art fair alongside seasoned art professionals.

The primary criteria for selection will be based on creativity in design and excellence in display. Artists must submit an entry form by June 15, 2012 with photos in order to be eligible for consideration. Applications and complete guidelines and rules of entry can be obtained by contacting Arts Events, Inc. at 920-435-5220 or info@artseventsinc.com

Oneida Housing Authority

Community Update

The Oneida Housing Authority is having an OPEN HOUSE to show the community the type and size of housing being offered to community members. You continue to read in the Kalihwisaks what OHA is not doing, come see for yourself. Do not believe the misinformation people are placing in the paper, see for yourself and you be the judge. Remember it's your community and you have a say in the quality and type of housing being offered.

You need to speak out at the next Community Development Planning Committee to be held on June 7, 2012 at 9 a.m. in the OBC conference room. This is especially important for elders because decisions will be made regarding the type and style of unit offered in the proposed Elder Village.

What do you want your community to look like?

The Oneida Housing Authority has received notice that a petition is being considered to reduce rents at OHA. In order to make an informed decision on this petition, you need to know what the rental income is used for and what a reduction in rents would mean. The rents are used to maintain and repair the units so that they are in top condition. The funds that the rent reduction, as proposed by the petition, would reduce revenue by $73,000 a year. This money also offsets other expenses, so we have more money to use in building more homes. We currently have 156 families on our waiting list, so reducing available funding to build more units does not seem to be in the best interest of the membership. This money would have to be made up by Tribal Contribution or a reduction in maintenance standards. At his point OHA is 100% GRANT FUNDED; we receive no Tribal Contribution.

Additional Housing Opportunities available to the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin

-HUD Section 184 Loan Program – $6 million

-HUD Title VI Loan Guarantee Program - $12 million

-USDA Rural Development Loan - $2 million for infrastructure

-USDA Rural Development Section 515 Multi-Family Housing Loan - $1 million

-HUD Section 202 Elderly Program – Cash Advance for $1 million

-PILOT (Payment in lieu of taxes) Tax Agreement - Hobart

The Oneida Housing Authority (OHA) is the proud recipient of a $600,000 competitive FY 2012 Indian Community Development Block Grant. The OHA grants team scored 94 out of 100 points for this competitive grant. OHA has submitted three competitive grant applications; FY 2009, FY 2011, FY 2012 and have been awarded three grants for a total of $2.4 million dollars (IHBG $600,000 and ICDBG $1,800,000) for infrastructure at Green Valley, Elder Village and Overland Road. All these infrastructure funds has been raised by OHA to provide water, sewer and roads at these development sites. There have been no Tribal dollars committed to any of these development sites. It has been funded by OHA Indian Housing Block and Indian Community Development Block Grants.

Summary of Grant Activities by Oneida Housing Authority

In the past three years OHA has accomplished the following;

ARRA FY 2009 $3 million – Competitive stimulus funds for the rehabilitation of 100 rental units. Activities includes, roof replacement, energy star appliances, energy star furnaces and water heaters, insulation upgrades, lighting, windows, etc.

ICDBG FY 09', FY 11' and FY 12' $1.8 million – water, sewer and roads for Green Valley, Elder Village and Overland Road infrastructure.

ROSS $210,403 – A three year grant to hire a service coordinator to provide initiatives to bring tenants self-sufficiency through education, job skills, budgeting and coordination of social services available in the community.

Oneida Housing Authority IHBG formula grants included in the past three years.

FY 2012 - $3,738,660

FY 2011 - $3,767,631

FY 2010 - $3,938,288

FY 2009 - $3,524,653

Total of $14,969,232

Where does all the money go that OHA receives?

Families that now have housing from these past three years average over 20 units per year.

Acquisitions = 32

New Construction =29

Native American Actor Chaske Spencer' Video Sparks 2012 Native Vote Campaign

Star of Twilight Movies Releases New Native Vote Video to encourage Native Voters to "be the shift, be the Native Vote."

Chase Spencer, Actor First Nation descendant of Lakota (Sioux) Nation

WASHINGTON, DC—Native American Actor Chaske Spencer, best known for his role in the Twilight movie saga, is the star of a new video released to inspire Native Americans to get out the "Native Vote." Native Vote, a non-partisan initiative of the National Congress of American Indians, released the video almost exactly six months before national Election Day on November 6, 2012. The video highlights the power and importance of the Native Vote and encourages voters in tribal communities to understand that every voice—and every vote—counts.

"Native American voters are one of the country's most under represented and disenfranchised group of voters . Native Vote is focused on turning out the largest Native Vote in history in 2012. Estimates show that over one million eligible Native voters are unregistered. It's going to take people like Chaske Spencer stepping forward to help spread the word," said NCAI Executive Director Jacqueline Pata. "This is a true grassroots effort and we need everyone to be involved to spread the word. We hope that Indian Country and non-Native people alike are inspired, especially young people, to get more involved in civic activities such as voting."

"Nothing is more important to me than the future of our people. I started an effort called 'Be the Shift' to encourage young people to be involved, that's why I support Native Vote in encouraging American Indians and Alaska Natives to vote in federal, state, and local elections," says Chaske Spencer in the video, making its way around social media site and can be viewed on YouTube. Spencer continues, "In 2012, people all over the United States will be voting for the next President and Native people cannot be left out of the process. Be the shift, be the Native Vote. Every voice counts."

Recent data suggests that over one million eligible American Indians and Alaska Natives were not registered to vote during the last election cycle; 34 percent of the total Native population is over 18 and eligible to vote.

NCAI's Native Vote initiative works to inform Native voters of key deadlines, registration guidelines, voting locations and process, candidates, ballot measures, and more. The 2012 campaign has four main focus areas: Get-Out-The-Vote (GOTV) and Voter Registration, Voter Protection, Voter and Candidate Education, and Access to Data. The campaign provides trainings, webinars, and informational resources to tribally-appointed Native Vote coordinators and local self-appointed coordinators to support voter engagement efforts.

Chaske Spencer is actively involved in raising a national awareness of Native issues, especially through his organization, United Global Shift. United Global Shift empowers people from around the world to create sustainable, lasting change in their communities and countries.

About Native Vote: Native Vote was founded as a nonpartisan initiative of the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI) in response to low voter participation and severe infractions against Native voters. For more information or to get involved in the 2012 Native Vote campaign, visit www.NativeVote.org. To learn more about United Global Shift, visit www.UnitedGlobalShift.com.

About the National Congress of American Indians: Founded in 1944, the National Congress of American Indians is the oldest, largest, and most representative American Indian and Alaska Native organization in the country. NCAI advocates on behalf of tribal governments and communities, advances strong tribal/federal government-to-government policies, and promotes a better understanding among the general public regarding American Indian and Alaska Native governments, people, and rights.

Cultural Heritage staff attends Culture Keepers conference

Staff from the Oneida Cultural Heritage Department was able to attend the Convening Culture Keepers Conference, May 3 - 4, 2012. Anita Barber, Rita Lara, Sara Summers-Luedtke, Nicolas Reynolds, Eliza Skenandore, and Kymberley Pelky attended.

Convening Culture Keepers is a group sponsored by an IMLS grant to UW-Madison—SLIS that meets around the state of Wisconsin. Members are employees of different tribes and nations from around the state of Wisconsin that work for tribal libraries, museums, and cultural centers. The conference is a great training for the staff and creates networking with the other tribes in Wisconsin. They just had the fourth of six meetings. The first one was here in Oneida two Octobers ago. The IMLS grant covered travel, room, and two meals for the conferences, so there is little if no cost to the tribes.

They gathered in the afternoon and toured the facility. They have a conference room where they video conference with other Potawatomi tribes for language, a photo studio and dark room, an archival storage room, computer lab, gift shop, a craft & activity walk-in storage room with shelves to the ceiling, a community room with a kitchen for tribal and tribal member use, a really nice museum that the director, Mike Alloway, wishes was bigger, and a library with Native American materials available for checkout. There are many features in the building that have cultural relevance, which is always wonderful to see. Then everyone learned about the Forest County Potawatomi database for all sorts of archival records. The Potawatomi use a program called Stellent and a GIS program from mPower Integrations. These programs work much like the Oneida's PastPerfect program and their GLIS information systems.

Then they made black ash baskets. The bottoms were already completed so they could get the baskets done in few hours and they did. It was so cool the way all of them turned out differently! While everyone was finishing up the baskets, they served dinner.

Group Photo of Convening Culture Keepers at Forest County Potawatomi Cultural Center, May 4, 2012.

The next morning the day started with stories and words by Jim Thunder, a Potawatomi elder. The day's sessions started and everyone learned about "Meaningful and Relevant: Interpretation for Museums, Libraries, and Archives," "Advocating for Your Institution," and "Developing Your Oral History Program." All the sessions were valuable and informative, and worth the drive up to Potawatomi!

Oneida Cultural Heritage Departmental Meeting for May

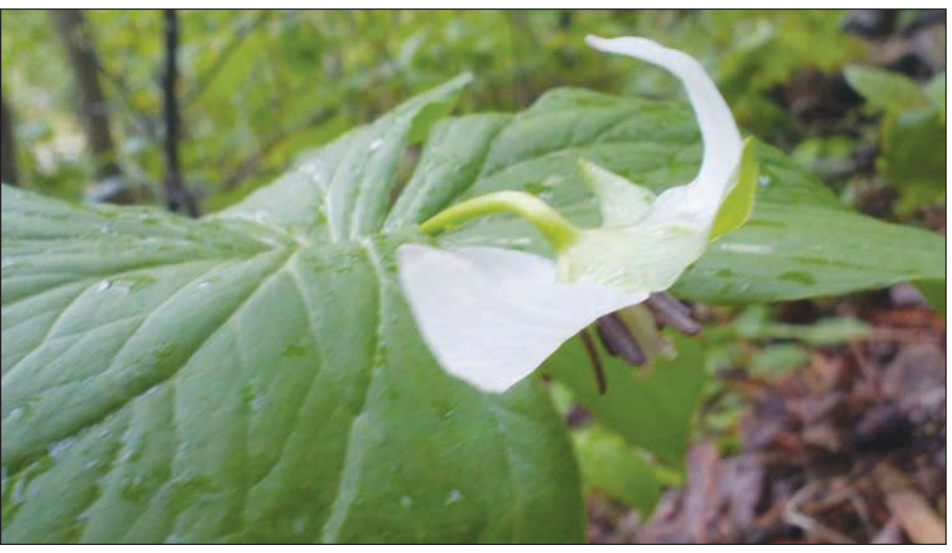

Photo submitted by Eliza Skenandore

Nodding Trillium (trillium cernuum,) a rare species of trillium. It is considered by many websites to be an Ontario wildflower.

The curriculum for the Cultural Heritage Department's monthly staff meeting was about traditional medicines for May. Members of Cultural Heritage, History Department, Cultural/Wellness, Language House/ANA, Museum, and Library met at the Museum and had a session with Sylvia Cornelius about the upcoming book about Culturally Significant Plants in Oneida, Wisconsin.

After that presentation, we took a nature walk on the Oneida Museum trails. Loretta Metoxen was there to give us plant knowledge. Randy Cornelius also shared plant knowledge and language words for some of the plants, and Kymberley Pelky and others shared what knowledge they knew as well.

Some of the plants identified were white pine, cat mint, dandelion, Virginia Creeper, gooseberries, chokecherry, mushrooms, sumac, jewelweed, maple, white ash, lady fern, and the rare nodding trillium. Even with the overcast weather, it was a great walk and a very satisfying departmental meeting!

The trails are now open at the Oneida Nation Museum! See how many of these plants you can find—you can find them all by staying on the trails. Wear proper gear and protect yourself from mosquitoes.

The First Lady's Let's Move! Child Care Initiative Recognizes BIE FACE Program

WASHINGTON, D.C.— The Bureau of Indian Education Family & Child Education Program (FACE) has received national recognition for its exceptional work in promoting young children's heath and preventing childhood obesity. The recognition came from the first lady's Let's Move! Child Care initiative, Acting Assistant Secretary-Indian Affairs Del Laverdure announced today.

"Incorporating Let's Move! activities into our own Let's Move! in Indian Country is already having a positive impact on our students in BIE schools," said Laverdure. "I am grateful to the first lady for initiating and leading the effort to reduce childhood obesity in Indian Country. Healthy students are key to Indian Country's future."

The Bureau's FACE Program was recognized at the Let's Move! Child Care Recognition Luncheon, which took place on May 9, 2012 at the Omni Shoreham Hotel in Washington, D.C. White House Assistant Chef and Senior Policy Advisor for Healthy Food Initiatives, Sam Kass, gave keynote remarks and highlighted FACE's efforts.

The FACE program was recognized for carrying out exceptional work to promote and implement the goals of Let's Move! Child Care. FACE includes using creative strategies, engaging families in obesity prevention efforts, and overcoming challenges to get children moving and encourage healthy eating in early care and education settings. FACE was one of twenty programs nationwide selected for recognition out of a multitude of groups including early education and child care programs and networks, communities, and states.

"It is extremely exciting and pleasurable to have been nominated and selected for this great honor and achievement," said BIE Director Keith Moore. "The BIE is truly dedicated to being at the forefront of the movement to build a healthier and more sustainable future for our children across Indian Country. This award acknowledges our perseverance to achieve greatness, and inspires us to keep pushing forward."

Let's Move! Child Care is a nationwide call-to-action to empower early education and child care programs.

Healthy Vision: Make It Last a Lifetime

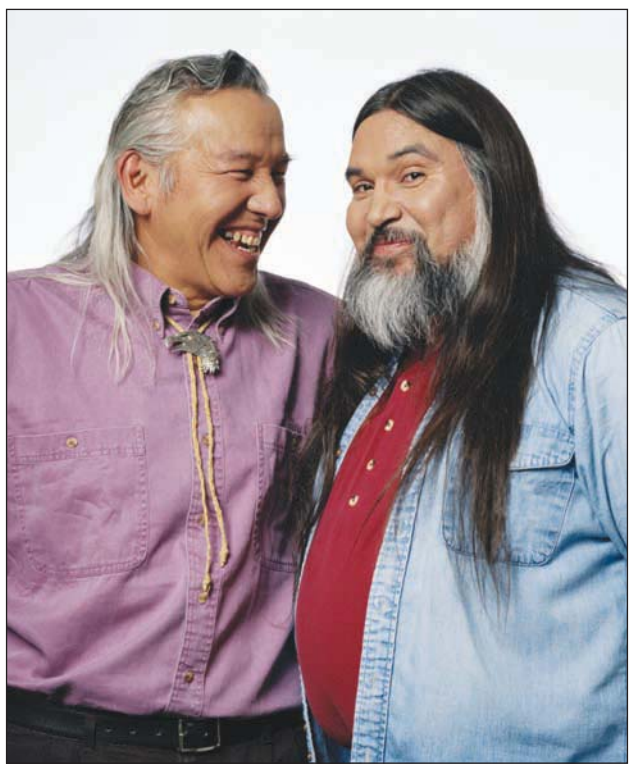
Vision plays an important part in our lives. It enables us to care for our families. We also use our sight to watch our families and our communities grow, to perform our day-to-day activities, and to get around. It is important to make sure your vision is healthy so it can last a lifetime. And that takes wise choices.

Research studies have found that diabetes is common among American Indians and Alaska Natives, and has increased substantially over the past two decades. Because American Indians and Alaska Natives have a higher risk of getting diabetes, they also have a higher risk of getting eye problems resulting from diabetes, such as diabetic eye disease. Diabetic eye disease is a group of eye problems that includes diabetic retinopathy, the most common eye disease in people with diabetes.

One of the most important things you can do to protect your vision is to get a comprehensive dilated eye exam. In this procedure, an eye care professional places drops in your eyes to dilate, or widen, the pupil to allow more light to enter the eye the same way an open door lets more light into a room. This allows your eye care professional to examine the back of the eyes for any signs of eye disease. Early detection and treatment can help to reduce your risk of vision loss and blindness.

"Diabetic retinopathy, glaucoma, and age-related macular degeneration [AMD] affect millions of Americans," says Dr. Sieving, director of the National Eye Institute (NEI) of the National Institutes of Health. "These conditions were once untreatable, robbing people of their vision, mobility, and independence. Thankfully, in the last decade, medical researchers have developed highly effective, sight-saving treatments. However, these treatments are only effective if the disease is diagnosed before it causes vision loss. Since there are often no warning signs, regular dilated eye exams are important to early detection and treatment."

Your past is just as important as your future. Many eye diseases and conditions are hereditary and knowing your family history can help to determine if you are at higher risk. Make sure you pass on your history to the next generation so they can take care of their eyes, too. And, tell your eye care professional if anyone in your family has an eye disease or condition.



Other simple steps to keep your vision at its best include the following:

Make healthy food choices—A variety of vegetables, especially dark leafy greens such as spinach, kale, or collard greens, should be an important part of your diet. Researchers have found that people with diets that contain higher levels of vitamins C and E, zinc, and omega-3 fatty acids (found in salmon, tuna, and halibut) are less likely to develop age-related macular degeneration.

Quit smoking or never start—Tobacco smoking has been linked to an increased risk of AMD, cataract, and optic nerve damage, all of which can lead to vision loss.

Wear eye protection—If you play sports or even work on home projects, it is critical to wear appropriate eye protection to prevent eye injuries.

Information for patients who utilize OCHC On-Call Nurse

Registered Nurses (RN) are available for patient phone calls – 24 hours a day/7days a week. When the clinic is closed the RN is home. They do not have access to medical records or pharmacy information.

When to call and speak with the RN *After Clinic Hours:

- You/your child have an urgent health care need/question that cannot wait until the next open day of the clinic.
- Don't call the RN when you are having a life threatening issue. For example, chest pain, difficulty breathing, or bleeding profusely from a wound. Access the nearest emergency department to get medical attention as soon as possible. Call 911 as needed for intervention. Call the Contract Health Services Department to report the visit within 72 hours to ensure coverage.
- The RN's on call also work 40+ hours per week at the OCHC medical clinic, in addition to providing on call services. Calling in the middle of the night with a concern that is not urgent is not appropriate.
- On call staff does not determine Contract Health eligibility. You need to contact the Contract Health Department when the clinic reopens to check on eligibility.

TRIAD Program Enhanced with Nutrition Classes

Good News! Oneida Diabetes Team is proud to announce enhancements made to the TRIAD Program. The TRIAD program is a structured exercise program for patients diagnosed with diabetes on behalf of collaboration between the Oneida Community Health Center Diabetes Team, Health Promotion Disease Prevention Department, and Oneida Family Fitness.

To improve participant success, Registered Dietitian and Certified Diabetes Educator, Betty Schwantes will be providing monthly nutrition classes at Oneida Family Fitness Education Room, covering the following topics:

1. Carbohydrate Counting/Plate Method,
2. Label Reading,
3. Navigating the Grocery Store, and
4. Sports Nutrition for Diabetes.

Beginning May 1, 2012, TRIAD program participants will be required to attend the group nutrition classes within 12 months. A $25 Oneida Retail Gift Card will be offered to those who attend at least one nutrition class every 3 months. Stay tuned for informational flyers with dates and times.

For more information, please contact Margaret VanDen Heuvel, Diabetes Program Supervisor, at (920) 869-4941.

Program looking to keep natives out of correction system

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

John Miller Sr. sits in a sunny kitchen, a granddaughter and a tiny Chihuahua run in and out of the room. It's a big change from his previous home at the Oshkosh Correction Institute, but with the help of the Wisconsin Tribal Community Reintegration Program (WTCRP) he plans on staying with his family.

"The program's been very helpful to me making decisions about my drinking and other anger management problems they helped me with," said Miller.

The grant funded program has been in operation for almost a year, according to WTCRP Program Director Cathy Tsyoshaaht Delgado. The grant was applied for by the Oneida Tribe, but is administered through the Great Lakes Intertribal Council (GLITC) for the Oneida, Menominee and Stockbridge-Munsee nations. WTCRP works with incarcerated Native Americans in North East Wisconsin who are nearing the end of their prison term.

"We're trying to put together programing for them and resources so that prepares them to get out of prison with housing, employment, child care, child support services…," said Delgado.

About six months before their release, WTCRP starts working with prisoners, referring to them as returning citizens, and continues working with them a year after their release. The goal of the program is to prevent individuals from re-offending and returning to the correctional system.

"We're not the people that put the hammer down and say you know if you don't do this, you're going to sit, we're not those people. We are helpers, we are supporters, we are going to do what we can to support them and encourage them," said Delgado.

The WTCRP curriculum is similar to Wisconsin's Windows to Work program.

"We kind of nativized it by putting Native

Youth & Elder Fishing Day

Kali photos/Travis Cottrell

The 13th annual Youth & Elder Fishing Day was held on Saturday, May 19, 2012 at Osnúhsaʔ Lake.

The event was presented by the Oneida Environmental Health and Safety Division with funding from the EPA, BIA, and support from the USEWS.

Episcopal Diocese and Village Settle Tax Dispute

Appleton, WI ~ Following five years of dispute, the Episcopal Diocese of Fond du Lac and Village of Hobart have settled a matter of the assessment of taxes on the cemetery at Church of the Holy Apostles, Oneida. After assessment in 2007, the church paid the taxes because State statute requires payment of taxes before allowing a legal challenge of the assessment. The diocese pursued both informal and formal avenues to remove the assessment on a property exempt from taxation, ending with filing legal action in Brown County Circuit Court. Pursuant to the settlement, the claim was dismissed, with prejudice, after the village agreed the cemetery property is exempt. The village refunded all taxes paid.

The Rt. Rev. Russell Jacobus, Bishop and President of the Diocesan Trustees, said assessment on this property by Hobart previously occurred in both 1950 and 1983. Both times Hobart removed the assessment after being contacted by the diocese who explained its exempt use.

"It's hard to understand why this time was different. The assessor and village board refused to accept our claim of exemption so we had to hire a lawyer and file a lawsuit." Jacobus said. "Only after the expense of time, talent and treasure did the village settle. This could have been a simple matter, easily resolved, but for some reason they didn't want to see what was clear - you can't tax cemeteries."

A lengthy tax debate was resolved when the Village of Hobart refunded taxes collected on land where the Holy Apostles cemetery is located.

Matthew Payne, Lay Canon for Administration, said the 27 acres in question, located between the church and the original 1820's cemetery, were purchased in 1908 from an Oneida family. It was a perfect fit to make the property contiguous with the original 7 acre cemetery and allow for expansion of burials. Those buried there, including a veteran of the American American culture and spirituality into it," she said.

Miller, a Menominee citizen, appreciates the use of Native American culture and beliefs to help him in his struggle with alcohol abuse.

"I never had the chance to express myself about my problems as I did with this program. They really listened, and they give good answers on how I should react. We worked the four directions, the native ways," he said. "It really helped me out, it really showed me the right directions to go and got me back to my own native roots."

WTCRP also advocates for the returning citizens in their communities where others may be leery of someone with a criminal record.

"People that are in prison have come from our communities, and they're our relatives whether we like them or not, or believe in them or not," said Delgado.

"They've suffered enough by their crimes that they committed and by being confined that they have the choice to take themselves wherever they want to. They can either end up back (in prison), where some of them have been there for the second or third time, or they can make the choices to change their life so they don't end up back there."

Delgado stated that the program encourages the returning citizens to take up the family roles they may have had to leave behind when incarcerated.

"We stress how important it is for them to take on the roles that they were given as they come through life. Dad, uncle, grandpa … because their family needs them, and try to make sure that they have the support they need to not fall back into some of the old patterns with the wrong people, and getting themselves in the wrong places at the wrong time, and they're back where they started," she said.

Miller's daughter Jacqueline Solis is enjoying seeing her father take up his role as grandfather.

"My kids, they love having their grandpa around. He takes my kids for walks up and down the road," said Solis. "I see my dad, he's strong - he's stronger than he was before."

From 1A/Tax settlement

Revolution, are principally Oneida so the cemetery has a cultural significance to the Oneida Nation.

"I know the assessor was trying to do his job. I know the village was attempting to serve its constituents" Payne said. "But there was misinterpretation of the law, with no attention to legal precedents and the property's history. The lack of reasoning was not sustainable to the diocesan Trustees, who hold title to the property, as well as most everyone else who was presented with the information."

While this matter has been resolved, Payne believes the state law regulating challenges about exemption needs to change. He plans to contact a local legislator. "If you're pulled over for speeding, you don't have to pay the ticket before you challenge it, do you?" Payne said. "If your assessment on your home or business increases, you have an opportunity to challenge it prior to paying the taxes, don't you? But if a tax-exempt property gets assessed, the law requires the tax be paid before you can challenge the loss of exemption. That doesn't seem fair and it doesn't afford equal protection. I do not believe it is appropriate to place an undue burden placed on tax-exempt organizations like churches, or colleges, or youth service organizations? Sounds like when you had to pay before you could vote."

Cornelius, Russel L.

March 10, 1952 – May 16, 2012

Russel L. Cornelius, 60, of De Pere, died Wednesday May 16, 2012 at a local hospital. The son of the late Clayton and Arletta (Cornelius) Cornelius, Sr., was born March 10, 1952 in Green Bay.

Russel was a longtime member of Oneida United Methodist Church. He worked for U.S. Plant Foods in Seymour and later in transportation and maintenance for the Oneida Nation.

Survivors include his sisters, Christine Stevens, De Pere, Debra Cornelius, De Pere, Sandra Stevens, Oneida, Eleanora and Wesley Smith, Oneida, his uncle, Walter Cornelius, Seymour, and his cousin, Myron Cornelius, De Pere, and brother-in-law, Charlie Skenandore, Oneida, as well as nieces and nephews, Aleanora, Arletta, Melanie, Shelbie, Debbie, Joseph, Amanda, Troy, Chad, and his Godchildren, Aleanora, Tyler, and Lance. He is also survived by great-great-nieces and nephews. He was preceded in death by his parents, his twin sister, Roxana "Annie" Skenandore, two brothers, Clayton Jr., and Allan, brother-in-law, Abraham Stevens, nephews, Archie Stevens, Jr., and Clayton III.

Letters & Opinions...

BC Meeting Conduct

On Wednesday, May 9, 2012, I attended the Business Committee Meeting just as an observer. I was surprised at how rude the people were to each other in the meeting. Tribal members were rude to the Business Committee, tribal members were rude to each other and I even observed BC members being rude to each other.

The resolution I heard being read had nothing to do with what the comments were that were being stated and the underlined remarks as other speakers talked. At one point, I found the meeting to be totally out of control. I felt the Chairman should have called an order to the room and if need be have some of these people removed from the meeting.

The Business Committee was elected by the tribe, so they should be respected. You don't have to agree with them but they should be shown respect. When the Business Committee meets there is an agenda that is posted so you know what is on the agenda for the day. If you have something you want to say, follow procedure.

Four hours went by and the items that members were talking about had nothing to do with the agenda item.

CenturyLink offers telephone assistance to individuals living on Tribal Lands

Low-income consumers may qualify for assistance that will reduce the cost of basic monthly telephone service. The assistance program, known as Lifeline Affordable Telephone Assistance, is available to qualifying consumers in every U.S. state (territory and commonwealth). Qualifications for participation vary by state. In states that follow the federal guidelines, the subscriber must have a household annual gross income at or below 135% of the Federal Poverty Guidelines for a household of that size; or participate in any one of the following programs: Medicaid, Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (Food Stamps), Supplemental Security Income (SSI), Federal Public Housing Assistance (Section 8), Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP), National School Lunch Program's Free Lunch Program, or Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF).

Residents of American Indian and Alaskan Native tribal lands may qualify for up to an additional $25 of enhanced Lifeline support monthly and a credit of up to $100 on their initial installation charges. An individual living on tribal lands may qualify for Lifeline and Link-Up discounts if he or she participates in one of the programs listed above, the Bureau of Indian Affairs General Assistance, Tribally Administered Temporary Assistance to Needy Families, or Head Start (only for those households meeting its income qualifying standard).

Lifeline eligible subscribers may also qualify for reliable home high-speed Internet service up to 1.5Mbps for $9.95* per month for the first 12 months of service. Further details are available at centurylink.com/internetbasics

If you live in a CenturyLink service area, please call 1-800-201-4099 or visit centurylink.com/lifeline with questions or to request an application for the Lifeline program.

*CenturyLink Internet Basics Program – Residential customers only who qualify based on meeting income level or program participation eligibility requirements, and requires remaining eligible for the entire offer period. First bill will include charges for the first full month of service billed in advance, prorated charges for service from the date of installation to bill date, and one-time charges and fees described above. Qualifying customers may keep this program for a maximum of 60 months after service activation provided customer still qualifies during that time. Listed High-Speed Internet rate of $9.95/mo. applies for first 12 months of service (after which the rate reverts to $14.95/mo. for the next 48 months of service), and requires a 12 month term agreement. Customer must either lease a modem/router from CenturyLink for an additional monthly charge or purchase a modem/router from CenturyLink for a one-time charge, and a one-time High-Speed Internet activation fee applies. A one-time professional installation charge (if selected by customer) and a one-time shipping and handling fee applies to customer's modem/router. General – Services not available everywhere. CenturyLink may change or cancel services or substitute similar services at its sole discretion without notice. Offer, plans, and stated rates are subject to change and may vary by service area. Deposit may be required. Additional restrictions apply. Terms and Conditions – All products and services listed are governed by tariffs, terms of service, or terms and conditions posted at centurylink.com. Taxes, Fees, and Surcharges – Applicable taxes, fees, and surcharges include a carrier Universal Service charge, carrier cost recovery surcharges, state and local fees that vary by area and certain in-state surcharges. Cost recovery fees are not taxes or government-required charges for use. Taxes, fees, and surcharges apply based on standard monthly, not promotional, rates.

Summer Fun on a Budget

Temperatures are climbing, school is out and everyone wants to beat the doldrums with some fun summer activities. However, keeping the kids (and yourself) entertained can put a strain on your wallet. Here are some ideas to have some fun in the sun without breaking the bank.

Want to spend a day at the water park? For a family of four, admission alone can cost over $100, and then you have to factor in concessions, parking, gas for travel, etc. Rather than spending all that money for a day in the pool with hundreds of people, organize a neighborhood water park party! Each family that gets involved contributes something to the event: food, a slip n' slide, water guns/balloons, prizes, etc. Keep it low-key or go all out; it's up to you.

How about going to a baseball game? Again, the biggest budget hold-ups for this activity are cost of admission, travel, concessions and dealing with crowds. The easiest way to avoid most of those is to attend a minor league game rather than a major league match-up. Northwoods League game prices are usually less than $10, and you can cut down on the cost of concessions by tailgating or grilling out at home before the game. All the fun of a day at the ballpark at a fraction of the price.

What about the fair? State, county and city fairs and carnivals are a lot of fun, but the expenses can add up quickly. Food, games, rides and souvenirs all factor into the total cost of the trip. To keep costs down, lay out a budget before you get to the fairgrounds. Allot specific amounts for games, concessions and rides. You can also look through newspapers and online for coupons.

Finally, investigate what events are taking place locally. Explore Discoverwisconsin.com or the Bucky Book to see what your community has in store for the summer months. Making a few substitutions and taking the time to research best prices will help you have a fun, frugal summer.

Vice-Chairman's Corner...

Greg Matson
Vice-Chairman

Shekoli,

The Issue

It's all about Trust…We as a tribe have been faced with this for many generations for many reasons. One significant change has been 'who' we don't trust. I see time and time again that it is 'us' we don't trust. Twahwahsi'laya means 'we are all family' and yet there is a separation within this meaning. This is not news to many nor is it only apparent here. It is nationwide worldwide, there is a lack of trust between the Democrats and Republicans, between the Catholics and the Lutherans, between the Traditionalist and the contemporaries, between the Blacks and Whites, between the Whites and Whites, between the Democrats and the Democrats … the list goes on and on. I think if we don't face our own reality we may be faced with an extremely distorted and destructive future.

The Opportunity

The positive side to all of this is that 'It is OUR choice'. We can either continue down the path that is full of tangled brush and distorted view's or we can clear that path and make it much easier for those that seek the destination that is voiced by many seeking the 'GOOD MIND and the GOOD LIFE'. Are these are two things universal in everyone's goals? Do we need to bring a good mind and a good life to all that we engage no matter what gender, color, age or relationship. This is a question we need to ask ourselves and we need to answer it. We may need to ask this question as many times as necessary to have it answered. My colleagues state it well we need to ask ourselves everyday "Why am I here". Take a moment and think about that… why are we here?

As we move though these times that affect all of us whether they are spiritual, financial or moral, I think we need to address the effort of a refined collaboration. We need each other to survive, some more, some less but we all have a purpose and that needs to be recognized and nurtured. We can re-organize or re-structure or re-assign , but it will have limited impact until we build up the Trust that is needed for everyone to be able to bring their abilities and thoughts to the full tribal table. Only then will we be able to 'share what is ours'. I am not asking for anyone to have a revelation or a seconding coming, I am simply asking for people to take the time to evaluate their present state of Oneida mind and heart.

Rest assured, I did not set out to have a career in politics, I am here with energy and ambition to help clear the path so that those that follow have the ability to be part of a unified, strong, and prosperous community that will insure our existence as Oneida people. With that said, I also say 'it will take all of us to do that'. If statements within this letter are not well received or perhaps taken out of context … Please refer to line to the opening statement in line 1.

The Separation Question

The need for separation. I'll begin with my definitions in the simplest form:

- Government: To ensure the rights and resources of those they govern stay intact (to protect).
- Corporation/ Enterprise: An entity designed to generate financial goals with control mechanisms in place to insure consistency and compliance (to make money).
- Community: A group of individuals united in establishing common goals (to live in sync).
- Family: A group of people that share a 'common' whether it's genetics, socially, or philosophically (A Tribe).

It seems to me we continue to have confusion on our roles and responsibilities to our own people. We tend to 'protect' our enterprises and 'control' our people…at least the financially successful ones in both aspects.

Example 1: If we have an area or enterprise that is struggling we have a tendency to scrutinize and criticize rather than creatively nurture.

Example 2: What have we spent on travel to conferences and legislative gatherings vs. what laws have we changed or protected to better serve our people in the last nine months? I would like to see a cost comparison. I don't want to look like some of the surrounding town boards…collect the people's money and spend on our own agendas. Once again this will take all of us.

If we have an area that is generating positive revenue we 'protect' those enterprises, which is understandable (give praise and celebrate your accomplishments) but they already have a formula to success, "Let them do their job!" . Instead we 'demand' more with less while some of the governing parts of the structure 'do less with more'.

The Opportunity in Understanding

We all understand when a teacher says 'knowledge is power' (win the spelling bee)…A boxer would say "speed is power" (win the fight)…A wise person says 'you need to understand the subject and know your limits because with these two things you can unite with others and win together' (win, win).

With that said I believe we have more collective knowledge throughout the entire membership which can supplement the knowledge within the governmental structure of the Tribe. It is a daunting task for any group to make decisions that impact so many in so many different ways. Therefore, with our lack of 'speed' to move on many governing issues … the power for positive change is within the people, even more so with those that understand what 'Family' is. As a united force there is very little that can keep us from moving forward. As individuals, we can move some or very little. It's been tried in the past and has shown to be fruitless more times than not. I have seen the passion and dedication from members of this Business Committee, but it will take all of us and it will take addressing the Trust issue to move where we need to be. We all know that takes time and you need to give to get.

What are we talking about exactly? It all depends on what you are trying to save, the corporation or the people. I think the people come first and the rest will fall into place.

OBC Forum...

Vince DelaRosa
Councilman

I wanted to share my thoughts with the community and expose a level of concern I have with housing matters. This is a memo my office released earlier this month regarding the Community Development Planning Committee (CDPC), housing and community meetings:

As the Chairman of the Oneida Community Development Planning Committee (CDPC) I wanted to circulate this memo after sitting through months of frustrating meetings on housing development and other community based design matters. We are not serving our people well if we fail to plan properly. I get the sinking feeling that we are on the wrong path. We need to get things back on track or our community will continue to suffer from a lack of proper planning.

Look around the Oneida Reservation, we have no business corridors, we have empty business parks and we have limited housing opportunities. When it comes to the non-Oneidas they are developing housing on land within our reservation and developing businesses on the fringes of our reservation. Meanwhile, we squabble about what to do. Endless discussions about serious issues will yield no positive results; we need to start taking action.

Generally, the housing related discussions and work sessions I have sat in on over the last eight months have turned out to be very disheartening endeavors. Recently, we had been waiting for months on a newly revised housing plan which comported with our new vision and when the report date came due at the end of March, we were told that no plan would be done!

I think it is clearly time to seek out some assistance. We need a new level of energy around these matters and possibly some new talent to accomplish our goals. We need people who will work with us and help us achieve something on behalf of the Oneida people.

It is my opinion that healthy Indian reservations, cities and regions all need affordable housing within safe, vibrant and diverse neighborhoods; this is the key to having nice communities. I am not hearing this from all levels internally. In fact, at one meeting a professional staffer suggested that maybe tribal members should go to a local building store and get garage packages and live in makeshift garages. Other staffers are saying, "Show us the money" and then they would do something. These calls all come with no extensive planning, just off the cuff comments by professionals who are paid to do this work full-time on behalf of our Oneida people!

Some of the housing offerings that we have developed over the last thirty years here in Oneida seem to have no rhyme or reason. Some sites almost seem like they've popped-up where they are because we needed to put them somewhere. As we move forward, I am asking that more thought be put behind the placement of housing developments, along with, the aesthetic appeal of the communities and the housing stock itself. Meaning the houses should look nice, incorporating different styles and looks. Also, every housing site should have all landscaping finished once the construction work is completed.

The tasks are complex and challenging: reconciling affluence and equity; mobility and a sense of place; global markets and local traditions; trying to attract jobs while embracing post-industrial digital technologies; and providing housing as both a market commodity and as a social need. Moreover, these various tasks work best if interconnected: housing integrated into the larger neighborhood; economic activity embedded into local communities; and equal partnerships between public and private actors. This is the key I am referring to, proper integration. Look at all of our neighborhoods, not one of them embody these basic design tenets! Show me one small store by any of our housing sites!

There are usually three central planning elements that are at play in these endeavors, those are, housing, community, and economic development correlations. When done properly, these properly placed concentrations will address challenges through planning for future housing, neighborhood growth, and hopefully the economic well-being of our community and/or the larger region. To me the reservation in total is the community, not just any one sector. I envision groupings of various communities intrinsically tied to a far reaching global vision for development and unique social gathering spots. I see small businesses and an outcropping of retail opportunities.

The goal is to increase social and economic capital and generally improve the quality of life especially for those who are in low-income, minority and other disadvantaged community sectors of our population. I would hope that we can weave the various economic strati of our people together to make strong and diverse communities. Our designs and the things we do should enhance the lives of all the people.

The reliance to execute these concepts and ideas fall on the "planners," the Planning Department in our case. People whom are paid full-time to get this type of work done, so this work should be done! I keep hearing about the Comprehensive Plan, but that is not a "Community Development Plan." There is a big difference.

The planners that help craft these plans usually work with local residents, neighborhood and community organizations, community development corporations, and non-profit and for-profit housing developers, as well as municipal, regional, state, and federal agencies and the private sector. We can include anyone we want in these new planning processes, but we need to get moving.

New planning work needs to be designed around and directed towards securing decent affordable housing, improving job opportunities, increasing safety, and restoring or maintaining community stability. A broad concentration consisting of three tracks: housing, community development, and urban and regional economic development should also be looked at. We need to integrate into the surrounding communities; it is to our long-term benefit to work together with those that are interested in being good neighbors.

I predict that if we fail to mobilize our efforts it will result in a weakened political posture, destabilized economic opportunities, and weakened social systems. Ultimately, decay will set in that can lead to urban growth all around us, which is already happening to us. We are a minority on our own reservation. Without any change morale will steadily decline, low incomes will become the norm, housing will remain inadequate, unemployment will increase, development will be uneven, deindustrialization will occur, and our neighborhoods will not thrive. I foresee that just a small number of people would be able to thrive here, while the majority will be on the outside looking in.

In conjunction with a strong commitment to see something positive happen, I am calling for five community meetings to occur as directed by the CDPC. The focus of the community meetings and discussions could be as outlined below. I would like to see these types of meetings held beginning in mid-June. I also think we should launch a website around this initiative as this will be one of the most important projects we ever engage in.

In closing, here is what I am suggesting could be the basis for our community meetings' focus and what our new planning process should be leveraged around:

The Thunderhawks took the field for their final regular season game against the visiting Green Bay Metro Rebels on Monday, May 21, 2012. Oneida grabbed an early lead but quickly found themselves in a defensive struggle throughout the first half. In the second half the T-Hawks turned up the intensity and managed to gain a significant lead. The Oneida Thunderhawks emerged victorious by a score of 11-7.

Born to run barefoot? Some end up getting injured

By Alicia Chang
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES ~ Swept by the barefoot running craze, ultramarathoner Ryan Carter ditched his sneakers for footwear that mimics the experience of striding unshod.

The first time he tried it two years ago, he ran a third of a mile on grass. Within three weeks of switching over, he was clocking six miles on the road.

During a training run with a friend along a picturesque bike path near downtown Minneapolis, Carter suddenly stopped, unable to take another step. His right foot seared in pain.

"It was as though someone had taken a hammer and hit me with it," he recalled.

Carter convinced his friend to run on without him. He hobbled home and rested his foot. When the throbbing became unbearable days later, he went to the doctor. The diagnosis: a stress fracture.

As more avid runners and casual athletes experiment with barefoot running, doctors say they are treating injuries ranging from pulled calf muscles to Achilles tendinitis to metatarsal stress fractures, mainly in people who ramped up too fast. In serious cases, they are laid up for several months.

Many converts were inspired by Christopher McDougall's 2009 best-seller "Born To Run," widely credited with sparking the barefoot running trend in the Western world. The book focuses on an Indian tribe in Mexico whose members run long distances without pain in little more than sandals.

While the ranks of people running barefoot or in "barefoot running shoes" have grown in recent years, they still represent the minority of runners. Some devotees swear they are less prone to injuries after kicking off their athletic shoes though there's no evidence that barefoot runners suffer fewer problems.

In some cases, foot specialists are noticing injuries arising from the switch to barefoot, which uses different muscles. Shod runners tend to have a longer stride and land on their heel compared with barefoot runners, who are more likely to have a shorter stride and land on the midfoot or forefoot. Injuries can occur when people transition too fast and put too much pressure on their calf and foot muscles, or don't shorten their stride and end up landing on their heel with no padding.

Podiatrist Paul Langer used to see one or two barefoot running injuries a month at his Twin Cities Orthopedics practice in Minneapolis. Now he treats between three and four a week.

"Most just jumped in a little too enthusiastically," said Langer, an experienced runner and triathlete who trains in his barefoot running shoes part of the week.

Bob Baravarian, chief of podiatry at the UCLA Medical Center in Santa Monica, Calif., said he's seen "a fair number" of heel injuries and stress fractures among first-timers who are not used to the different forces of a forefoot strike.

"All of a sudden, the strain going through your foot is multiplied manifold" and problems occur when people don't ease into it, he said.

Running injuries are quite common. Between 30 to 70 percent of runners suffer from repetitive stress injuries every year and experts can't agree on how to prevent them. Some runners with chronic problems have seized on barefoot running as an antidote, claiming it's more natural. Others have gone so far as to demonize sneakers for their injuries.

Pre-human ancestors have walked and run in bare feet for millions of years often on rough surfaces, yet researchers surprisingly know very little about the science of barefoot running. The modern running shoe with its cushioned heel and stiff sole was not invented until the 1970s. And in parts of Africa and other places today, running barefoot is still a lifestyle.

The surging interest has researchers racing for answers. Does barefoot running result in fewer injuries? What kinds of runners will benefit most from switching over? What types of injuries do transitioning barefoot runners suffer and how to prevent them?

While some runners completely lose the shoes, others opt for minimal coverage. The oxymoron "barefoot running shoes" is like a glove for the feet designed to protect from glass and other hazards on the ground. Superlight minimalist shoes are a cross between barefoot shoes and traditional sneakers – there's little to no arch support and they're lower profile.

DNR: Compliance lax on testing for toxic vapors

WAUSAU, Wis. (AP) ~ Wisconsin regulators are following up on thousands of old chemical spills where cleanup consultants may have skipped a key step ~ investigating whether toxic vapors could seep into nearby homes or businesses.

The state Department of Natural Resources says a "noticeable" string of site owners applied to have their cleanup cases officially closed, even though they hadn't checked for vapor leaks as required. No one at the agency knew precisely how many sites failed to investigate the potential for fumes build-up, so the DNR sent notices to all 2,500 sites in September clarifying that the vapor tests were mandatory.

"In 2010, we published our final guidance for the state, so we're into 2011 and people are telling us, 'Oh, nobody ever told us,'" said Terry Evanson, the director of the DNR's vapor-intrusion program. "We were getting tired of listening to that excuse, so we sent a letter to every site in the whole state."

A review by Gannett Wisconsin Media found that many site owners have only recently begun the tests. Hundreds of other sites may never be checked unless the owners do new construction or sell their properties.

None of the Wisconsin incidents of fume buildup has risen to the level of being added to a federal database. Still, even the possibility that harmful fumes could contaminate a home can be devastating for owners.

Deanna Schneider bought her home on Madison's east side in 1997. The Madison-Kipp Corp. factory, which makes aluminum-based components, is located just behind her house, but Schneider figured she could tolerate the proximity because she liked the neighborhood.

Last year, the company and the DNR notified her and two neighbors that chemicals might be seeping into their basements as vapor. Schneider, a single mom of a 9-year-old son, felt blindsided.

"I was really angry," she said. "I was shocked. I was very disheartened with the fact that they had been telling me everything was OK."

Madison-Kipp tested the soil beneath her basement and found 1,080 parts per billion of tetrachloroethylene in the clay, far higher than the 6 parts per billion that requires a mitigation system be installed.

The DNR forced the company to pay for a mitigation system, but Schneider said she's still worried about all the children on the block who have been exposed to the chemical since the day they were born.

Investigating vapor intrusion is intended to guard against a future problem as buildings' foundations develop cracks for chemical vapors to get inside and collect at harmful levels. Evanson said regulators were less concerned with small one-time spills than with long-standing industrial sites and other businesses that used chemicals daily.

Those cleanups can take years, and many site owners are dependent on consultants to follow DNR rules.

Ken Lassa, an environmental department manager for Wausau-based REI Engineering, said the site-cleanup industry has been aware of vapor intrusion for at least 20 years, but the competition for jobs will lead some firms to take shortcuts.

However, even when consultants or site owners properly investigate vapor intrusion, the DNR only closes the cases with the caveat that new construction could require more testing.

For example, at the former home of Kerwin Paper Co. in Appleton, tests found levels of toxic chemicals in groundwater at the site. Now the site of an apartment complex, developers and the DNR designed a ventilation system to prevent vapors from causing health issues.

University of Wisconsin enrollment of Native Americans increases

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ Enrollment figures from the University of Wisconsin System show many more Native Americans are going to college. But their retention and graduation rates lag behind the overall student population.

The latest figures from the UW System show more than 1,800 Native American students were enrolled in 2009. That's 550 more than the fall of 2005. But the six-year graduation rate is 65 percent for all students and 40 percent for American Indians.

Ed Manydeeds of Eau Claire is the first Native American member of the UW Board of Regents. He tells Wisconsin Public Radio that cultural differences can contribute to the retention problem. He says UW campuses need a center dedicated to American Indian students. Northland College in Ashland, for example, is opening an Indigenous People's Center.

UW-Madison bomber arrested after $800K found in RV

MADISON, Wis. (AP) - One of the men convicted in the deadly 1970 bombing at the University of Wisconsin-Madison was arrested last week after authorities found $800,000 cash in the motor home he was driving.

A court document says 65-year-old Karl Armstrong was arrested in Chicago. The Wisconsin State Journal reports Armstrong's arrest Thursday led to a search on Saturday by the Wisconsin Division of Criminal Investigation of a Town of Madison trailer home where Armstrong lives for evidence of marijuana trafficking.

Neither Wisconsin nor Illinois authorities found marijuana in Armstrong's trailer or motor home.

A spokeswoman for Illinois State Police did not return messages about Armstrong's status.

Armstrong was one of three men arrested for their roles in the Sterling Hall bombing during the Vietnam War. A researcher died in the blast.

The real estate market in Wisconsin continues to rebound

MILWAUKEE (AP) - Figures from the Wisconsin Realtors Association show sales of existing homes rose 191/2 percent in April, the 10th consecutive month of double-digit sales growth in the state. The median sales prices rose slightly, up 2.4 percent.

Association president Michael Theo tells the Journal Sentinel the state may have finally ``turned the corner on sales."

But, prices are another thing. Plenty of homes are still on the market in Wisconsin, including foreclosure properties. For the first four months of the year, prices are down about 1 percent.

There were 5,218 homes sold in April, compared with 4,365 in April last year. The median price rose 2.4 percent statewide to $128,000 from $125,000 a year ago.

Surgical scars some see as racist provoke SD march

By Kristi Eaton
Associated Press

RAPID CITY, S.D. ~ Hundreds of people marched Monday in support of a man who says the letters KKK were carved into his stomach by a surgeon at a South Dakota hospital.

A YouTube video featuring 69-year-old Vern Traversie, a Lakota man who lives on the Cheyenne River Reservation, has gone viral in Native American communities. In it, Traversie shows a photo of his abdomen. Though he himself is blind, Traversie says he was told by others that the scars left after his heart surgery make out the hateful letters, and he is outraged.

The problem is, not everyone sees it. Like those spotting the Madonna in a water stain, Traversie's advocates are staunch believers. Those who aren't include police who investigated his allegations and hospital officials.

Rapid City police say they conducted an investigation but found no evidence of a crime. Craig Saunders, a cardiologist at Barnabas Hospital in Newark, N.J., said incision marks can take many different shapes, depending on where the doctor needs to get into the body. Saunders, who did not operate on Traversie, said surgical tape also can leave scarring and lesions depend on the make-up of the person's body.

The lack of clear letters hasn't deterred Traversie, his supporters or those who see the scars as just more evidence of continued mistreatment of Native American people.

"Rapid City ... we understand you have been carving up our people. This is going to end today," American Indian Movement founder Dennis Banks said to a roaring crowd before leading the supporters on a more than two-mile long march from a Rapid City plaza to the hospital where the surgery happened .

While Traversie's story spurred the protest, many in attendance referred to broken treaties, unsolved murders and incarceration rates among Native Americans as their reasons for showing up.

"We're classified as second class citizens," said Hap Marshall, 69, a resident of the Cheyenne River reservation. "But when they want our votes, we're their brother."

The protest was relatively peaceful. Officers from the Rapid City Police Department blocked off traffic as the supporters, many dressed in red shirts and waving American Indian Movement flags, marched to the beat of a drummer riding in a truck leading the way. Passing cars occasionally honked.

A group of about 15 people - including Banks and Oglala Sioux Vice President Tom Poor Bear - met with officials at the hospital, while police prevented other supporters from entering the building.

The march was largely organized by Cody Hall, who lives on the Cheyenne River Reservation, and Chase Iron Eyes, who lives on the Standing Rock Indian Reservation that straddles the North Dakota-South Dakota border, in an effort to bring attention to what they say is continued mistreatment of Native American people.

Many in the Native American community believe there are different standards of justice for them and for other races, said Stew Magnuson, who writes a column for a Native American newspaper and wrote a book about issues on South Dakota's Pine Ridge Reservation.

Prior to the 1970s and the American Indian Movement, Native Americans felt powerless without representation on juries. AIM changed that by marching into towns and demanding justice, which no one had ever seen before, Magnuson said, adding: "So, I think some of these feelings live on, rightly or wrongly."

As long as the marches and rallies remain peaceful, Magnuson said he believes the demonstrations are an appropriate way for Native Americans to get their voice heard. On the other hand, he said, people can't let rumor and speculation be the narrative of the story.

Some Pine Ridge reservation residents - Native American and non-Native - mentioned a March protest as an example of an instance when demonstrators didn't check their facts beforehand.

In that incident, a group of residents began protesting what they said was a truck carrying materials for TransCanada's Keystone XL project. The Oglala Sioux and Rosebud Sioux tribes have been vocal in their disapproval of the proposed pipeline that would bring oil from Canada's tar sands region in Alberta to refineries along the Texas Gulf Coast.

But the trucks they were attempting to block were not a part of the pipeline, which has been stalled by rejection of a federal permit.

Judge allows Shoshone tribe into eagle permit case

By Ben Neary
Associated Press

CHEYENNE, Wyo. ~ A federal judge is allowing the Eastern Shoshone Tribe to challenge the Northern Arapaho's plan to kill bald eagles on the reservation they share in Wyoming.

U.S. District Judge Alan B. Johnson on Friday agreed to allow the Eastern Shoshone Tribe to participate as a "friend of the court" in the lawsuit the Northern Arapaho Tribe filed last year against the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The federal agency in March issued the Northern Arapaho Tribe the nation's first permit allowing the killing of bald eagles for religious purposes. The permit would allow the Northern Arapaho to kill two bald eagles, but only outside the Wind River Indian Reservation.

Other tribes and individual Indians in the Southwest have secured federal permits allowing them to kill golden eagles.

In specifying that the Northern Arapaho could only kill eagles off the reservation, the Fish and Wildlife Service stated it had conferred with the Eastern Shoshone and learned that the tribe was opposed to eagles being killed on the reservation, which the two tribes share.

The Fish and Wildlife Service stated in March that the Northern Arapaho wouldn't need permission from the State of Wyoming to kill eagles off the reservation with a federal permit. However, Johnson appeared to have a different view of that in his order allowing the Shoshone to intervene.

"(T)he permitted take area expressly excludes lands within the Wind River Indian Reservation, which is the only place in the State where Wyoming law criminalizing the taking of eagles does not apply," Johnson wrote. "The permit thus confoundingly allows the Northern Arapaho Tribe to take eagles only on lands where doing so is a criminal offense...."

Johnson pointed out that the federal permit also specified that the Northern Arapaho Tribe would have to follow state laws. Accordingly, he wrote, the federal permit "offers no real permission to take eagles at all."

In asking for permission to intervene in the case, the Eastern Arapaho Tribe noted that it has an indivisible, one-half interest in all the wildlife on the reservation. It states that killing eagles would violate its cultural beliefs and also says that it would be against the joint Shoshone and Arapaho Law and Order Code.

The Northern Arapaho filed papers recently opposing the Shoshone's move to enter the lawsuit. The Northern Arapaho have maintained in their lawsuit seeking the permits that they have a right under the U.S. Constitution to kill eagles for their religious ceremonies.

Andrew Baldwin, lawyer for the Northern Arapaho Tribe, declined comment Monday on Johnson's order allowing the Eastern Shoshone to participate in the lawsuit. Attempts to reach Kimberly D. Varilek, attorney general of the Eastern Shoshone Tribe, were not successful on Monday. She didn't respond immediately to phone calls seeking comment.

The Northern Arapaho Tribe has a history of conflict with the federal government over the eagle issue. The tribe filed papers in court supporting Winslow Friday, a young tribal member who shot a bald eagle without a permit in 2005 on the reservation for use in his tribe's Sun Dance.

Community input sought in naming of structure, roads in Oneida

The Oneida Nation owns the following properties and, the Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input to name the following:

1. Oneida Residential Community Care Center – Building

The Oneida Residential Community Care Center is being built adjoining the Lee McLester, III Complex on South Overland Drive. Once ORCCC is completed, the residents at the Anna John Nursing Home will move into the new center. The Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input with the name of the building.

Original allottee:
Baptist King

2. Valley Green Housing Project – Roads

The Green Valley housing project on Florist Drive will be adding some tribal roads that will connect to Florist Drive, Valley Drive and Henry Street. The Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input with naming the potential roads.

Original allottees:
William Powless,
Lewis Elm, Kate Elm & Peter Hill

3. Little Bear Development Center Conference Room

The Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input to approve the naming of the conference room in the Little Bear Development Center. Naming of a room is less formal than the naming of a road or building, so the Land Commission has been approached by the Planning Department to name the conference room The Ernest Stevens, Sr. Conference Room. If there are no strong objections received, the Commission will name the room by resolution.

Original allottee:
John Reid

All written recommendations will be submitted to the Division of Land Management. Tribal departments are encouraged to submit three names. Three recommendations will be presented to the Land Commission for final selection. The name selected will be translated into the Oneida Language through Land Commission resolution.

Submissions should include:

- Property to be named
- Location
- Recommended Name
- Reason
- Date
- Your Name or Department Name
- Tribal Enrollment number

Please submit recommendations in writing to:

All submissions are due by June 8, 2012.

Farmers' Market On Broadway needs volunteers

Green Bay, WI ~ Looking for something to do this summer? Searching for some volunteer opportunities or community service? Volunteers are needed for the 2012 season of the Farmers' Market On Broadway. Friendly and energetic volunteers are sought for event set up, beverage sales and event take down. Shifts vary, groups and individuals are encouraged to volunteer for this great opportunity to support a lively community event!

The ninth annual Farmers' Market On Broadway presented by BayCare Clinic runs every Wednesday evening June through October from 3:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. (3:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. in September and October) rain or shine. Located on Broadway between Walnut and Dousman Streets in the Broadway, the market features locally grown produce, artwork from area artists, ready-to-eat food items, beverages from local brewers and vintners, live music, and more.

The Farmers' Market On Broadway is organized and supported by On Broadway, Inc. (OBI). The event was created in an effort to showcase the best of local goods.

Want to get involved? Call Jeff at 920-437-2531 or e-mail events@onbroadway.org for more information, or stop at the On Broadway Inc., office 117 South Chestnut St.

Baraboo foundation streams video of crane chicks

BARABOO, Wis. (AP) ~ The International Crane Foundation in Baraboo is giving the world a chance to watch newly hatched whooping cranes grow.

The foundation has launched its Crane Chick Cam, a streaming video of the endangered youngsters.

Viewers will be able to see young chicks being kept warm under heat lamps. As the birds get older they'll have access to outdoor runs where they can strengthen their leg and flight muscles.

The camera will also show viewers how researchers raise the chicks by dressing in full-body suits with one hand shaped like an adult crane's face and beak.

Whooping cranes nearly became extinct in 1941, when their number dwindled to only 15. Now there are about 550.

The cranes stand 5 feet tall, have snowy white plumage and have nearly 8-foot wingspans.

Oneida Post Office Stamps Out Hunger

Letter Carriers collect food from community

Oneida, WI – Letter carriers at the Oneida Post Office along with postal employees and local volunteers teamed up once again to stamp out hunger in the community.

Across the country, the National Association of Letter Carriers (NALC) Food Drive – held in conjunction with the Postal Service – resulted in millions of pounds of non-perishable food collected and distributed to deserving charities nationwide.

Closer to home, the Oneida and DePere carriers collected around 20,000 pounds of food from generous donations left at mailboxes, which were then delivered to local community food pantries.

"For 20 years our carriers, volunteers and neighbors have come together to make a difference in the community," said Oneida Postmaster Cheryl Koenig. "This clearly demonstrates the generosity of our customers and the commitment of our employees to make a difference in people's lives."

Stamp Out Hunger - the nation's largest one-day food drive - collects non-perishable food to help more than 37 million people, who face hunger every day in America. Despite a still challenging economy, people across the country have continued to support this outreach effort.

Partners of this year's drive are the Campbell Soup Company, Feeding America, United Way, AFL-CIO, Valpak, AARP, Uncle Bob's Self Storage, and the National Rural Letter Carriers' Association.

The Postal Service receives no tax dollars for operating expenses and relies on the sale of postage, products and services to fund its operations.

A self-supporting government enterprise, the U.S. Postal Service is the only delivery service that reaches every address in the nation, 151 million residences, businesses and Post Office Boxes. The Postal Service receives no tax dollars for operating expenses, and relies on the sale of postage, products and services to fund its operations. With 32,000 retail locations and the most frequently visited website in the federal government, usps.com, the Postal Service has annual revenue of more than $65 billion and delivers nearly 40 percent of the world's mail. If it were a private sector company, the U.S. Postal Service would rank 35th in the 2011 Fortune 500. In 2011, the U.S. Postal Service was ranked number one in overall service performance, out of the top 20 wealthiest nations in the world, Oxford Strategic Consulting. Black Enterprise and Hispanic Business magazines ranked the Postal Service as a leader in workforce diversity. The Postal Service has been named the Most Trusted Government Agency for six years and the sixth Most Trusted Business in the nation by the Ponemon Institute.

The GBSO announces exciting and eclectic 2012-13 season

Music Director Donato Cabrera chooses broad spectrum of composers and genres

GREEN BAY, WISC. (May 22, 2012) - The Green Bay Symphony Orchestra (GBSO) is unveiling the details for its 2012-2013 concert programming today. The upcoming season marks the Orchestra's 99th anniversary year and Donato Cabrera's second year as the Orchestra's 10th music director.

"I'm beginning a Beethoven cycle and will kick off the new season by exploring two of his great works, the 'Egmont Overture' and Symphony No. 8," says Cabrera. "We will bookend the season with Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica") during our final concert.

"We've added some fun, new concert experiences as well, A Night at the Movies - which features scores from blockbuster films - and a concert of orchestral 'ear candy' we're calling A Symphonic Spectacular. These are well-known works like the Overture to "William Tell," Khachaturian's "Sabre Dance," Suppe's "Light Cavalry" Overture and more," continues Cabrera.

A wealth of other composers' works will be represented, including Brahms' "Violin Concerto"; Mozart's emotional masterpiece "Overture to 'Don Giovanni'"; Danish composer Carl Nielsen's Clarinet Concerto; and Mendelssohn's 'Scottish' Symphony (Symphony No. 3), among other gems.

"Our 99th season has something for everyone," says Bill Guc, GBSO board president. "In addition to the great classical masterworks, we have tried and true favorites including our annual Holiday Pops! with the Dudley Birder Chorale and Birder Studio of Performing Arts, and our popular Christmas concert with brass and organ."

Two of Cabrera's colleagues associated with San Francisco Symphony (SFS) will appear as guest artists. Violinist Leor Maltinski debuts with the GBSO on opening night. Born in Tel Aviv, Maltinski studied with Igor Polesitsky in Florence from 1985 to 1993 and then moved to the United States to continue his musical education, first at the Curtis Institute and then at Indiana University in Bloomington, where he received an artist diploma, bachelor's degree, and master's degree under the guidance of Nelli Shkolnikova.

Hailed by the Miami Herald as "refreshing" and an instrumentalist with "supple dexterity and lyric charm," clarinetist Jerry Simas will perform during the Feb. 2, 2013 concert. He has performed with the SFS on subscription concerts, recordings, educational programs, and tours in Europe, China, and the U.S. Simas is assistant professor at the University of Oregon School of Music and Dance.

About Donato Cabera:

Donato Cabrera debuted as music director with the Green Bay Symphony Orchestra during the 2011/12 season. He joined the San Francisco Symphony (SFS) conducting staff in 2009 and continues in his current role. As Bruno Walter Resident Conductor Chair, he works closely with SFS Music Director Michael Tilson Thomas and leads the San Francisco Symphony Youth Orchestra as Wattis Foundation Music Director.

The purpose of the Click It or Ticket Campaign is to create awareness of the importance of using a seatbelt when in any type of motor vehicle. Starting May 21st to June 3rd, law enforcement from all over the country will be watching the roads and ticketing unbuckled motorists. To promote this year's National Click It or Ticket Campaign, the Injury Prevention Program decided to venture into new territory and develop a movie trailer to promote this year's event. If you are at the Marcus Theater at Bay Park Square this weekend, watch the movie trailers for our very own Chief of Police Rich Van Boxtel, Jr. Miss Oneida Katy Marie Bermke, and Environmental Health and Safety's Inez Dommer as they star in this year's Click It or Ticket awareness campaign.

WHEN THE KIDS FIRST GOT ME?
I'd fly through the air, they'd bounce me all the way from the house to the school, I would hear their shouts of joy as they played with the other kids. Sometimes we would all play together at the courts!! I miss that... Heck, Dad, all I need is a little air for 60 minutes of play each day. Please ?? I heard basketball is BIG in Indian Country.

WISCONSIN YEAR OF THE VETERAN

Native American Veteran Listening Session

Lt. Governor Kleefisch, the Wisconsin Department of Veterans Affairs, the Department of Workforce Development and the Department of Safety and Professional Services are hosting a series of listening sessions for veterans as part of Year of the Veteran. This listening session will focus on issues specific to Native American veterans and their communities.

PLEASE JOIN US!

"Eden Lake"

By Táwet White
Thunderhawk Times

"Eden Lake" is a horror thriller that is intense and enticing. This movie has been recommended to me for a while and I always blew it off. It didn't really appeal to me, but a few nights ago, I decided to watch it. "Eden Lake" stars Kelly Reilly as Jenny, and Michael Fassbender as Steve.

From the start you can tell what the movie is about and who the antagonists are. It starts off with Jenny dismissing a kindergarten class, revealing she is a teacher and actually cares about kids. When she meets up with her boyfriend they go on a romantic getaway to a lake. On their way, they are listening to the radio and surprise, surprise, the radio is talking about the growing violence in kids and how media is poisoning their mind and corrupting them.

It was easy to tell who the villains would be, and lo and behold, it is kids. The kids are in their young teens and are degenerate, filthy, bratty, demonic kids. They are atrocious from the get go and slowly you begin to dislike them even more.

This movie kept me entertained as Jenny figures out that they are not just being kids, they are complete and total scum, she notices the kids don't care about who gets hurt, or even killed. When Jenny sees what the kids are truly capable of, she runs and equips herself with weapons. She tries to claw and fight her way out of the lakeside community, because even the parents are horrible for not seeing what is in their children and allowing it to happen.

This movie is suspenseful, but, something you need to know about this movie is, the ending is probably one of the absolute worst ending I've ever seen. The movie was good, but because of the ending, it ruined the entire thing for me.

For me to truly like a movie, all three pats (beginning, middle, and end) need to be good. The ending was enough to deface the whole movie so unfortunately, the rating reflects it.

2 out of 5 stars.

Cornelius Signs Letter of Intent

By Denis Gullickson

ONHS Senior Anthony Cornelius signed a letter of intent to play basketball at Silver Lake College in Manitowoc on March 31. Anthony signed the letter of intent as a part of a visit to Silver Lake. He also toured the UW-Manitowoc Fieldhouse where the "Lakers" play their home games.

Anthony was recommended to Silver Lake College by ONHS head coach, Scott Murray. "Anthony was a great team leader who led by example and played to the best of his ability. On and off the court he was very loyal, dedicated and a great role model for his teammates. The opportunity to play at Silver Lake is a great fit for him. He will continue to develop as a student and player. His desire and work ethic to become a college graduate will further advance his knowledge, skill and ability to succeed in life."

ONHS math teacher, Mike Hanke, also factored into Anthony signing with Silver Lake as Hanke and Lakers Head Coach Tod Hauf attended high school and college together.

"We played baseball, basketball, and football in high school, and baseball in college," Hanke said.

Speaking to Anthony's academic prowess, Hanke said, "What it impresses about Anthony is how well he tests. He attacks exams with concentration and determination. This is the same attitude he brings to the basketball court."

Anthony's future plans include "studying sports medicine" with the idea being an athletic trainer. "I went to an athletic training seminar at UW-Oshkosh and it seemed like something I would like to do."

Anthony also plans to continue playing basketball wherever his future takes him. His advice to upcoming athletes is to "focus on school. It opens up a lot of doors to college opportunities. Not having the grades will really limit you as far as which colleges will available to you."

ONHS principal Bob Ganka, said "Anthony is a fine young man who has made positive marks both in the classroom and in our athletic arenas. His quiet leadership has served as a good example for the rest of our students. I congratulate him and wish him the very best in his next schooling!"

Finally, a little editorializing by this writer: It has been the privilege of Oneida Nation High School to have Anthony as a student here ever since he joined us way back in August, 2008. He is a young man of exceptional character, strong academic abilities and great athletic skill. He possesses a great sense of humor, and is aware of the world around him and tuned into other people. If he continues to show these qualities, he will go a long way… in college and in life.

Favorite Artist

By La Kota Martinez
Thunderhawk Times

I have two favorite musical artists. Both have good songs and both are the best in the hip-hop genre, in my opinion.

One of them is Shawn Corey Carter, but he goes by the name of Jay-Z. He's from Brooklyn and was born on December 4, 1969. Jay-Z's music is original hip-hop. His verses are unique and he has several good albums, Jay-Z was named King of Rap by NBS News and was also ranked greatest MC of all time by MTV.

Jay-Z is not only known for his music, but also for his business ventures. He is the creator of the clothing line Rocawear and he is also part owner of the NBA`s New Jersey Nets. He is the former CEO of Def Jam Recordings.

My other favorite musical artist is Aubrey Drake Graham, known as Drake. Drake was born on October 24, 1986. Drake is from Toronto. It was 2009 when Drake got signed to a record label which is Young Money Entertainment.

Drake is my favorite artist because his songs always have good inspirational lyrics with a real good beat to them. I don't have a favorite song by Drake because all his songs sound pretty straight to me, especially all his songs on his latest album "Take Care" that debuted at number one on the US Billboard.

"Take Care" had sold 1,669,000 copies in the US. When Drake gets asked about his lyrics he says, "I can't stop my emotion. I always go with my initial thought."

This is why Drake and Jay-Z are my two favorite artists.

ONEIDA ADVENTURE

Look What We've been up to!

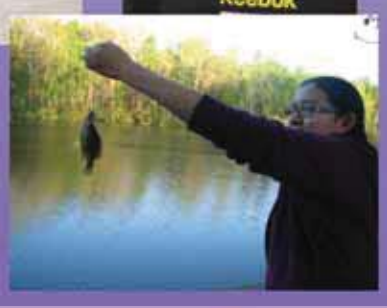
For an end of the year Field trip, Oneida Adventures took 7th and 8th grade students to Maribel Caves for an afternoon of exploration, learning, and caving. The students' learned about the areas geological significance, drank from a nearby bubbling spring, and walked, crawled and crept through many of the Nature Preserve's caves. New Hope Cave, Coopers cave, and Pancake cave were just some of the places the students were able to explore guided by one of Maribel Cave's Volunteers. After finishing up with the field trip, many students were full of mud! Getting Muddy was one of the favorite parts of the day for the students. Maribel Cave is one of the many places Oneida Adventure staff are familiar with. We are pleased to be able to take any interested group to explore the caves.

The Turtle Goes Caving, Exploring and Camping



If interested, Please Contact us! We'd be happy to be your guide!

After caving, 12 of the 8th grade students camped out overnight at the Quarry with staff. Fishing, talking circles, fun campfire food, hiking, and birding were some of the activities that kept the students busy and interacting with the wilderness around them. Tony Kuchma, from environmental joined the students on the last day. He taught students' how to trap aquatic species, and study them. Using the new knowledge gained students were able to identify aspects of the surrounding habitats. Some of the highlights for the students were the night hike, taking time away from the busyness of school, sharing tents with friends, and fishing.

A Time to Flourish...

With each change of our four seasons, Oneida Adventures offers a therapeutic retreat in the wilderness for women. This Spring, a group of women headed north to Upper Michigan—Porcupine Mountains. As reflected in our surrounding nature during this springtime, the theme of the weekend was flourishing, and growth. The trip offered rustic cabin amenities, and guide service, massage, morning yoga, an array of hiking vistas, waterfalls, rushing spring rivers, moss covered forests, suspension bridges, and the power of Lake Superior and its beautiful sandy and rocky beaches. On each seasonal trip, our goal is to connect—to our inner strengths, our natural surroundings and wildness, and to each other for guidance, empowerment, and support. It was a beautiful trip!

Young Artists Display Talent and Anti-Bullying Messages on Local Billboards

By Jennifer J. Jordan,
M.Ed., CHES, HHS, Injury Prevention Coordinator, Oneida Environmental Health and Safety Division

The Creating Kind and Caring Communities Team at the Oneida Elementary School has done a lot this year in making the children aware of bullying behavior and how to not be a victim of bullying.

One of the events that we conducted was a poster contest. This contest was open to all children Kindergarten through 8th grade attending ONES with the two winning posters placed on billboards in the Green Bay area. A total of 136 posters were collected with the two winners being Lailanna Hill, daughter of Michelle and Todd Hill and Shashonee Adams granddaughter of Julie King-Carr and Jason Carr. Lailanna's poster is on the billboard located on highway172 east just past Babcock Road and Shashonee's poster is on the billboard located on the West Mason Street frontage road by Chili's restaurant. Congratulations to Lailanna and Shashonee for their artistic effort and their message to others that bullying is not tolerated in our community. Billboards will be up through the end of May, so get out there and check them out!

Information for patients who utilize OCHC On-Call Nurse

Registered Nurses (RN) are available for patient phone calls – 24 hours a day/7days a week. When the clinic is closed the RN is home. They do not have access to medical records or pharmacy information.

When to call and speak with the RN *After Clinic Hours:

- You/your child have an urgent health care need/question that cannot wait until the next open day of the clinic.
- Don't call the RN when you are having a life threatening issue. For example, chest pain, difficulty breathing, or bleeding profusely from a wound. Access the nearest emergency department to get medical attention as soon as possible. Call 911 as needed for intervention. Call the Contract Health Services Department to report the visit within 72 hours to ensure coverage.
- The RN's on call also work 40+ hours per week at the OCHC medical clinic, in addition to providing on call services. Calling in the middle of the night with a concern that is not urgent is not appropriate.
- On call staff does not determine Contract Health eligibility. You need to contact the Contract Health Department when the clinic reopens to check on eligibility.

TRIAD Program Enhanced with Nutrition Classes

Good News! Oneida Diabetes Team is proud to announce enhancements made to the TRIAD Program. The TRIAD program is a structured exercise program for patients diagnosed with diabetes on behalf of collaboration between the Oneida Community Health Center Diabetes Team, Health Promotion Disease Prevention Department, and Oneida Family Fitness.

To improve participant success, Registered Dietitian and Certified Diabetes Educator, Betty Schwantes will be providing monthly nutrition classes at Oneida Family Fitness Education Room, covering the following topics:

1. Carbohydrate Counting/Plate Method,
2. Label Reading,
3. Navigating the Grocery Store, and
4. Sports Nutrition for Diabetes.

Beginning May 1, 2012, TRIAD program participants will be required to attend the group nutrition classes within 12 months. A $25 Oneida Retail Gift Card will be offered to those who attend at least one nutrition class every 3 months. Stay tuned for informational flyers with dates and times.

For more information, please contact Margaret VanDen Heuvel, Diabetes Program Supervisor, at (920) 869-4941.

Quirk of WI recall could lead to unusual outcome

By Dinesh Ramde
Associated Press

Milwaukee, WI – Wisconsin traditionally elects its governor and lieutenant governor as a pair, but a quirk in next week's recall elections will give voters the chance to elect a Democrat for one office and a Republican for the other – a scenario that could spark a power struggle whenever the top executive leaves the state.

While a bipartisan executive branch is hardly unprecedented considering 18 states elect the offices separately, the unusual arrangement could to lead to some ugly politics in Wisconsin, already considered one of the most polarized states.

The recall efforts against Republican Gov. Scott Walker and Lt. Gov. Rebecca Kleefisch stemmed largely from Walker's successful push to strip most public-sector workers of nearly all their collective bargaining rights, which threw the state into an uproar as tens of thousands of protesters swarmed the Capitol for three weeks of raucous demonstrations.

Walker's Democratic opponent is Milwaukee Mayor Tom Barrett, who lost to Walker in 2010. Kleefisch is opposed by Mahlon Mitchell, president of the statewide firefighters' union. Both Democrats were squarely on the other side of the union issue.

Governors have managed to coexist with lieutenant governors of different parties elsewhere, as is currently the situation in Arkansas, Missouri, Montana, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont. But some political experts say the arrangement in Wisconsin could be more reminiscent of California in the 1980s, where things got so out of hand that the state Supreme Court was asked to intervene.

"I think it means the governor would never leave the state," said University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee political scientist Mordecai Lee. "Just think of all the legal complications."

In Wisconsin and most other states, the lieutenant governor's position is largely ceremonial. About the only responsibility is to assume the governorship if the incumbent dies, is incapacitated or is impeached. Most state constitutions also put the lieutenant governor in charge if the governor is "absent" from the state, but there's debate about exactly what that means in Wisconsin.

Wisconsin's attorney general's office noted in a 1979 opinion that the state constitution was drawn up in the mid-19th century, a time when a governor who left the state couldn't immediately contact other state officials. The opinion noted that in a modern era of telephones and air travel a governor could perform his duties from out of state.

And in 2012, a governor can be almost anywhere in the world and still reach his staff.

Still, Wisconsin's constitutional language hasn't been challenged in court, meaning a lieutenant governor could declare himself in charge every time the governor crosses the state border.

Memorial Day in Oneida

The Oneida Warriors of Foreign Wars honored their fallen comrades on Memorial Day. The Veterans visited cemeteries located on the Oneida Reservation and concluded with a ceremony at the Veterans Memorial Wall.

Opening eyes to gangs, drugs in Oneida

The Oneida Police Department (OPD) gave a presentation on gang activity and drugs to community members at the Elderly Meal Site on Tuesday, May 29.

Officer Matt Ninham, (standing, upper left), and Gang Task Force Coordinator Antonio Doxtator, (seated far right), were on hand for the question and answer session following the presentation. Ninham led the talk with a video featuring photos of graffiti, drugs and weapons from Oneida and surrounding areas mixed with pictures area gang members have taken of themselves.

According to Ninham, the gangs often adopt Native American symbols and subvert cultural ideas about family and traditions for their own ends. Ninham stated that community members need to be aware of the signs of gangs and drug use because the two go hand in hand.

Hugh Danforth finds the hidden blessings in his life.

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Hugh Danforth is a glass-is-half-full kind of guy. Where some people would curse the stumbling blocks in their lives, Danforth sees the occasional left turns as blessings in disguise starting with his poor health as a child.

"When I was born, I needed an operation right away. I had an appendix go when I was a baby, but they couldn't do anything because I was a preemie. I was supposed to be born in March, I was born in February. Up until I was nine years old, I was sick every day of my life. … I had some good days, and I had some bad days, but I would throw up maybe every other day," he said. "I remember those days because it seemed like I was able … to maybe think differently."

At age nine Danforth's appendix was taken out, and suddenly he could keep up with his younger brother Art and his friends.

I was in (the hospital) for two weeks, and I came out and I was a different person. My brother was telling me 'I couldn't believe it; you had so much energy - where did that come from?'" he said.

Danforth is the son of John A. Danforth and Nancy Ruth Elm. His father worked at St. John's Military Academy in Delafield, Wisc. during the Great Depression taking care of the school's cars, boats and air plane, and chauffeuring the commandant. When World War II started, John got a job at working on diesel submarine engines in Beloit. Eventually, the family moved to Milwaukee and John opened Danforth's Bar on the south side.

"There's quite a few people that remember it," said Danforth.

Danforth graduated from South Division High School just shy of his 20th birthday.

"Education was not a priority with me; I was just having a good time. I didn't know it at the time, but I was dyslexic, so I was slow, so they held me back a couple years, I even flunked kindergarten," he said.

With the military draft going on, he and some friends decided to join the Air Force together.

"I went to induction center … I was there, but those guys weren't there. It must have been about four years after that I finally got a hold of them. 'What happened to you guys?' … so they had the party, and at the party they said no way are we going to go into the air force for four years, better to go into the army for 18 months," said Danforth. "As it turned out, it was a blessing in disguise, because when I was (aptitude) tested they said 'your background is strong in math and science.' Oh-ho, is that right? … I really like math and I liked physics, so that got me into the electronics end of it, and I was working on aircraft instruments."

Danforth was able to leave the service early because of a truce, and used his aviation experience in jobs around Madison. Eventually, he got a job working at the University of Wisconsin in the physics department where he worked for 24 years.

"I was putting together high energy physics detectors, experimental stuff. It was all front line science. We used the latest technologies - we were the latest technologies. It was just fantastic," he said.

However, the work was grant funded, and when the US Congress decided not to fund a particle accelerator, the UW administration suggested that Danforth should retire.

"This is play, this is all play, it's just some great stuff, I don't want to give up the game," he said. "I was worried I was going to be sitting in front of the television in a nice big easy chair, never happened. I found so much to do."

Danforth moved to Oneida in 1995, and got into acting receiving a scholarship for the Lee Strasberg Theater Institute in New York City.

He also involved himself in boards in Oneida such as the Land Claims Commission as well as state and national boards.

"I don't know how I get on these boards," he said as he listed them off.

Danforth has been involved on the Wisconsin Council on Long Term Care in part because of his experience taking care of his elderly mother who died at age 97.

"My mom started working when she was 50 years old … She was good cook, a fantastic cook," he said. "The thing that they really liked was her chili; they couldn't get enough of her chili."

Nancy worked until she was 74 years old and later moved in with Danforth.

"She just wanted to get away from Milwaukee, because the place that she was staying at was just too dangerous, couldn't walk down the street anymore," said Danforth. "It was just great to have her here."

Currently, Danforth is training for the 10 kilometer Bellin Run being held Saturday, June 9 in Green Bay. The training is the result of another hidden blessing.

"When I learned that I had sugar diabetes I was devastated, because how could I have sugar diabetes. I thought I was I was in pretty good shape," he said. Danforth tried to argue his test results with his doctor as they were just over the indication for diabetes.

"I come from a science background, we have plus and minus … she says not in this case. She says you're either pregnant or you're not," he said.

Danforth ignored the results of the test for a while, but as he learned more about the condition, he realized he had to work at becoming healthier.

"I found out very quickly about sugar diabetes and how devastating it is, and I didn't realize for Indian people it's really bad, epidemic," he said. "Then I realized what would happen if you didn't take care of this. I started little by little, I started eating better, and I started exercising, and I've been doing it ever since.

"I'm feeling better, I'm sleeping better, I'm more alert, I've got more energy, and so … I really had to think about this really deeply because it's attitude, what's my diabetes. Well, sugar diabetes for me right now is a blessing in disguise. Without sugar diabetes I wouldn't be eating good, I wouldn't be exercising, and come June 9 in the Bellin Run, I will be running for the first time 6 miles," he said.

About a Recall Election
Recall gives voters the right to reconsider their choice of an elected official; however, it does not automatically result in removal of an official from office. It provides an opportunity for voters to require an elected official to run for office again before the expiration of his or her term.
The Oneida Business Committee encourages all tribal citizens and employees to become part of the political process. The need to continue to participate in the electoral process and elect leadership who will represent the Tribe's issues and concerns at all levels of government is imperative.

Passing On...

Jorgenson, Gerald Lee
January 15, 1949 – May 23, 2012

Gerald Lee Jorgenson, age 63, passed away on Wednesday, May 23, 2012. He was born in Menasha on January 15, 1949, the son of the late Clarence and Myrtle (Adams) Jorgenson. Jerry attended Menasha High School and was an avid fan of street rods and traveling to car shows. He was a self-employed fabricator and loved the projects he worked on. Jerry truly made a career out of his passion.

Jerry is lovingly survived by his sister, Judy (Roger) Anderson of Cheyenne, Wyoming; nephews: Casey (Jana) Heft of Red Granite, Corey (Jill) Heft of Oshkosh; nieces: Deb Anderson of Wyoming and Donna Araujo of Colorado and grand-nieces, Paityn Heft and Kendra Araujo. Jerry is preceded in death by his sister, Barbara Jorgenson.

A Memorial Service for Jerry was held at 7:00 p.m. on Tuesday, May 29, 2012 at the Martens-Laemmrich Funeral Home, 312 Milwaukee Street, Menasha, with Pastor Chema Paba officiating. Friends were received for visitation from 5:00 p.m. until the time of service.

Forsyth, Christina M.
December 7, 1978 – May 26, 2012

Christina Forsyth, of Shawano, was called away from us at the young age of 33 on Saturday, May 26, 2012 in Green Bay. Born on December 7, 1978 in Shawano, she is the daughter of Jack and Charlene (Forsyth) O'Brien. Christina was a very gifted beader, she made beautiful jewelry and Native American beadwork. She was an avid Packer fan and had a great love for turtles. She was a former employee of Oneida casino. Christina was a very unselfish person with a big heart for helping friends and family.

She is survived by: her parents, Jack and Charlene of Shawano; her biological father, David (fiancé, Patty) Boyd of Green Bay; brother, Joshua O'Brien; half siblings, David Boyd II, Robert Albrich, Cherrell Heroux, Joseph Boyd, Justice Boyd; grandparents, Alfred Forsyth of Clintonville, Harriett Kindness; Her boyfriend, Henry Tomow; and several aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews, cousins and friends.

Christina is preceded in death by: her grandparents, Delores Forsyth, Jerry and Judy O'Brien, Lovely and Leslie Boyd; and a half sibling, Jessie Boyd.

Funeral services will be held at 6:00 p.m. on Friday, June 1, 2012 at the Swedberg-Wendt Funeral Home in Bonduel with the Rev. David Barrett officiating. Visitation will be held at the funeral home on Friday from 4:00 p.m. until the time of the service.

There is no charge for obituary notices to be published in the Kalihwisaks for enrolled Oneida citizens or spouses.

| | | | | |
| 8 | Total Individual Sites | | | |

All new Home Building Opportunity properties will be advertised for a minimum of thirty (30) days with an application deadline.

Applications Accepted beginning: July 13, 2012 at 8:00 a.m. Deadline: July 27, 2012 by 4:30 PM

Application packets can be obtained at the Division of Land Management. Part of the application process is that a pre-qualify letter from a financial institution must accompany the other application documents. A good place to start the research for your home building project is to find out how much financing you will be able to obtain.

In addition we have two lots available at the Chicago Corner Subdivision that were previously advertised and are now available on a first come basis.

Please feel free to contact the Division of Land Management at 920-869-1690 or 1-800-684-1697 and speak with Diane Wilson, Tina Hackett, or Michelle Hill with questions about the HBO.

Application acceptance is based on approximate 30 day prior, publishing date in the Kalihwisaks.

Oneida school kitchen staff step up to the plate

Most people already realize how unhealthy our food system really is, but most do not want to take the extra time or energy to bring healthy foods back to the table. This isn't true of the kitchen staff at the Oneida Nation schools. These folks realize how important a nutritious meal is to the Oneida youth.

What is the big deal you may ask? The answer is a lot of extra time and effort, especially when you consider they are cooking for a hundred plus people. Those of you that may still occasionally cook from scratch know the extra time and work involved in cooking raw vegetables or delicious Oneida Nation Farm meat compared to throwing something into a microwave.

When the school gets locally nutritionally dense vegetables they have to wash them, trim away any unwanted portions, blanch them and then cook them. After that then they can start the arduous task of preparing them in a nutritious meal. If they get Oneida Black Angus bulk beef or buffalo they have to prepare it for cooking (for example shaping them into somewhat uniform hamburger patties) and then fry them up.

So the next time you are preparing a truly healthy meal for your family of five, imagine what it is like for the folks in the Oneida Nation school kitchens, and if you ever see them on the streets be sure to thank them for what they are trying to do for the Oneida Nation youth.

This is a list of some of the products that the school has purchased from the Oneida Nation Farm and Tsyunhehkwa: Black angus meat, Buffalo meat, Green beans, Winter squash, Onions, Carrots, Red Potatoes, White potatoes, Apples and Dehydrated white corn.

Free airfare offer linked to presentation for travel club

MADISON – "Congratulations! You have been selected to receive 2 Round Trip Airfares to Honolulu, Hawaii…"

It may be difficult to turn down a "deal" like that…but understand that this may be one deal that is too good to be true.

The Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection heard from a number of Wisconsin consumers who recently received fliers in the mail informing them that they had been selected for a special offer: two round-trip tickets to most major international U.S. airports and a 3-day/2-night hotel stay.

The tickets come with a couple of catches, of course. Examples of important information that the postcard does not clearly explain include:

- The postcard is a promotion from Vacation Choices, a travel club that requires a paid membership.
- The participants are required to attend a 90-minute sales seminar for Vacation Choices in order to receive their tickets.
- A 90-minute sales presentation is mentioned in the small text at the bottom of the back of the postcard, but no mention is made of what will be sold during that time. The postcard only notes that this promotion does not involve a timeshare or land sale offer.
- Despite the prominent display of their logos on the postcard, AirTran, Hawaiian Airlines and US Airways are not affiliated with the company or the promotion – this is only noted in the small text on the bottom of the back of the card.

"Many travel clubs have substantial upfront fees and annual membership fees, and the deals are of questionable value," said Sandy Chalmers, Administrator of Trade and Consumer Protection. "Our evidence shows that travel club pricing can be higher than prices found through an online search or by booking directly with providers."

If you are planning to join Vacation Choices or any travel club, you should consider doing some research on the company before you proceed. There are plenty of resources and references online that address the risks of joining a travel club.

For more information or to file a consumer complaint, visit the Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection website at datcp.wi.gov, send an e-mail to datcphotline@wisconsin.gov or call toll-free at 1-800-422-7128.

Wis. DNR urges people to leave fawns alone

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ State wildlife officials are urging people to leave unattended fawns alone.

Department of Natural Resources officials say does are starting to give birth to the first fawns of the year. They move very little during their first weeks of life while their mother away, relying on their lack of scent and natural camouflage for protection.

DNR experts say people who find fawns alone on the ground often think they've been abandoned or orphaned and try to feed the creatures or take them home, scaring the mothers out of the area in the process.

It's generally illegal to possess a live wild animal without a license or permit. Someone can possess an injured or legitimately orphaned animal for up to day, however, to transport it to a rehabilitator.

Menominee Indian Tribe ends development agreement

Keshena, WI – The Menominee Indian Tribe of Wisconsin and KMD Consulting Services of San Diego, CA have reached a mutual decision to terminate the existing Development Agreement for the Tribe's Off-Reservation Gaming Resort at Dairyland Greyhound Park in Kenosha, Wisconsin. The Tribe and KMD Consulting Service entered into the Development Agreement in December 2011. KMD Consulting Service is owned by Kevin Dwyer.

Tribal Chairman, Craig Corn, stated "The mutual decision to terminate the Development Agreement between the Tribe and KMD Consulting was in the best interest of the Menominee Tribe. The Tribe has sustained the financial obligations in the past and remains committed to seeing this Off-Reservation Gaming Resort in Kenosha through to fruition." Chairman Corn went on to say, "I would like to thank KMD Consulting for their interest in the project and wish them well in their future endeavors."

The news of the termination of the development agreement will not stop the progress of the Tribe's application. The components of the Application and Project remain the same. With the termination of the Development Agreement, the Tribe is now able to seek new interest from other parties in the development and potential management of the Off-Reservation Gaming Resort.

The Tribe's Off-Reservation Gaming Application is currently under review at the Bureau of Indian Affairs Midwest Regional Office in Bloomington, MN. The Tribe anticipates the Final Environmental Impact Study's Notice of Availability to soon be published in the Federal Register.

For more information, please contact Craig Corn, Tribal Chairman, at (715) 799-5114 or cacorn@mitw.org.

From 1A/Quirk of Wisconsin

Once in control, the lieutenant governor could sign or veto bills, issue or revoke executive orders, make judicial appointments, call lawmakers into a special session, demand access to confidential governor files or issue pardons. While the governor could undo most of those moves upon returning, a pardon is irreversible, and any secrets learned by the opposition wouldn't be unlearned.

In the 1960s, when the offices were elected separately, Patrick Lucey was a Democratic lieutenant governor to Republican Gov. Warren Knowles. Lucey, who went on to serve as governor, said it worked then, but times were much different.

"Warren and I had known each other for a long time. We got along fine," said Lucey, 94. "But I think it's always made sense that (the governor and lieutenant governor) should be of the same party."

Wisconsin's constitution was amended in 1970 to ensure just that, pairing the governor and his running mate on a joint ballot.

The cautionary tale that most resonates is that of Mike Curb, a conservative Republican elected in 1979 as California's lieutenant governor behind Democratic Gov. Jerry Brown, who was running for president. California's constitution gave the lieutenant governor full gubernatorial powers whenever the governor left the state, and Curb used it.

During one Brown absence he promoted a conservative judge to the appellate court. Brown returned and withdrew the appointment, but when he left again, Curb reappointed the judge. Brown undid it again and also sued to stop Curb. The California Supreme Court issued a split decision, upholding the governor's authority to withdraw the nominations, but also upholding Curb's right to full power when the governor was gone.

Summer Fun… On a Budget

BayBank
Green Bay, Wisconsin

Temperatures are climbing, school is out and everyone wants to beat the doldrums with some fun summer activities. However, keeping the kids (and yourself) entertained can put a strain on your wallet. Here are some ideas to have some fun in the sun without breaking the bank.

Want to spend a day at the water park?

For a family of four, admission alone can cost over $100, and then you have to factor in concessions, parking, gas for travel, etc. Rather than spending all that money for a day in the pool with hundreds of people, organize a neighborhood water park party! Each family that gets involved contributes something to the event: food, a slip n' slide, water guns/balloons, prizes, etc. Keep it low-key or go all out; it's up to you.

How about going to a baseball game? Again, the biggest budget hold-ups for this activity are cost of admission, travel, concessions and dealing with crowds. The easiest way to avoid most of those is to attend a minor league game rather than a major league match-up. Northwoods League game prices are usually less than $10, and you can cut down on the cost of concessions by tailgating or grilling out at home before the game. All the fun of a day at the ballpark at a fraction of the price.

What about the fair? State, county and city fairs and carnivals are a lot of fun, but the expenses can add up quickly. Food, games, rides and souvenirs all factor into the total cost of the trip. To keep costs down, lay out a budget before you get to the fairgrounds. Allot specific amounts for games, concessions and rides. You can also look through newspapers and online for coupons.

Finally, investigate what events are taking place locally. Explore Discoverwisconsin.com or the Bucky Book to see what your community has in store for the summer months. Making a few substitutions and taking the time to research best prices will help you have a fun, frugal summer.

Oneida Nation Child Support Agency

Shakoti?nukú·lale? Latiksashúha?

Topic: Starting Child Support Services FAQ's

Question: Why is my child support case with Oneida and not in the county?

If you are receiving public assistance benefits through the tribe's Center for Self-Sufficiency, Oneida Health Center or local county economic support agency, the referral is automatically sent to us as the tribe has jurisdiction.

Question: How do I start receiving child support?

A parent or caretaker can apply for services with the agency by phoning for an application or accessing it on our website at: http://www.oneidanation.org/uploadedFiles/Departments/Social_Services/Child_Support/Application%20for%20Services(2).pdf

Question: My case is currently in another county in Wisconsin. Can I have it transferred to Oneida?

Yes, cases can be transferred from another county if the parties in the case meet the jurisdictional laws to have the case with Oneida Child Support. Contact the agency to discuss the transfer process.

Question: What happens after the referral or application? How long will it take to start seeing child support payments?

After a referral or application for services is sent, the case will be delegated to the appropriate case manager in one of our four stratified areas: paternity, enforcement, interstate, or sub-care case management. A case manager will then contact you to follow up with the referral or application. The time from referral or application to the start of child support payments can be somewhere between two-three months. If you receive any certified mail, be sure to pick it up right away to avoid any delay in the child support process.

Upcoming Events and Updates:

- See us at Oneida Community Fest from Noon-3:00pm for information and questions.
- The start of the Outagamie County transfer process was initiated in May 2012. Call 920-490-3700 and ask for Michelle with any questions regarding the transfer.
- Please keep address and contact information current with the agency in order to avoid any delay in the transfer.

Oneida Business Committee Wrap
May 23, 2012

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

The Oneida Business Committee (OBC) made quick work of the May 23 meeting agenda at the Norbert Hill Center.

Present: Ed Delgado – Chairman, Tina Danforth – Treasurer, Patty Hoeft – Secretary, David Jordan – Councilmember, Vince DelaRosa – Councilmember, Brandon Stevens – Councilmember, Paul Ninham – Councilmember

Absent: Greg Matson – Vice-Chairman, Melinda Danforth – Councilmember

Minutes

OBC meeting minutes were approved from the May 9 and May 14 meeting.

Resolutions

Fee to trust applications for property on Highway 54 and County Road H were approved.

The sole source contracting resolution for Oneida and Indian-owned businesses was rescinded. Liability issues led to the change.

Boards, Committees, and Commissions

The appointment of Edwin Wallenfang to the Powwow Committee was approved. Carol L. Smith's appointment to the Personnel Commission was approved and she was also sworn into the position.

Vacancies were posted on the Child Protection board, Bay Bank board, South Eastern Oneida Tribal Services (SEOTS) board, Arts board, Anna John Nursing Home board, Oneida Nation Veterans Affairs Committee board, and alternate positions on the Oneida Election Board.

Quarterly reports from SEOTS, the Oneida Airport Hotel Corporation, Oneida Total Integrated Enterprises, Bay Bank, Oneida Golf Enterprise, and Oneida Seven Generations were approved.

Standing Committees

A resolution was adopted that governs the licensing process of vendors that offer services to the tribe's gaming operations. The policy will now allow for background investigations on vendors as required by the tribe's gaming compact with the state.

Finance Committee meeting minutes were approved from May 21.

The April 26 report from the Quality of Life group was accepted along with the Community Development Planning Committee's request for support for community meetings.

Unfinished Business

A housing initiative that will create a joint venture to construct homes on tribal lands was sent to the C.F.O. for review and recommendations are due back to the OBC in 30 days.

A statewide proclamation by Governor Walker that states 2012 as the year of the veteran was approved by the OBC.

Retro approval was granted supporting a letter to the Bay-Lake Regional Planning Commission, which supports the commission's application for the Safe Routes to School grant.

An attorney contract between the Oneida Police Commission and Andre Law Offices was approved.

Travel Requests

Vince DelaRosa, Indian Community Development Block Grant training, May 30, Chicago, IL. The request was approved.

Brandon Stevens, Bureau of Indian Education summer learning institute, June 11-12, Boulder, CO. The reimbursed travel was approved.

Vince DelaRosa, Manufacturing Matters, May 8-9, Milwaukee, WI. Retro-approval was granted.

The next OBC meeting will be Wednesday, June 13 at 9 a.m. at the Norbert Hill Center.

Guest Editorial
Greg Matson
OBC Vice Chairman

On behalf of the Oneida Business Committee, I cannot stress enough how important it is for the employees and citizens of the Oneida Tribe to vote so as to ensure the election of those candidates who will recognize our rights and protect our jobs. The future of the organization depends on it. One of the best ways to do this is to vote. Elections are often politically dangerous times for Native Americans. To remain passive or quiet is to shrink away from the responsibilities we have to Oneida's economic, social, cultural and political future.

One very important task of the Oneida Legislative Affairs Department is advertising or Agetting out the vote. This lets people know that they should vote in the upcoming local, state and/or federal elections. Legislative Affairs will have a booth at various community events where the information is made available on how to register and vote

The Oneida Business Committee strongly encourages all tribal citizens and employees to become part of the political process. The need to continue to participate in the electoral process and elect leadership who will represent the Tribe's issues and concerns at all levels of government is imperative. Thus, with the approval of BC Resolution 1O-13-10-B, employees are allowed up to one (1) hour of paid work time to leave their work sites depending on the location of the polling site, to get out and vote for Oneida Tribal, local, state and federal primary and general elections. Employees are required to get prior approval from their department manager or supervisor to ensure adequate coverage in their respective department.

Our jobs and livelihood are continuously dependent upon the actions of those who dominate the governmental process. We need to elect candidates who will protect our rights and our jobs. We need to elect those individuals who will work cooperatively with the Oneida Nation leaders, and also respect the inherent SOVEREIGN rights of the Oneida Nation.

The Oneida Legislative Affairs Department is also responsible for recruiting employees to contribute into the Tribe's "Voices for Oneida" conduit account. A minimal donation per week can really make a difference. If you would like more information on the conduit, contact Legislative Affairs at 920.869.4388.

The Recall election is Tuesday, June 5th, please make sure you use your voice and do your part by voting! Yawáko – Thank you!

Sponsor: Butch Rentmeester
Motion by Tina Danforth to approve the memorandum of agreement between Indian Health Services and Oneida Tribe-Cora House Community Sewer, seconded by Patty Hoeft. Motion carried with one abstention:
Abstained: David Jordan

2. Emergency Management and Homeland Security Law emergency amendments
Sponsor: Ed Delgado
Motion by Patty Hoeft to defer this request about the restructuring of Emergency Management and Homeland Security to the Police Commission for their review and recommendations and that they bring back a report back to the Business Committee in two weeks, seconded by Greg Matson. Motion carried with two oppositions:
Opposed: Tina Danforth, David Jordan
For the record: Tina Danforth stated I am opposing the motion because one, there is no relevancy in making this transition, right now. I am not convinced that this is a necessary step to take on behalf Homeland Security, on behalf of the Police Department, on behalf of Police Commission; I do not believe that this is a necessary transitional step to take right now, because there is no true basis for it. I think some of the questions that have been raised today have been procedural questions. Some of them with historical implications and some of us have a little bit more history than others on the committee, so granted that does occur, but I also opposed because when I reviewed the documentation in front of me about amending Chapter 35, it not only changes the line of authority for Emergency Management, but it takes other fundamental rights away from them, such as the ability to be compensated and receive benefits. What does that have to do with anything? Why would you strip them of benefits that they currently have and then transitioned and say they longer are deserving of certain benefits? So to me there are more underlying issues to this amendment and I'm still not clear why this is a necessary step for us to take or for the committee to take.
For the record: Ed Delgado stated the motion here does not provide for any transfer of Emergency Management, it's only to bring this issue before the Police Commission to review it and to make recommendations. No transfer is happening.
Motion by Patty Hoeft to direct the Legislative Reference Office to prepare a comprehensive analysis of the role and purpose, and how to govern and structure the Oneida Emergency Management and Homeland Security office function and include its relationship to other policing and law enforcement authorities within the Tribe, in two weeks, seconded by Greg Matson. Motion carried with one abstention:
Abstained: Tina Danforth
Motion by Patty Hoeft to recess until 1 p.m., seconded by Tina Danforth. Motion carried unanimously
Motion by Patty Hoeft to return from recess at 1:06 p.m., seconded by David Jordan. Motion carried unanimously

Absentee voting brisk ahead of recall election

By Dinesh Ramde
Associated Press

MILWAUKEE (AP) ~ Gov. Scott Walker and Milwaukee Mayor Tom Barrett observed Memorial Day by taking a break from campaigning. Plenty of voters, however, still had the recall election on their minds Monday.

Hundreds of people spent their holiday in line at the Municipal Building in downtown Milwaukee, waiting cast absentee ballots ahead of the June 5 election. Some voters said they wanted to avoid crowds and possible shenanigans on Election Day. Others weren't going to be in town that day. And some said they wanted to get their voting out of the way so they could spend Election Day encouraging others to head to the polls.

Cathy Cunningham, 50, said she wanted to vote early so she could do whatever she could on June 5 to help Barrett win.

"I want to get rid of Walker," said Cunningham, who works at a grocery store. "I think he's fooling some people into thinking he's saving the state money but he's really selling out to corporate interests."

The effort to recall Walker and five other Republicans stems largely from Walker's successful push to eliminate nearly all collective bargaining rights from most public-sector workers.

In 2010, Walker defeated Barrett by 5 percentage points, and recent polls show the governor holds a slight lead over his Democratic challenger.

According to polls, the percentage of undecided voters is in the low single digits. That's why both candidates are concentrating less on wooing undecided voters and more on get-out-the-vote efforts. Even if voter turnout next week is a lofty 50 percent, that still means 2 million voters sat out the recall.

Stephen Van Gelderen, a 29-year-old music director at his church, cast an absentee ballot for Walker on Monday because he won't be in town June 5. He said Walker didn't deserve to face a recall because any elected official, Democrat or Republican, deserves a chance to finish his or her term as long as there were no major ethical issues.

"I also like his fiscal policies. Through his policies, we've seen the budget deficit erased," the Milwaukee man said. "I also like his position on moral issues, such as abortion and homosexuality."

Walker and Barrett have been rallying voters in recent days, but both paused their campaigns Monday. Walker planned to spend Memorial Day at ceremonies at a Milwaukee cemetery and an Armed Forces Reserve Center in Madison. Barrett was scheduled to attend a Memorial Day parade in Beloit followed by a stop at the Madison Brat Fest.

City clerks' offices in Madison and Milwaukee were open this weekend to accommodate in-person absentee voters. People can request absentee ballots through Thursday. In-person absentee voting in clerks' offices ends Friday.

Wis. state parks to hold annual open house

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ Outdoor lovers can visit Wisconsin state parks for free this weekend.

The Department of Natural Resources will hold its annual State Parks Open House Day on Sunday. The agency will waive admission stickers and trail passes.

Visitors who stop at one of 49 parks participating in the "Read to Lead at Wisconsin State Parks" program can check out a book paired with that park that will help them learn more about nature and the environment. The program challenges children between the ages of 5 and 9 to read nature books from a DNR-compiled list.

Any child who finishes 20 or more books from the list can enter a drawing to win a Kindle Fire and other prices.

Wisconsin DNR needs help with fawn research

SHAWANO, Wis. (AP) ~ The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources is looking for volunteers to help with a research project involving fawns.

So far, more than 100 volunteers have captured and collared or ear-tagged 32 fawns in northern and eastern Wisconsin as part of the research project to learn more about the state's fawn population.

However, more volunteers are needed through next month in the Winter and Shawano areas.

Volunteers would help with capturing, weighing, radio-collaring and ear-tagging fawns. Researchers from the University of Wisconsin-Madison are also involved.

Those interested in volunteering can call deer researchers in Shawano at 920-373-3565 or in Winter at 608-219-0771.

Who's an American Indian? Warren case stirs query

By Jesse Washington
AP National Writer

What, exactly, makes someone American Indian? Even Indians themselves don't agree as they debate the case of Senate candidate Elizabeth Warren, whose disputed claim of Native American identity is shining a rare spotlight on the malleable nature of Indian heritage and the long history of murky claims to such ancestry.

Warren, a Harvard Law School professor and Democrat who is running in Massachusetts against Republican incumbent Sen. Scott Brown, was listed as Native American in several law school directories. Warren has said that her "family lore" described Indian ancestors, and the New England Genealogy Association said it found indications - but not proof - that Warren had a Cherokee great-great-great grandmother, which would make her 1/32 Indian.

"I'm proud of my heritage," Warren said Thursday. Asked how she knew it included Native Americans, she replied, "Because my mother told me so."

Her opponents question whether Warren chose this heritage to gain advantages available to Indians and other underrepresented groups in academia.

"Warren has zero evidence that she is at all Native American," said Brown's campaign manager, Jim Barnett. The genealogy association acknowledges that it found only secondary references to Cherokee family members, not primary sources such as marriage, birth or census records.

Among Native Americans, the varying opinions demonstrate that Indian identity is subjective even among Indians themselves.

When David Eugene Wilkins first saw Warren interviewed during her nomination to a federal post, he was smitten by her intelligence and politics. But when he heard about her claims of Indian ancestry, "I shook my head and said, 'Oh no.'"

"For us it was always about allegiance rather than biology or ancestry," said Wilkins, an enrolled member of the Lumbee tribe and professor of American Indian studies at the University of Minnesota.

"It's where you place your political, cultural, emotional allegiance. She lived her entire life and never had any association whatsoever with any community. So something doesn't wash for me," Wilkins said.

But David Treuer, an award-winning writer and Ojibwe Indian from Leech Lake Reservation in Minnesota, said there is a difference between Indian identity and ancestry - you can have one without the other.

"An Indian identity is something someone claims for oneself; it is a matter of choice," Treuer wrote in a Washington Post essay titled, "Elizabeth Warren says she's Native American. So she is."

There are 566 federally recognized Native American tribes, each with its own rules for membership, according to the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs, or BIA. Some tribes require a "blood quantum'" measurement of as much as one-half or one-quarter Indian ancestry; others require a certain place of birth or residence.

Wilkins, the professor, is married to a Navajo with many siblings. "I've asked them what defines a Navajo," he said. "One said you have to speak the language. Another said you have to live within our sacred mountains. Another said no, you have to take part in ceremonial life. All this in one family!"

According to census figures provided by the BIA, an estimated 4.5 million people identify themselves as American Indians or Alaska Natives, including those who say they are more than one race. But in a 2005 report, the most recent available, the BIA counted just 2 million enrolled tribal members - which means that fewer than half of all people claiming Indian heritage are recognized by a tribe.

"There's an old joke in this corner of Indian Country that if you meet someone who doesn't know anything about tribal affairs but claims they're Indian, they'll say they're Cherokee," Lenzy Krehbiel-Burton, a spokesperson for the Cherokee Nation, said by e-mail.

Warren grew up in Oklahoma, home of the 310,000-member Cherokee Nation, the largest Indian tribe. Warren does not claim official Cherokee membership, which is based on the "Dawes Rolls," a federal list of Cherokees in Oklahoma from the late 1800s and early 1900s. Many people have legitimate Cherokee ancestry but are not eligible for membership because their ancestors were not among those counted, Krehbiel-Burton said.

But "some people falsely claim Native heritage simply out of ignorance," Krehbiel-Burton said. "They've been told for years that they had a great-grandmother (or something similar) who was a Cherokee princess and assume that it's true."

Warren spoke of a similar oral tradition when she mentioned an heirloom photo of her grandfather: "My Aunt Bea has walked by that picture at least a thousand times (and) remarked that he - her father, my papaw - had high cheekbones like all of the Indians do."

Even President Barack Obama has an Indian story, about his maternal grandmother, who was nicknamed "Toot."

"If asked, Toot would turn her head in profile to show off her beaked nose, which, along with a pair of jet-black eyes, was offered as proof of Cherokee blood," Obama wrote in his memoir, "Dreams from My Father."

But eyes, noses and cheekbones are not the issue for Rhonda LeValdo, president of the Native American Journalists Association and an enrolled member of the Acoma Pueblo tribe.

"If you're going to claim it, you have to help your people out," says LeValdo. She had seen no evidence of such involvement by Warren, but said she didn't know enough details to judge Warren's claim.

LeValdo said there are many fakers: "A lot of people find some sort of romanticism in being Native American. They think of the warrior type, or the Pocohontas stereotype. They're just taken with the idea of it."

"But to a lot of our people who live this life, it's tough," she continued. "We deal with a lot of things. A lot of us feel like if you're going to claim it, you have to do something. Don't just use it when you want to use it."

Warren has been adamant that she did not seek any advantage from Native American heritage. Records show that she declined to apply for admission to Rutgers Law School under a minority student program and identified her race as "white" on an employment record at the University of Texas, where she worked from 1983 to 1987.

She left Texas for the University of Pennsylvania Law School, where a report on minority faculty listed Warren's name. Her ethnicity became a campaign issue when the Boston Herald reported that Harvard Law, which hired Warren in 1995, listed her as a minority when the school was under pressure to diversify the faculty.

Besides potentially influencing hiring or promotion, Indian identity can have other economic advantages. Some tribes share millions in casino earnings; health care, scholarships and housing are available to some tribal members.

Native Americans have a high rate of intermarriage with other groups. Many are not identifiable by appearance, which has made it possible for almost anyone to assume a Native persona - for various purposes.

Some of the American colonists who boarded British ships during the Boston Tea Party wore Mohawk costumes. During New York anti-rent conflicts of the 1840s, white people assumed Indian garb and pidgin "Injinspeak" as they harassed patrician estates, according to the book "Playing Indian," by Philip J. Deloria.

The actor Iron Eyes Cody starred as an Indian in films from the 1930s to the `70s, and championed many Native causes. He claimed to be Cherokee, but near the end of his life was revealed to be the son of Italian immigrants. In 1976, former Ku Klux Klansman Asa Earl Carter published a fabricated and best-selling memoir, "The Education of Little Tree," under the name Forrest Carter.

"When that kind of fraud takes place it damages our people," said Wilkins, the professor.

"You have people on the outside claiming this and that to draw attention to themselves," he said, "and then people on the outside may wonder, do Native people really know who they are?"

Loretta Says... Great Lakes Inter Tribal Council, Incorporated

Loretta Metoxen • *Oneida Tribal Historian

Ongoing Kalihwisaks Column • *Providing a connection to the past

I've been requested to write my thoughts and recollections on Great Lakes Inter-Tribal Council (GLITC), Inc. From 1968-70, I served as the Assistant Director for the Neighborhood Youth Programs on all the reservations in Wisconsin. For the years 1970-73, I was the Assistant Director for all the programs sponsored and administered by GLITC, Inc. Pete Christiansen from Lac Du Flambeau was the Director at that time.

In 1964, President Lyndon Baines Johnson was very proud to have initiated the Great Society Programs for the Nation. Most of these programs fell under the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO). Within OEO there was an Indian Desk. As I recall, Jim Wilson (Lakota), served as the head of the Indian Desk in Washington. GLITC, Inc. was organized so that it could be the recipient of grants for various purposes for the benefit of Indian people in Wisconsin. One of the requirements was to organize as a 501© 3 charitable and educational corporation. The leaders who signed the original documents in this effort were Mitchell Whiterabbit, Ho-Chunk; Arvid Miller, Stockbridge-Munsee; and Norbert Hill, Sr., Oneida. I knew them all very well. Mitchell was a minister from Black River Falls. Arvid was a long time chairman of his Tribe. He attended the very first organizational meeting of the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI) held in Denver, Colorado, in 1944. Norbert returned to Oneida after a career in Detroit, Michigan and held the office of chairman. The GLITC, Inc. documents were completed and filed in 1965. Even though the Ojibway chairmen were not signatories to the corporation papers, all the Tribes in Wisconsin were included at that time, except the Menominee Nation. The Menominees had just gone through an arduous termination process pursuant to House Concurrent Resolution 108, passed during the Eisenhower administration. Therefore, their status as a federally recognized Tribe was no longer in effect and they did not qualify for the same programs as the other Tribes in Wisconsin through the OEO Indian Desk.

GLITC, Inc. was the lead agency for such programs as Headstart, Community Health Representatives (CHRs), Emergency Food, Emergency Employment, Economic Development, Volunteers in Service to America (VISTAS), Elder Services, Community Action Program and many others. All the member Tribes shared in the distribution of the funds which was decided by the Board, made up of all the tribal Chairmen. The funds had to be applied for in a timely manner on the correct forms and usually signed by the Director and the President of GLITC, Inc. Obtaining the signatures was problematic in that the President, Eugene Taylor at that time, lived approximately 150 miles west of the offices. I often drove my vehicle in extremely inclement weather to obtain the signatures in time. I shall never forget changing a tire in 20 degree below zero temperatures. Sometimes, the Taylor family found me asleep in their home in a big comfortable chair in the morning. Most of the required reports were quarterly and they required the same signatures.

GLITC, Inc. met regularly once a month and they rotated the site of the meeting or met in Madison or a particular Reservation, depending on the major topic or the nature of the agenda. The GLITC, Inc. board consisted of the Chairmen (and Chairwomen) from the Red Cliff, Bad River, St. Croix, Lac Courte Oreilles, Lac Du Flambeau, Sakoagan Ojibway Reservations as well as those from Ho-Chunk, Forest County Potowatomi, Stockbridge Munsee, and Oneida Reservations. It is my considered opinion that GLITC, Inc. gave most of the Tribes in Wisconsin a jump start in directing and making important decisions for their respective Tribes where that inherent authority had been lying dormant for years because of the corrosive policies of the United States and the prevalent and pervasive poverty.

The Oneida Tribe represented the largest single population served under the GLITC, Inc. umbrella. The grant funds, however, were nearly always distributed equally among all member Tribes. Oneida leadership realized that the Oneida population was used to acquire the larger total funding amounts but that those funds were not being distributed back to the Oneida Tribe for services commensurate with the count, but because six of the member Tribes were Ojibway, the Ojibway received an inordinate amount of funding. Oneida began applying separately for all the programs it had previously received through GLITC, Inc.

Some programs were still applied for in unison and GLITC, Inc. continued to be an important political arm to deal collectively with the United States Congress and the state of Wisconsin. The effectiveness of the member Tribes in dealing with the fishing controversies in the 1990s and the Exxon mining threat more recently are prime examples of positive unity. Since 1988, when the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act was passed, GLITC, Inc. Tribes had discussed the issues surrounding the Compact negotiations with the State of Wisconsin. It is my considered opinion, also, that unity on this issue would go a very long way toward increased benefits for all the Tribes.

Impacts of an unusually warm Wisc. spring

The ice went off local lakes and ponds almost a month early. Spring peepers, and wood frogs were singing and laying eggs in early March. Some Canada geese were on eggs in March as were sandhill cranes and mallards; wild turkeys, bald eagles, and robins were not far behind. What are some risks and benefits of breeding early?

Benefits include:

- Producing young that will have a longer season to mature
- Producing young ahead of their rivals, allowing them to be more competitive
- Allowing more time to produce a second brood
- Getting young grown ahead of predators, parasites, and seasonal diseases
- Having young hatch and be on their own before hayfields are harvested
- Plenty of season remaining to re-nest should nests fail

Risks include:

- Producing young prior to food resources being available
- Lack of nesting and brood cover
- Eggs freezing prior to incubation (eggs are not incubated until the clutch is full)
- Nests and hatchlings exposed to harsh weather conditions (snow, rain, frost)
- Expending large energy resources only to have nests fail

Many locally breeding species were not even aware that our area was experiencing warm temperatures in mid-winter. Birds that migrate from the tropics rely on day length to determine when to migrate. The local climate has little to do with their annual migration sequence.

Unusual climatic events apply to those species that only go far enough south to avoid the worst of weather and for those that stay here year around. Those species have a much better opportunity to take advantage of local seasonal conditions. Not all individuals tried to take advantage of an early spring. Some individual pairs of geese, cranes, robins, ducks, turkeys, etc. nested early while others waited until the more normal nesting period. Not surprisingly, there are nearly grown broods of geese, ducks, and cranes as well as some pairs with hatchlings, and some still on nests.

Whether the outcome of breeding early in the season will outweigh the costs has yet to be determined. If there is a survival and reproductive advantage for those species that breed as early as conditions allow, species that can take advantage of those conditions will be much more successful than will those that rely on day length for their migration sequence. Unusual weather patterns appear to be becoming more common. Whether these unusual weather patterns are due to climate change or other factors has yet to be established. Bottom line is that year-round residents will be better able to take advantage of seasonal changes in weather than will species that migrate large distances.

A Canada goose leads a gaggle of goslings on the Fox River. A warm spring has caused some birds to hatch their young early, which could allow for a second hatching, or result in disaster for the young if there's a cold snap

No matter the 2012 weather, get out and enjoy the rebirth of nature. There are baby deer, foxes, cranes, goslings, ducklings, wild turkeys, and other wildlife to enjoy. White pelicans are using reservation restoration sites in much higher than usual numbers. Several pairs of bald eagles appear to have attempted to nest; trumpeter swans have been here all spring, even a whooping crane was on the reservation for several weeks. Ducks of a dozen or more species can be found here this year.

Community input sought in naming of structure, roads in Oneida

The Oneida Nation owns the following properties and, the Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input to name the following:

1. Oneida Residential Community Care Center – Building

The Oneida Residential Community Care Center is being built adjoining the Lee McLester, III Complex on South Overland Drive. Once ORCCC is completed, the residents at the Anna John Nursing Home will move into the new center. The Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input with the name of the building.

Original allottee:
Baptist King

2. Valley Green Housing Project – Roads

The Green Valley housing project on Florist Drive will be adding some tribal roads that will connect to Florist Drive, Valley Drive and Henry Street. The Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input with naming the potential roads.

Original allottees:
William Powless, Lewis Elm, Kate Elm & Peter Hill

3. Little Bear Development Center Conference Room

The Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input to approve the naming of the conference room in the Little Bear Development Center. Naming of a room is less formal than the naming of a road or building, so the Land Commission has been approached by the Planning Department to name the conference room The Ernest Stevens, Sr. Conference Room. If there are no strong objections received, the Commission will name the room by resolution.

Original allottee:
John Reid

All written recommendations will be submitted to the Division of Land Management. Tribal departments are encouraged to submit three names. Three recommendations will be presented to the Land Commission for final selection. The name selected will be translated into the Oneida Language through Land Commission resolution.

Submissions should include:

- Property to be named
- Location
- Recommended Name
- Reason
- Date
- Your Name or Department Name
- Tribal Enrollment number

Please submit recommendations in writing to:
Tina Hackett
Land Management Specialist

College of Menominee Nation Students Take Medals in Technical Competitions

Keshena, WI – A Gold Medal winner from SkillsUSA's Wisconsin competition is headed for the organization's national conference in June in Kansas City, Kansas. Mikah Moede, a student in the College of Menominee Nation technical education program, proved his carpentry skills were better than those of forty other students in the SkillsUSA building competition in Wisconsin Dells last April.

A member of the Stockbridge-Munsee tribe and resident of Gresham, Moede not only won the First Place medal and $500-worth of power tools. He was also praised by one judge who commented that if he were hiring, Moede was the one he would hire to build his house.

Among the more than 1,700 Wisconsin students participating with Moede in SkillsUSA competitions this spring were five other College of Menominee Nation students, including two more medal winners:

- Christa Lyons and Everlee Duquain, office technology program students at CMN, won silver and bronze medals, respectively, in the prepared speech event. Both are Menominee and live in Keshena.
- David Luethge, Pulaski, and Jason Komanekin, Keshena, participated in the residential wiring. Both are students in CMN's Sustainable Residential Building Program.
- Waylond Shawanokasic, Neopit, a student in the CMN Welding diploma program, competed in the SkillsUSA welding event, which was held at Northeast Wisconsin Technical College in Green Bay.

Along with individual recognition for students, CMN received a $100 gift certificate for being among the top five Wisconsin colleges in total membership in SkillsUSA, a national organization for technical education students.

CMN staff and faculty who worked with these students during the year included Antoinette Davids, local administrator and co-advisor, Electricity program; Craig Fox, Carpentry program advisor; Lynn Brodhagen, Prepared Speech advisor; Gerald Wayka, Residential Wiring advisor, and Harlan Pygman, Welding advisor. Fox, who is CMN's Trades Coordinator, Sustainable Residential Building, is Moede's instructor and will accompany him to the SkillsUSA nationals.

Legislative Operating Committee Update

Tribal Legislation—Our System of Written Law

As a sovereign nation, the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin is—and always has been—governed by its own system of law.

Our system of law has evolved and adapted throughout our history—it is constantly changing in order to meet the changing needs of our People. However, our system of law also represents permanence - it cements and reinforces the fundamental beliefs and tenets that the Oneida people have preserved and valued and passed down throughout the generations.

Today, the Tribe has a very large and diverse framework of legislation, which is used for various purposes—for example, to keep the governmental operations running smoothly; to protect and provide for the People; to govern the Tribal workplace and Tribal employees; to protect Tribal families and their relationships; to safeguard our lands and rebuild our land base; and to enable us to maintain successful government-to-government relationships with other jurisdictions.

Of course, our system of written law is far more than just a set of statutes. There are many different levels and types of Tribal legislation, ranging from the Tribal Constitution all the way down to the standard operating procedures that can direct how a Tribal department is run.

Oneida Tribal Constitution: Highest Law in the Land

The Oneida Tribe has been governed by a written Constitution since 1936. The Oneida Constitution was last amended in 1969, and represents the supreme law of the Tribe.

All other Tribal law, and all actions taken by the Tribal government, cannot violate or conflict with the Tribal Constitution, or with the rights guaranteed to Tribal members under the Constitution.

General Tribal Council: Governing Body

The General Tribal Council is the supreme governing body of the Oneida Tribe—this is clearly established in Article III, Section 1 of the Oneida Tribal Constitution.

Therefore, the GTC has the greatest authority and power of any body within the Tribe. If the GTC takes an action or passes a resolution, then that action or resolution is subject only to the Tribal Constitution.

Whenever there is a conflict between a law/policy adopted by the GTC and any other Tribal law or policy, the GTC law always supersedes the other.

GTC and the Oneida Business Committee

The GTC is made up of all Tribal members age 21 and older appearing at a duly-called GTC meeting. It is potentially every adult member of the Tribe, but today is generally around 1,500 members at each meeting.

Recognizing that it would be difficult for the GTC to meet, discuss and vote upon every single issue, and recognizing that sometimes important decisions needed to be made immediately; the GTC passed a Resolution in 1949 which delegated authority to what is now the OBC, to handle important business for the benefit and welfare of the Tribe.

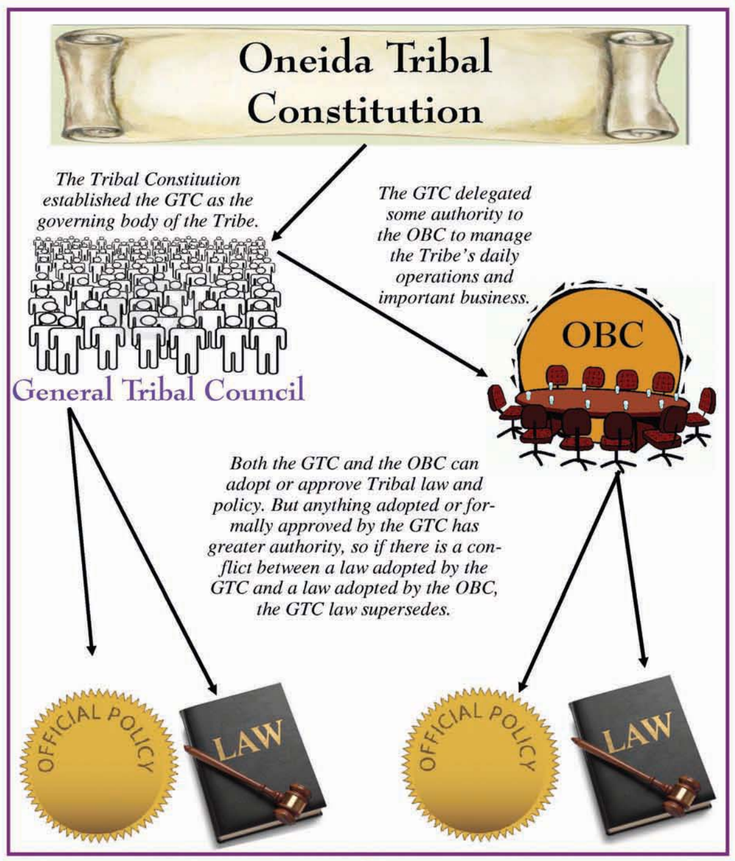
Through this delegated authority, the OBC manages the regular Tribal operations.

However, the authority of the OBC is subject to both the Tribal Constitution and to the GTC. The GTC can review any actions taken by the OBC, and can issue directives to the OBC—in other words, ordering the OBC to take certain actions or to implement or change specific policies. Otherwise, as long as the OBC's actions and resolutions do not conflict with the Tribal Constitution or a GTC action or resolution, then those OBC actions and resolutions have the next-greatest level of authority within the Tribe.

The GTC and the OBC operate in much the same way— formal action can only be taken at a duly called meeting where a minimum number of members, known as a quorum, are present. Usually, action is taken by majority vote—more than half of those who vote must vote in support of something for it to pass. (The only exception is that a 2/3 majority is currently needed to overturn prior GTC motions or resolutions.)

Sometimes, the GTC or OBC takes action by passing a motion—for example, the GTC could pass a motion directing the OBC to create and implement a specific policy—once that motion is passed, it would have the full force and effect of the law. Similarly, any motions approved by the OBC also have the full force of the law. However, motions alone do not create written laws.

Usually, whenever the GTC or OBC want to create, adopt, or change any sort of written law, that action is taken through a resolution.



Oneida Tribal Constitution
The Tribal Constitution established the GTC as the governing body of the Tribe.
The GTC delegated some authority to the OBC to manage the Tribe's daily operations and important business.
General Tribal Council
OBC
Both the GTC and the OBC can adopt or approve Tribal law and policy. But anything adopted or formally approved by the GTC has greater authority, so if there is a conflict between a law adopted by the GTC and a law adopted by the OBC, the GTC law supersedes.

GTC Resolutions

On February 20, 1949, the GTC passed its first resolution, granting the body now known as the OBC the authority to transact Tribal business. In1974, the GTC passed a second resolution, establishing the Trust Committee.

The GTC passed a third and a fourth resolution in 1975—calling for an overhaul of the Tribal Constitution, and prohibiting dual enrollment. The GTC passed four more resolutions in the 1970's and 13 in the 1980's.

From there, the GTC gained momentum, passing 54 Resolutions in the 1990's and 29 between 2000 and 2009.

The GTC passed five resolutions in 2010 and , and another four in 2011, bringing the total number of GTC-passed resolutions to around 113.

Generally, the GTC passes resolutions which address the Tribal budget, to enact or amend specific kinds of laws, or to issue specific directives to the OBC.

OBC Resolutions

The OBC passes far more resolutions than the GTC, because the OBC has more of the daily responsibility for managing Tribal operations.

Records show that the first OBC resolution was passed on February 12, 1938, authorizing an application for a loan from the Indian Credit Fund. A second resolution followed on July 7, 1939, setting out rules for Tribal elections. The OBC only passed five more resolutions in the 1940's, and one in the 1950's.

The OBC passed 81 resolutions in the 1960's and 390 in the 1970's. In the 1980's, the OBC passed 684 resolutions. In the 1990's, the OBC passed 1,918 resolutions; followed by 1,279 more resolutions between 2000 and 2009, and 233 in 2010 and 2011.

This means that, before the start of 2012, the grand total of OBC resolutions passed is somewhere around 4,348.

Caveat!
These numbers only count the resolutions found in a search of immediately available records in one database. There may be additional resolutions that have not yet been filed or stored with the others.

What is a Resolution?

Resolutions are the most common way that the GTC and OBC take formal action. A resolution generally states the reasons that an action needs to be taken, and then it makes a formal statement that takes the action. Unless a resolution expires or is later overturned or changed, then the actions directed by the resolution remain in effect with the authority of law.

Resolutions are not just used to approve new or amended laws and policies and to make them effective. They can be used to take many other kinds of formal action. For example, Resolutions are also used to:

- Approve or deny pardons of Tribal members.
- Request that the BIA put parcels of land into trust for the Tribe
- Authorize land leases.
- Authorize/establish benefits for members/employees
- Authorize grant requests or renew credit agreements.
- Adopt or amend the Tribal budget, or to authorize expenditures outside of the Tribal budget.
- Formally establish or change some aspect of governmental operations (For example, OBC #12-10-08-A establishes that the OBC will meet on the second and fourth Tuesday of every month).
- Create, change, or eliminate boards, committees and commissions.
- Amend corporate charters.
- Delegate authority or to rescind that delegated authority.
- Formally state the Tribe's position on an issue. (For example, OBC# 09-03-08-B shows support for a Resolution passed by the Great Lakes Inter-Tribal Council).
- Authorize limited waivers of sovereign immunity.

Tribal Laws and Policies

Currently, there are 53 Tribal laws that are on the books and in effect. There are also 32 formally adopted policies in effect.

As the list to the left shows, the Tribe has several different terms that all refer to Tribal "Laws" - including Ordinances, Codes, Laws, and Acts. There is no actual difference between the different terms—all of these are formal laws.

What are the differences between Tribal Laws and Tribal Policies?

For all intents and purposes, there are no real differences as far as authority—both go into effect after they have been approved by the OBC or GTC, and both have to be processed the same way whenever amendments are required. However, a look at the list to the right shows that policies generally apply to the Tribal workplace, while Tribal laws apply more to the entire membership. There are exceptions, such as the Computer Resources Ordinance-which applies to Tribal employees; and the Community Support Policy; which applies to the community; but for the most part, policies are intended for the Tribal workplace and laws to the general population.

After a Tribal law or policy is made, any or all of three kinds of supporting written rules could be

Standard Operating Procedures (SOPs) create a uniform process for how a Tribal department, division or other entity will perform some specific task.

Rules and Regulations create additional requirements that apply along with the law/policy.

Bylaws govern how Tribal Boards, Committees and Commissions operate.

There are many situations where rules and regulations are or should be created to accompany a law or policy. Rules and regulations usually just include greater detail about how the law/policy will be implemented, applied or enforced. There are three main reasons that rules and regulations are used:

1. Laws and policies are intended to set out broad, general requirements. If a law or policy included every single detail about how it would be implemented, applied, or enforced, then it would quickly become enormous and overly complicated.
2. Rules and regulations can be changed far more easily than an adopted law or policy. Some requirements may need to be changed occasionally (or regularly), so putting them into rules and regulations simplifies the process and helps to avoid frequent changes to laws and policies.
3. Often, the entity with the most responsibilities for administering a law or policy is in the best position to understand how the legislation works and when or what kind of changes are needed. Those decisions should be left to the entity to implement, by creating rules and regulations that support the main requirements established by the lawmakers.

Rules & Regulations

There are several examples of rules or regulations created to support a Tribal law or policy. Depending on the law/policy, those rules may need to be approved or adopted by the OBC, or the responsible entity may just be authorized to create the rules and implement them independently.

For example:

- Oneida Nation Gaming Ordinance (ONGO) section 20.6-14 (c) authorizes the Gaming Commission to draft and approve, regulations for the regulation of all gaming activity, including processes for enforcement. These rules must be reviewed and adopted by the OBC before they would go into effect.
- The Personnel Policies and Procedures (Sec. VII.A) authorizes Tribal enterprises and programs to establish internal rules to facilitate the administration of Tribal Personnel Policies and Procedures. Such internal rules don't require OBC approval but they must be filed with the Personnel Department.

Standard Operating Procedures

Each Tribal program, department, division, board, committee, commission or other entity can adopt standard operating procedures (SOPs). Generally, these are just internal rules that lay out how the entity will carry out its responsibilities—making sure that things are done the same way each time.

SOPs do not create new laws or policies—they just set out a uniform method by which an entity intends to apply, obey, or implement a Tribal law or policy that is already in place.

For example, the Oneida Real Property Law (adopted by the OBC), governs foreclosures on real estate bought with a Tribal loan. In accordance with that, the Land Commission adopted an SOP which provides Land Management employees a guide on to handle foreclosures as a team—the necessary steps to be taken, when they should be taken, and how they should be taken.

SOPs for a specific entity do not have to be approved by the OBC; they usually are just approved by the department head or chairperson of that entity.

SOPs are different from rules and regulations—rules and regulations are often implemented to expand upon the requirements of a law, so they apply to the general public. On the other hand, SOPs are primarily used only internally within the Tribal workplace and are only relevant to Tribal employees and officials.

- Social Media Policy
- Ten Day Notice Policy
- Travel and Expense Policy
- Trust Scholarship Fund Policy & Procedures
- Vehicle Driver Certification Policy

Bylaws

Tribal boards, committees and commissions are all governed by one specific Tribal policy called the Comprehensive Policy Governing Boards, Committees and Commissions. (However, each entity may also have authority or responsibilities set out in other Tribal laws or policies.)

The Comprehensive Policy requires all boards, committees and commissions to create bylaws—which must be approved by the OBC. Any changes to bylaws also have to be approved by the OBC.

Bylaws set out the membership size, the purpose of the entity, and establish official rules for running meetings.

Political ads stir health care horror

By Ricardo Alonso-Zalivar
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) ~ They're throwing granny off a cliff!

That's the not-so-subtle message Republicans and Democrats seem to be converging on for political ads on health care this year, featuring heavy doses of what each side alleges the other will do to wreck Medicare.

From President Barack Obama's overhaul law to GOP Rep. Paul Ryan's privatization plan for future Medicare recipients, there's something about health care legislation that makes it a breeding ground for wild allegations.

Families feel vulnerable to the catastrophic costs of serious illness, and few understand the labyrinth of private and government insurance, allowing partisans to fan their worst fears. Political pros play on health care worries to sway older voters.

"It is easy to deceive on the issue because the knowledge base of the electorate when it comes to the complexities of health care is relatively low," said Kathleen Hall Jamieson, an expert on political communication at the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg Center.

It would be hard to top Sarah Palin's now-debunked assertion that "death panels" lurked in the recesses of Obama's law, but don't be surprised if that happens.

"Many people believe crazy things about health care because they want to believe them," said Drew Altman, president of the nonpartisan Kaiser Family Foundation. Today's outlandish claims remind him of fears about fluoridated drinking water in the 1950s.

Sound far-fetched? It's already started.

Earlier this year, former Republican presidential candidate Rick Santorum lent credence to an unfounded rumor that the Obama administration would deny advanced treatment to stroke patients over the age of 70, allowing only comfort care. It didn't seem to matter that two doctors' groups and the Health and Human Services Department refuted the rumor.

And as for throwing granny off a cliff, two political ads are already depicting that - one from the left and one from the right. Both dramatizations are getting attention on the Internet.

The ad from the left, by The Agenda Project, features an actress playing an elderly woman in a wheelchair. Pushing her is a younger man acting the part of Ryan, R-Wis. "America the Beautiful" plays in the background.

But the outing to a scenic overlook turns scary when he steers for the edge. She tries to fight, but he dumps her over the cliff. The caption urges viewers to let Ryan know America wouldn't be beautiful without Medicare.

The ad from the right, by AmericanDoctors4Truth, shows an actor representing Obama pushing an elderly woman in a wheelchair off a cliff, after she demands a pacemaker recommended by her doctor.

The ad takes things to another level by using a snippet of Obama's voice. It comes from a rambling response the president gave in 2009 to a woman who wanted to know how his health plan might affect patients like her mother, who got a pacemaker at the age of 100 and enjoyed a good life.

A transcript of the town hall-style meeting shows that Obama didn't directly answer the question. At one point he suggests if there's waste involved it would be better to tell patients "you know what, maybe this isn't going to help, maybe you're better off not having the surgery, but taking the painkiller."

That snippet gets used in the ad. Later in his answer, Obama said maybe some patients should get a pacemaker faster, if that keeps them healthy. "I mean, this can cut both ways," he said. Those words aren't in the ad.

Jamieson, who directs a fact-checking project, says both ads are examples of "deceptive dramatization." Ryan's plan would not affect current Medicare beneficiaries. And the doctors' ad makes it sound as if Obama is gutting Medicare, when his law slows the program's future growth. Moreover, it's unrealistic to suggest that either party believes it can jettison older voters.

Erica Payne, a former Democratic Party fundraiser who founded the New York-based Agenda Project, said she stands by the Ryan ad. "It's dramatic, but it's accurate," said Payne, head of the public policy and advocacy group.

Ophthalmologist Jane Lindell Hughes, a founder of Texas-based AmericanDoctors4Truth, defended the Obama ad as a parody that responds to Payne's commercial. "It was absolutely a valid use of the president's voice," she said.

People targeted by health scare campaigns say the attacks can accomplish two things: turning an individual into a pariah and shutting down legitimate consideration of new ideas.

Pediatrician and health care expert Don Berwick, Obama's first Medicare chief, said he was never able to overcome the label of "rationer in chief" pinned on him by GOP critics, no matter how often he said he opposed rationing.

"When a myth gains traction ... it creates a terrain of silence," said Berwick. "A new kind of calculus is needed here, in which people believe engagement about the truth is wise."

Economist Douglas Holtz-Eakin was GOP presidential candidate John McCain's policy chief in 2008 when the campaign unveiled a plan for a health insurance tax credit financed by limits on the tax-free status of employer coverage. Although the idea had support from some prominent Democrats, and analysis showed it could work, it got pounded.

That "reflects a deeper truth," Holtz-Eakin said. "Health care is a big issue to the American people. If it's not ... you can't make hay of it in a political sense."

The woman who asked Obama about a pacemaker for her centenarian mother said she was dissatisfied both with the president's response and how his opponents are using it in their ad.

"It was just tit for tat," said Jane Sturm of Long Island, N.Y. "It's not using intelligent reasoning."

19,000 Traps to Catch Gypsy Moths in Wisc.

MADISON ~ Adult gypsy moths will soon emerge, and the small, bright green or red boxes tied onto trees will show us where they are in some parts of Wisconsin.

The boxes are traps to catch and monitor the invasive gypsy moth. Trappers from the Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection's Gypsy Moth Slow the Spread Program began setting traps in mid-May and will set approximately 19,000 traps total in 50 counties, mainly in western Wisconsin, by early July.

Traps are used as a method of population survey, not as a method of population control.

"Trapping tells us where the gypsy moths are and where they're not," said Chris Whitney, gypsy moth trapping coordinator. "It helps determine if an egg mass survey needs to be done in the fall to better evaluate the population and if an area may need an aerial treatment the following year."

The traps only catch male gypsy moths because they can fly and the females cannot. To find each other and reproduce, the females release a pheromone for the males to detect and follow. This pheromone is undetectable to other insects and is used as a lure in the traps.

"The unlucky male gypsy moths enter the traps and meet their end instead," Whitney said.

The traps will stay in place until the male moths stop flying in August.

"It's important to leave the traps up during moth flight to get the data we need. Then, when the moth flight ends, we'll take them down," Whitney said.

Two different traps are used for trapping: a triangular delta trap, which looks like a small tent, and a milk carton trap, which looks like a milk carton with a roof. A delta trap can hold up to 20 moths, and a milk carton trap can hold up to 1,500 moths.

If a trap needs to be set on private property and the owner is present, trappers will ask the owner for permission to set the trap on the property. Trappers will wear fluorescent vests and carry an identification card. If the owner is unavailable, trappers will set the trap, and leave an information sheet and a phone number to call for more information.

"Most landowners are very cooperative, and we appreciate that," Whitney said. "But, if a landowner wants a trap moved or removed, they can call the number listed on the trap and we can move the trap."

The gypsy moth in its caterpillar stage is known to feed on and defoliate more than 300 different species of trees and shrubs, especially oaks.

THE VOW TO HIRE HEROES ACT OF 2011

SPECIAL EMPLOYER INCENTIVES (SEI)

The Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) Vocational Rehabilitation and Employment program provides eligible Veterans an opportunity to obtain training and practical hands-on experience concurrently through the Special Employer Incentives (SEI) program. The SEI program is for eligible Veterans who face challenges in obtaining employment. VA is responsible for determining if a Veteran is eligible to participate.

Veterans approved to participate in the SEI program are hired by participating employers, and employment is expected to continue following successful completion of the program. VA facilitates the process by identifying suitable placements and coordinating efforts between all parties. As a result, the SEI program is beneficial for both Veterans and Employers.

EMPLOYERS WHO HIRE VETERANS RECEIVE:

- Reimbursement of up to 50 percent of the Veteran's salary during the SEI program, which typically lasts up to 6 months, to cover:
  - Expenses incurred for cost of instruction
  - Necessary loss of production due to training status
  - Supplies and equipment necessary to complete training
- VA-provided tools, equipment, uniforms and other supplies
- Appropriate accommodations based on individual needs of the Veteran
- The advantage of minimal paperwork to participate
- VA support during training and placement follow-up phase to assist with work or training-related needs

VETERANS WHO PARTICIPATE IN THE PROGRAM RECEIVE:

- Immediate income and benefits as an employee
- Increased chance of being hired as a result of employer incentives
- Valuable skills, learning in a practical setting that meets the employer's specification
- Opportunity for continued employment following successful completion of the SEI program
- One-on-one support from a VA Vocational Rehabilitation Counselor or Employment Coordinator to assist with training or work-related needs

Oneida Nation Celebrates National Employee Health & Fitness Day

On Wednesday, May 16, over 120 Oneida Nation employees participated in a nationally recognized health and fitness day by engaging in a minimum of 30 minutes of physical, mental, or spiritual activity.

Oneida Family Fitness extended a "free week" to all employees, as well as hosted a variety of fun, inter-active on-site and off-site activities. Together, Oneida Family Fitness, Oneida Comprehensive Health, Health Promotion/Disease Prevention, and Adventures Department provided a variety of free group fitness and aquatic activities, group walks, wall climbing, health screenings, and Just Move It Oneida Walk.

Kudos to Oneida Law and LRO offices for initiating their own departmental activity! Their staff planned a department walk behind Norbert Hill Center, shared healthy snacks, and distributed wellness information.

Employees that participated in 30 minutes of activity were eligible to win a raffle prize donated by Oneida Health Promotion/Disease Prevention and Oneida Family Fitness. Congratulations to all of you for dedicating time for yourself to improve your health and well-being.

We will continue each year to encourage and promote National Employee Health and Fitness Day for Oneida Employees!

Elm competes in track state sectional

West DePere junior Bryce Elm competed in the WIAA state sectional track meet held at Ashwaubenon High School on Thursday, May 24, 2012. Elm ran the 1600 (1 mile) meter event, finishing with a time of 4 minutes and 48 seconds. Having just missed making the state finals in his junior season, Elm will get one more chance to make the state finals next spring.

Oregon tribes disappointed in school mascot ban

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) _ Oregon's new ban on Native American mascots in public high schools means a charter school on tribal land may have to change its Warriors logo.

The new rules have drawn objections from two of the nine tribal groups in Oregon recognized by the federal government, including the Confederated Tribes of Siletz Indians.

The rules adopted by the State Board of Education allow the nickname "warriors," but not if it's accompanied by imagery such as the chief in the Siletz Warriors' logo, the Eugene Register-Guard reported Wednesday.

"We will be forced once again to succumb to the misguided intentions of people who have no knowledge of Indian communities," the Siletz tribes said in a statement.

Other Native Americans have objected to the mascots, including Brenda Frank, chairwoman of the body that made the rules, the state Board of Education, and also a member of the Klamath Tribes.

She said she understood objections from the tribes, but disagreed.

"With all due respect ... their responsibility is only to their membership and not to the community as a whole," Frank told The Oregonian. "The Oregon State Board of Education speaks for all students in the state of Oregon."

Schools that don't follow the ban could lose state money. Fifteen schools are affected. They face a 2017 deadline.

Federal law recognizes tribal sovereignty for tribal institutions on Indian land. But the state describes the Siletz schools as public, and all charter schools in Oregon get state aid, said Oregon Department of Education spokeswoman Christine Miles.

Principal and Superintendent Sam Tupou said that, despite disappointment, Siletz will comply with the state board's decision, hasn't decided on the future of the logo, but will follow widespread community support for maintaining the Warriors nickname.

"If there's anything good that came out of the ruling, it's that we get to keep the name," he said.

The Siletz and Grande Ronde tribal groups had backed an alternate proposal to allow tribes to work with local schools on their portrayal of Native culture.

Siobhan Taylor, a spokeswoman for the Confederated Tribes of Grande Ronde, said the board's decision "tramples our sovereignty" and ignores calls for curriculum changes that accurately describe Native American history in Oregon.

Twenty Years of Oneida Representation Observed

By Yvonne Kaquatosh
Kalihwisaks

Milwaukee, WI – SEOTS (Southeastern Oneida Tribal Services) observed 20 years of continued service to their members on Saturday, June 2, 2012.

It was a celebration to honor those who gave selflessly of their own time as volunteers to form a group back in the early 90's, which would serve as a resource for Oneida members who reside in the inner city of Milwaukee.

It's an important milestone for the organization because they have left an indelible imprint and continue to thrive in the community by engaging tribal members with a variety of activities throughout the week at the center is key to their success.

The cultural connection to the Oneida community remains intact as well with the bond becoming stronger with the passage of time.

There were a variety of booths set up at the event to showcase resources that are available to tribal members locally. A skit was provided by the language class for the enjoyment of those in attendance. Lil Miss Oneida, Lesette Hill-Waubanascum and Jr. Miss Oneida, Katy Bermke were also on hand to welcome guests.

Mark W. Powless, Director of SEOTS, provides a timeline of events that have taken place through the years and the significance of the organization.

Oneida residents may be excused for thinking they're witnessing a scene from the Dr. Seuss book The Lorax as trees are being felled where the new Highway 54 Bridge over Duck Creek is being built. Project Manager Chad Wilson assures the community the trees will be coming back.

"It's hard to envision the end product right now, but we do have a plan and agreements in place to replant trees, replant shrubs, get all the of that into place," he said.

Initially, the Wisconsin Department of Transportation (WisDOT) had planned to put in a temporary bridge and replace the current steel bridge with a four lane steel one. Oneida's Community Sustainable Design

From 1A/Highway 54: Old bridge for walkers

Team requested a change of plans.

"If you're going to disturb the habitat, could you create a new bridge?" said Wilson.

The new bridge will be wider than the old bridge. The WisDOT will also add another road to enter and exit Site I near the Enrollments Department.

"With the highway shifted north it's going to give more safety to that library and enrollment area for Site I," said Wilson.

The new bridge and retaining walls will incorporate Oneida symbols and art such as images of the Three Sisters and an iconic depiction of Sky Woman falling to earth. The artwork was created by local Oneida artists.

"It will create a unique sense of place," he said.

Wilson stated that the replacement trees will be culturally significant as will be the medicinal plantings in the new green spaces.

The old steel bridge will be repaired, repainted and will remain for pedestrians. The plan is to have a path system that will allow children to walk safely throughout the reservation.

"The kids don't have to walk the highways to go up and get a Popsicle at the One Stop or walk around the highway to get to school," said Wilson. The paths are funded by a Bureau of Indian Affairs Indian Reservation Road Funds grant.

With the addition of the new access road off Service Road, Site I will lose a ball diamond. However, there are plans to build a new community events center near the Oneida Nation Elementary School on Seminary Road.

"What we have planned for there is two regulation baseball diamonds, and then a multipurpose field which will be lacrosse regulation. It will be the only one in the state," said Wilson. The center will also have a concession stand, bathrooms and showers.

Wilson stated that the WisDOT was a great working partner in the highway project.

"The DOT bent over backwards to work with us. They listened to our concerns and they redesigned to fit the needs of our community," he said.

Wilson also thanked the community for participating in surveys and giving input.

"They actually shaped the project. They told us what they wanted, how they wanted it," he said. "All those entities were really glad we had so much community feedback … it made their jobs easier for the support to make those decisions."

Hinton celebrates 102nd birthday

Family and friends gathered at the Radisson Hotel and Conference Center to celebrate Maria Hinton's (front center) 102nd birthday on Tuesday, June 5, 2012.

Born on June 5, 1910, Hinton has been a teacher to generations of Oneida learners, teaching the importance of learning the Oneida language.

Hinton's voice can be heard on the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay's Oneida language dictionary featured on the university website (www.uwgb.edu/oneida/index.html). The database is searchable with English words.

Oneida One Stop –Westwind

The Remodeling Zone

Oneida One-Stop Westwind has served Oneida and supporting communities well over the past 22 years. The are undergoing some major transformations and plan to reopen in July. Many of the changes are required to meet state regulations that have changed since the stores opening. However; the attractive store front will be an exciting addition for the Oneida Business.

The new store will offer 12 pumping bays with much of the same product it enjoyed prior to the renovation, continued Subway offering, and dramatic instore changes are in order. Some things to look forward to inside the store are walk-in coolers, new coffee/fountain drink area, and an eye appealing counter with 4 registers that will have the ability to move customers in and out quickly. Oneida Retail takes pride in employing only Oneida Tribal members who are the backbone of the Enterprise and are pivotal in their success found in the profitable numbers.

Oneida Retail continues to be available to serve the consumer at:

- Oneida One-Stop on Packerland, 3120 S. Packerland Dr., open 24 hrs

NY offers $3M to settle Onondaga protesters' suit

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) ~ New York State has agreed to pay nearly $3 million to scores of people beaten, arrested or chased away by state police during a protest on the Onondaga Indian Nation 15 years ago, the attorney for dozens of the plaintiffs said.

Terrance Hoffmann told the Post-Standard of Syracuse in a story published Sunday that the state and another lawyer representing others in the lawsuit have agreed to settle the case for just under $3 million. Hoffmann represents about half of the 98 people involved.

The settlement won't be final until all plaintiffs sign it, Hoffmann said.

State officials wouldn't comment on the settlement. The state would admit no wrongdoing, Hoffmann said.

Troopers and more than 100 protesters, mostly American Indians, clashed on May 18, 1997, on Onondaga land just south of Syracuse. The lawsuit accused troopers of using excessive force in breaking up a peaceful protest.

The protest was held not long after confrontations between state police and Seneca Indians on one of the tribe's western New York reservations south of Buffalo. Seneca demonstrators had shut down the New York Thruway where it passes through reservation land to protest the state's efforts to get Indian tribes to pay taxes on products sold to non-Indians at reservation businesses.

The Syracuse-area protest was held along Interstate 81 where it passes through the Onondaga Nation territory. State police officials have said the troopers broke up the demonstration out of concern for the public's safety.

Under the settlement, payments would range from $8,000 for protesters who were chased away by police to $200,000 to two men who were beaten by baton-wielding troopers, Hoffmann said.

In Loving Memory

In Loving Memory of

Delores 'Honey' Hill

Who passed on 3 years ago, May 30th

The love you showed, the hands you hold,
Memories you made, a mother carrying all of the weight,
Keeping your family tight, hoping that they never fight,
Teaching them when they were young to always do what was right,
Wonder woman in my eyes, just a woman to others,
I knew that you stood for, you made me strong when others expected me to be weak,
Sweet mother of mine, why did you have to leave,
You are my hero, taught me all I know,
I can still feel you in my heart, hear you in my thoughts,
I could come to you with anything,
I miss all the time we shared, the stories you told,
Why did you have to go…
Remembering your actions, what you stood for,
What you fought for,
You fought for me, as I fought for you,
The dreams you fought to save,
that feeling I got when looking into your eyes,
the respect I gave you, the love I shared,
but with all that said and done, it is now my turn to finish what you started…

Honoring of Community Leadership

By Melissa McGee
Diabetes Community Health Nurse at the Urban American Indian Health Service of Chicago

The AISHC would like to congratulate and give honor to one of our elder's in the community.

Mrs. Antoinette Whitaker recently received awards that were presented to her from the Medical Shield, American Indian Association of Illinois.

On April 28th, 2012 Mrs. Whitaker was presented with two awards, one was the Academic Leadership Award for Recognition of Exceptional Accomplishments and the second was the Native American Woman of the Year Award for Perseverance and Service.

Mrs. Whitaker is a member of the Oneida Tribe of the Oneida Reservation in Wisconsin.

Mrs. Whitaker will become a senior Graduate student next spring, she is majoring in a Bachelor of General Studies.

Mrs. Whitaker has a history of serving her community, she is a former member of the American Indian Health of Chicago Committee, and at one time she worked in the social service department of the American Indian Center.

Antoinette Whitaker

We honor Mrs. Whitaker, for her leadership, mentorship, and professionalism.

Mrs. Whitaker is an outstanding role model, for all American Indian women, who are fulfilling their traditional roles as leaders in their communities.

Movie Review

Crooked Arrows hits the underdog highlights

Looking for an underdog sports story in the vein of the Mighty Ducks? Welcome, duck fans. Looking for a movie featuring lacrosse? Look no further. Seriously, there aren't any besides this one. Interested in Native American culture and history? Plenty to be had here. Fascinated by the complex issues concerning Native American sovereignty, poverty, language loss, Indian gaming and the real life conflict of interest it causes the tribe depicted in the movie? Don't worry - we'll breeze right past that part.

Crooked Arrows tells the story of Joe Logan, played by Brandon Routh, a citizen of the fictional Senequoit Tribe in New York State who manages the nation's small casino. A developer wants to expand the business, and needs Logan to persuade the tribal council. The council will consider the expansion if Logan will coach the struggling high school lacrosse team as well as reexamine his own spirituality.

The movie does best when it focuses on lacrosse, both playing it and the history and spiritual side of the game. The cast of mostly first time actors portraying the Crooked Arrows team are engaging on and off the field. Tyler Hill (Mohawk) does most of the heavy lifting as team captain Silverfoot, but Cree Cathers (Mohawk) steals the show as the comical Chewy.

The film struggles to shoehorn the other conflicts such as the obligatory greedy business man or the misappropriation of Native American symbolism to turn a buck. The deeper conflicts hinted at can't find a footing in this breezy sports film. However, if you're looking for a fun flick to watch with the family, Crooked Arrows scores the goal.

Crooked Arrows is now playing at the Appleton East Marcus Theater with showtimes at 3:25pm, 6:25pm, 9:00pm.

Letters & Opinions...

Respecting the Past

Oneida Business Committee, Community Development Planning Department, Environment Department, Land Office and the Tribal Judicial System have NO respect for the laws. The road that is going into Site One was suppose to have an easement approved by the BIA. Well it wasn't and they moved forward. This is not the Department of Transportation's fault, nor is this the fault of the Land Commission that was told that everything was approved and ready to go. They have NO respect for the Episcopal Diocese who gave this 10 acre parcel of land to the Oneida Tribe, back in the 60's for the sole purpose of a BALL DIAMOND. NOT A ROAD, NOT A TRAIL, A BALL DIAMOND. NEITHER do they give respect for those Ball Players of the past era and those of this era, who played their heart out; the Kings, the Danforths, the Metoxens, the Doxtators, the Websters and Wheelocks, and for that reason was awarded by the Episcopal Diocese the ten acres of land. They have NO respect for the men that worked so extremely hard to make the BALL DIAMOND what it is today, only to have someone tear it up because they want something when they want it and where they want it. A Temporary Restraining Order/Injunction was formally requested from the Oneida Tribal Judicial System, only to be told that there was no merit for the request. As to the above documentation THERE IS NO MERIT? The Hearing Officers were one that was closely related to one whom was the Aunt of the Director of the Environmental Department. Another was the father of a person that sits on the Oneida Business Committee and also the Community Development Committee. Do we need a JUDICIAL SYSTEM? YES an UPRIGHT and HONEST one. OH what a tangled web we weave when the Oneida General Council Community we try to deceive. As God is my witness this scenario is true and factual.

I may need an operation on my head, but I know of a lot more of our Community Leaders that need it more then I do.

Respectfully Submitted,
Shirley Hill

CenturyLink offers telephone assistance to individuals living on Tribal Lands

Low-income consumers may qualify for assistance that will reduce the cost of basic monthly telephone service. The assistance program, known as Lifeline Affordable Telephone Assistance, is available to qualifying consumers in every U.S. state (territory and commonwealth). Qualifications for participation vary by state. In states that follow the federal guidelines, the subscriber must have a household annual gross income at or below 135% of the Federal Poverty Guidelines for a household of that size; or participate in any one of the following programs: Medicaid, Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (Food Stamps), Supplemental Security Income (SSI), Federal Public Housing Assistance (Section 8), Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP), National School Lunch Program's Free Lunch Program, or Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF).

Residents of American Indian and Alaskan Native tribal lands may qualify for up to an additional $25 of enhanced Lifeline support monthly and a credit of up to $100 on their initial installation charges. An individual living on tribal lands may qualify for Lifeline and Link-Up discounts if he or she participates in one of the programs listed above, the Bureau of Indian Affairs General Assistance, Tribally Administered Temporary Assistance to Needy Families, or Head Start (only for those households meeting its income qualifying standard).

Lifeline eligible subscribers may also qualify for reliable home high-speed Internet service up to 1.5Mbps for $9.95* per month for the first 12 months of service. Further details are available at centurylink.com/internetbasics

If you live in a CenturyLink service area, please call 1-800-201-4099 or visit centurylink.com/lifeline with questions or to request an application for the Lifeline program.

*CenturyLink Internet Basics Program – Residential customers only who qualify based on meeting income level or program participation eligibility requirements, and requires remaining eligible for the entire offer period. First bill will include charges for the first full month of service billed in advance, prorated charges for service from the date of installation to bill date, and one-time charges and fees described above. Qualifying customers may keep this program for a maximum of 60 months after service activation provided customer still qualifies during that time. Listed High-Speed Internet rate of $9.95/mo. applies for first 12 months of service (after which the rate reverts to $14.95/mo. for the next 48 months of service), and requires a 12-month term agreement. Customer must either lease a modem/router from CenturyLink for an additional monthly charge or purchase a modem/router from CenturyLink for a one-time charge, and a one-time High-Speed Internet activation fee applies. A one-time professional installation charge (if selected by customer) and a one-time shipping and handling fee applies to customer's modem/router. General – Services not available everywhere. CenturyLink may change or cancel services or substitute similar services at its sole discretion without notice. Offer, plans, and stated rates are subject to change and may vary by service area. # Tribe makes changes to contractor policy

Contracts between employee-owned companies and tribe now banned

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

Action taken by the Oneida Business Committee (OBC) amending the tribe's current Independent Contractor Policy may harm the bottom line of some small businesses owned by tribal members.

During an April meeting the OBC took emergency action that no employee or employee-owned business can be hired as an independent contractor. The ban also applies members of boards, committees, and commissions.

According to Paul Ninham, OBC Councilmember, action was taken to protect the tribe.

"The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) has identified a concern regarding this type of employee-contractor relationship. And, based on discussions with the Tribal government liaison in the IRS, this concern is growing," said Ninham. "Rather than risk tax liabilities and limited Tribal funds, it is my opinion that we should protect the Tribe from this risk and seek clarification."

A fix may take some time but clarification is needed by the OBC before action can be taken.

"I believe our legal staff has worked diligently to find solutions regarding this area of the law and helping us to understand what the risks are and how we can avoid them," said Ninham. "Once we get the IRS ruling, we can revamp the Independent Contractor Policy or omit it, whichever is more appropriate to better reflect our goals to build a strong economy and reduce all risks to the Tribe and its employees."

For Dennis King, owner of D. King of Images and Drop Count Supervisor at the casino, mixed signals have confused him.

"Plain and simple, I feel it's not fair to me. Last year I was getting great support from the Tribe because I was a native-owned business on the vendors list so whenever they need a photographer I would get the call to place a bid. Now, with this new policy, I won't even get a chance to bid on projects because I work for the tribe as well," said King.

"It feels like I was climbing the ladder to success with the support I was getting from the Tribe and now I come to find out they will no longer support me because of my job with the Tribe. To me, I feel like I'm being discriminated against because of my job."

Ninham says the OBC is asking for patience from business owners as they wait for answers.

"We have asked the Law Office to be as quick as possible to find those answers for us. I have also asked the Law Office to find a solution that allows us to provide the broadest opportunities for contracting for member owned businesses that do not jeopardize tribal assets," Ninham said.

King feels this updated policy will financially hurt him and other small businesses.

"(Getting) future clients (will be harder) based on the fact that I will not have my portfolio of my work I have done for the tribe. Ninety percent of my work is word-of-mouth or visual. People see my work and ask who created it and now I won't have this going for me," he said.

Current contracts between tribal members or their businesses and the tribe will be allowed to expire.

"The Tribe has entered into valid contracts and will allow them to be completed. However, until we have a clear answer on this question of employee-contractors I continue to be of the opinion that we should not jeopardize tribal funds or create problems for members who are employee-contractors," said Ninham.

As for King, he has taken the news in stride and plans on keeping the positive momentum his company has gained.

"I am blessed that I get to share my gift with those that had the faith in my abilities and I will continue to keep reaching forward with or without the support from my Tribe due to this new policy," he said.

Congrats, Graduates! Now start saving for retirement

Nearly two million Americans will graduate from college with an undergraduate degree this year, and most of them will enter the workforce rather than continue on to a graduate degree. As these twenty-somethings begin earning wages from "real jobs" for the first time, many overlook the need to start saving for retirement. However, saving early is more important than ever. With pension plans becoming increasingly rare and Americans living an average 22 years longer than they did when Social Security was created in 1937, today's youngest members of the workforce are largely responsible for their own retirement income.

Here's a quick overview of the most common investment accounts used to save for retirement:

IRA - If your employer doesn't offer a company retirement plan (or if you're currently under- or unemployed), start your own nest egg by opening an Individual Retirement Account (IRA). These accounts provide tax advantages that a regular savings account does not. The maximum contribution to an IRA is $5,000 per year if you're under age 50. The money in IRAs is invested by the company managing the account and it is also easier to withdraw from than a 401(k). However, there are still several fees and penalties associated with early withdrawal.

401(k) - This type of retirement savings account is directed by employers and contributions are deducted from paychecks, before taxes. The account is then taxed when a withdrawal is made. The current maximum annual contribution to a 401(k) plan is $17,000. Also, many employer plans include a matching contribution, which is money that the employer will contribute to the account in addition to the employee's contributions. For example, if the company you work for has a program where they will match 50 percent of your contribution up to 3 percent of your paycheck, if you contribute the full 3 percent, you'll receive an additional 1.5 percent from your employer. That's free money for your retirement!

Roth vs Traditional - There are two types of both IRAs and 401(k) plans, Roth and Traditional. The basic difference is when the contributor pays taxes on the account. With a traditional retirement account the taxes are paid when the money is withdrawn. With a Roth account the taxes are paid when the money is added to the account. Roth accounts are especially valuable to young workers, as they are more likely to climb into higher tax brackets as they age, meaning they would owe more in taxes on the same amount of money later in life.

Notice that keeping cash under your mattress isn't on this list. Money that isn't invested or placed in a bank account earns no returns or interest. Make your hard-earned money work for you by investing in an IRA or 401(k) or depositing it into an interest-earning savings account.

If you have questions about how to get started saving for your retirement, ask your employer's Human Resources personnel or talk to Bay Bank, your local banker. Call 920-490-7600

Treasurer's Report

By Cristina Danforth
Oneida Tribal Treasurer

Sheku, Greetings

The First American Capital Corporations Procurement Technical Assistance Centers (FACCPTAC) or PTAC is an area supported by government grant money with a match by the Oneida Tribe. Currently, PTAC is located within the Skenandoah Complex. The purpose of PTAC is to assist Tribal business owners business with contacts, networking opportunities, training, technical assistance, and resources so our tribally owned businesses can grow and possibly be awarded government contracts. The businesses currently enrolled with PTAC are Green Bay Foot Designs, Oneida Printing, Jordan Trucking, Go-Green Painting, Northeast Construction, Landscaping, Jeta Corp, Big Horn Trucking, Arrow Trucking, Handaid, Arrow Maintenance, Pro Electric, Standing Stone Architecture, and DAT Inc., to name a few.

This past Christmas season, Leida Wesolaski was spotted at Wal-Mart with two shopping carts full of toys and games. A curious Tribal member stopped her and inquired about the amount of gifts she had in her cart. Leida explained that she knew from personal experience how hard it was to be a single parent, especially at Christmas, and not being able to have enough gifts under the tree for her children. She went on to explain the struggles she experienced and how hard it was for her to know her children had to go without because she just could not afford all the things they needed. A few years ago, Leida teamed up with Bart Cornelius and the two of them formed Big Horn Trucking. Their goal was simple, to be successful. They started with one low limit personal credit card and used every dollar they made to support their business. With some help from their friends, PTAC included, they were able to grow a very successful business from a very humble beginning. All the games and toys in her carts, Leida explained, were not for her children but for charity. She and Bart wanted to give back to the community that gave them a new start and the tools to grow their business into a prosperous venture. This is a very touching story and one we can all be proud of.

Big Horn Trucking has been recognized as one of the top ten Disadvantaged Business Enterprises (DBE) of 2012 in Wisconsin. As one of DBE's most noted businesses we are sure that PTAC is on the right track. Our Tribal members are working hard to become accomplished entrepreneurs and sometimes we overlook the struggles they face. While every story cannot be as encouraging as Big Horn Trucking, all of our Tribal business owners do have resources they can rely on to assist them in their journey toward success. Unfortunately the Tribe no longer has a small business fund to provide start-up monies but a small business loan program is available through Bay Bank. I encourage all Tribal members who are considering starting a business or currently have a start-up business to contact PTAC and discover what opportunities are available.

Sometimes we have to start from humble beginnings to remember where we came from and realize how much we have grown. Big Horn Trucking's story is very inspirational and gives us hope that each Tribal member with a dream of owning a business can also become successful. Congratulations Big Horn Trucking and I wish you many more years of continued success.

As a previous small business owner myself, I realize the struggles people face and would like to do my part in supporting our local businesses. If you would like to share your story with me, please contact my office.

Shekoli,

Graduation of Seniors

I want to congratulate all the Oneida seniors who graduated this past weekend or will graduate in the near future. I attended the Oneida High School and West De Pere ceremonies this past weekend and want to thank all who were involved in making this happen.

These individuals should be proud of not only their heritage, but of all they have accomplished in the past 13 years of attending school, from Kindergarten to 12th Grade. They are to be commended for achieving another step in their quest for education and hope they continue on in higher education, whether it is in a community college, technical setting or four year college.

I also want to congratulate the parents of these individuals. Without your help through these past 13 years, your children would not be where they are today. It is hard work raising not only school age children, but teenagers as well. Everyone should be proud of what has been accomplished here and hope their future endeavors are just as successful. As for you, enjoy the summer.

ORCC

Everyone can see this project is moving along at a rapid pace and there is no doubt when one looks at this building that it is going to be spectacular. I wanted to update you, not on the progress of the building, but in figures that are related to the 36 Indian Preference workers working throughout this project. To date, there has been a total of 7,982 hours Indian Preference workers have worked on this project and the total wages these workers have received is $353,857.00.

On another note, we are still proceeding through the process of renaming this facility to the Anna John Residential Community Care Center. This has been sent to the Land Commission and they have followed through with the process of renaming buildings on the reservation. Recommendations are due back to the Division of Land Management by June 8th and should be on the Land Commission's agenda for their meeting on June 11th at 5:00 p.m. at the Division of Land Management office.

Larsen Road

The design for this project is in its final stages. The Tribe and the vendor are finishing up both the interior and exterior drawings and specification for this project and in the next few weeks they should be complete. At that time construction should begin and everyone will start to see the starting element of a new One Stop. This project is projected to be finished by late November or early December.

Also the West Wind One Stop is still closed for remodeling and should be finished by late July . Progress on this project is moving along nicely. Please continue to utilize one of the other One Stops available.

Sole Source

At the last Business Committee meeting the subject of Sole Source was debated. The Committee took action to rescind a previous BC Resolution, 11-24-10-C, which mandated using Oneida vendors to complete work or services for Tribal entities if they were the only vendor providing that type of work or service. In theory, this sounded like a good thing, to get our Oneida vendors some of the work being done throughout the Tribe and/or providing services.

However, in the past year and a half, it has shown this resolution has been a detriment to the Tribe, in that the bid process did not have to be followed. The Purchasing Department found several instances wherein the service provided was actually higher in cost than from a non-tribal vendor, however, due to the BC Resolution being enacted, the entity requesting the service was required to use the Oneida vendor. This was a downfall of the resolution.

On May 23rd this resolution was rescinded and effective immediately the Purchasing Department's three bid process will be reinstated for all tribal purchases over the $1,000 dollar limit. Bids will be competitive in nature and more appropriate to the cost of services being provided. Vendors, Oneida and non-tribal, will compete for tribal dollars to complete a project or provide a service and the Tribe will benefit from the bids being presented are at reasonably expected levels, essentially, no price gouging.

Trans Program

Congratulations to the individuals who recently completed this lengthy program sponsored by the College of Menominee Nation and we wish them the best of luck in finding employment in this field of work. The commitment these individuals made through classroom and on-the-job training will prepare them for the ethics of finding and keeping employment.

Native Nations Institute

On May 15th and 16th I attended a seminar on Governance Analysis for Native Nations. Throughout these two days the individuals in attendance focused on some key factors in sustainable economic development as well as strengthening indigenous governance. What is and what is not working within our government and how can it be fixed. How comprehensive a change do we need to make, a top-to-bottom overhaul, some fine tuning of our system, or something in between.

Some of these included strengthening our direction, where are we going? Self-Determination, who's in charge? Governing tools through a capable tribal administration and supporting tribally owned enterprises, what currently exists and whether we are capable of supporting these things.

Menomonee Valley Tour

Several weeks ago I had to opportunity to do a day visit to the Menominee Valley Development Project in Milwaukee. We were there to see how it has changed from an area that was uninhabitable due to the type of businesses located there years ago, such as stockyards and rail yards, to the vibrant beautiful economic area it is today. A large part of this success was because a business from Spain decided to build in this area over 30 other cities in the United States. Within a short distance from this area are walking and biking trails. The river that ran through this area was an environmental mess, but has been cleaned up to where companies can now move this area and build their new or relocated businesses.

SEOTS

This past weekend also marked the 20th Anniversary of the Southeastern Oneida Tribal Services operation in Milwaukee. We want to acknowledge Mark Powless and his office staff for all the work they have done to make this a better place for Oneidas in the Milwaukee Area.

A big thank you also to the SEOTS Advisory Board for their input and continued work they have done in providing guidance to this office.

Conclusion

Again I want to thank you, the general membership, for taking the time to read these articles and as always I am available to meet with you, should you so desire. I can be reached at 869-4482 or you can e-mail me at djordan1@oneidanation.org.

Oneida Nation Child Support Agency

Shakoti?nukú·lale? Latiksashúha?

Topic: Starting Child Support Services FAQ's

Question: Why is my child support case with Oneida and not in the county?

If you are receiving public assistance benefits through the tribe's Center for Self-Sufficiency, Oneida Health Center or local county economic support agency, the referral is automatically sent to us as the tribe has jurisdiction.

Question: How do I start receiving child support?

A parent or caretaker can apply for services with the agency by phoning for an application or accessing it on our website at: http://www.oneidanation.org/uploadedFiles/Departments/Social_Services/Child_Support/Application%20for%20Services(2).pdf

Question: My case is currently in another county in Wisconsin. Can I have it transferred to Oneida?

Yes, cases can be transferred from another county if the parties in the case meet the jurisdictional laws to have the case with Oneida Child Support. Contact the agency to discuss the transfer process.

Question: What happens after the referral or application? How long will it take to start seeing child support payments?

After a referral or application for services is sent, the case will be delegated to the appropriate case manager in one of our four stratified areas: paternity, enforcement, interstate, or sub-care case management. A case manager will then contact you to follow up with the referral or application. The time from referral or application to the start of child support payments can be somewhere between two-three months. If you receive any certified mail, be sure to pick it up right away to avoid any delay in the child support process.

Upcoming Events and Updates:
• See us at Oneida Community Fest from Noon-3:00pm for information and questions.
• The start of the Outagamie County transfer process was initiated in May 2012. Call 920-490-3700 and ask for Michelle with any questions regarding the transfer.
• Please keep address and contact information current with the agency in order to avoid any delay in the transfer.

Report: US archdiocese paid priests to leave ministry

MILWAUKEE (AP) – The Archdiocese of Milwaukee confirmed that it had a policy to pay suspected pedophile priests to leave the ministry.

The acknowledgement was prompted by a document made public by abuse victims' advocates from the archdiocese's bankruptcy that references a 2003 proposal to pay $20,000 to "unassignable priests" who accepted a return to the laity. The policy was crafted under then-Archbishop Timothy Dolan, who is now a cardinal and head of the archdiocese in New York.

The Survivors Network of Those Abused by Priests characterizes the payments as a payoff and bonuses to priests who molested children. The archdiocese disputes that characterization, saying the payments were in part to more quickly move those men out of the priesthood.

The group is calling on the archdiocese to release all records involving the payments and its handling of clergy sex abuse cases.

"You don't give a bonus to a man who rapes children," the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel quoted SNAP Midwest director Peter Isely as saying Wednesday outside the federal courthouse in Milwaukee. "If they paid them anything it should have been for therapy and counseling."

According to the Journal Sentinel, the 2003 bankruptcy document appears to be the first public acknowledgement of a formal policy to pay trouble priests to leave.

Disputing that, archdiocese spokeswoman Julie Wolf told The Associated Press late Wednesday that both the payments and the policy regarding them had long been acknowledged by the archdiocese.

"It's not new news," she said.

"SNAP sounds like they're saying these were kind of payoffs to priests who had substantial allegations against them," Wolf added. She said the payments were to help the men transition to lay life without completely losing access to needs such as health care.

The Journal Sentinel article noted that Dolan used similar language in 2006 when he defended a payment to one former priest. A phone message seeking comment from the Archdiocese of New York late Wednesday was not returned.

Wolf also called the payments "a cost-savings for the archdiocese" because the process to involuntarily remove a priest is lengthy and involves Vatican approval.

The bankruptcy document highlighted by SNAP references a meeting of the archdiocese's Finance Council in 2003 that included Dolan, who was then archbishop in Milwaukee.

According to the document, members discussed offering "unassignable priests" $20,000 to accept the process known as laicization.

UW regents take up proposed tuition hike Thursday

MADISON, WI (AP) – It would cost Wisconsin residents more than $10,000 a year in tuition and fees to attend the University of Wisconsin-Madison if a recommended 5.5 percent tuition increase is approved.

The university's Board of Regents is scheduled to take up the proposed increase Thursday.

It's the sixth straight year that University of Wisconsin System President Kevin Reilly has recommended a 5.5 percent tuition hike for in-state students attending any of the system's 13 four-year campuses, the Wisconsin State Journal reported (http://bit.ly/MteS64). It's the most he can ask for under a legislative cap in the current budget.

``These are challenging times for our colleges and universities, as well as for our students and families," Reilly said in a statement. ``With that in mind, we've recommended a modest, predictable tuition increase that provides some additional revenue for our campuses."

Funding to the UW system was cut by $250 million over two years in the 2011-13 budget. The system also is returning a total of $65.7 million in state funding from 2011-2013 to cover budget deficits.

If approved, Wisconsin residents would pay an extra $431 at UW-Madison, bringing tuition and fees to $10,379 per year. Tuition for out-of-state students would go up the same amount _ meaning it would cost a non-resident $26,096 to attend the Madison campus.

Rep. Steve Nass, R-Whitewater, chairman of the Assembly Colleges and Universities Committee, said he wants to extend the 5.5 percent tuition cap for two more academic years.

From 1A/SEOTS Milestone observed

Milwaukee SEOTS reaches milestone with Twenty Year Anniversary

By Mark W. Powless
SEOTS Director

In January of 1992 a group of volunteer Oneida Tribal members, residing in southeast Wisconsin, officially organized as the Oneida Indian Council of Southeastern Wisconsin. The original Board members, elected by the general membership, were Chairperson Alberta Metoxen, Vice-Chair Madelyn Genskow, Secretary Fred Muscavitch, and Treasurer Roy Huff. Additional members included Kim Reyes, Jim Cooper, James Zakhar, and Ester Olszewski. The budget for their first year of operation was $21,000.

The Oneida Indian Council focused on improving conditions for elderly and youth as well as act as a referral source for Oneida services. They also coordinated events such as Bingo trips for the elderly, graduation banquets, and a learning center. Ultimately, the volunteer work of the council placed a full-time staff person in a suite rented on Milwaukee's Mitchell Street and established official Oneida Tribal representation in Milwaukee.

The actions of the Oneida Indian Council sprouted and grew into Southeastern Oneida Tribal Services (SEOTS). Today, SEOTS focuses on improving the well-being of our elderly and youth, connects Tribal members to Oneida and Milwaukee-area services, offers cultural education, and coordinates community gatherings. SEOTS currently leases a 7,000 square foot facility to provide Tribal community offerings. Two full-time staff and two part-time staff coordinate all activities with the assistance of many volunteers.

Helping to guide SEOTS into the future is the SEOTS Board. Current members are Chairperson Jackie Zalim, Vice-Chair Andraea Gaffney, Secretary Pamela Ninham, Ed Pero, Valerie Webster, Carol Wenzel, and Chris Luttrell. Their activities in the community, working with the Tribe, and professional experience allow them to provide advice and direction for all aspects of the SEOTS operation. As the eyes and ears of the community, they have been instrumental in securing a new 14 passenger shuttle, assisting in the search process for a new and permanent home for SEOTS, fund raising for the new SEOTS GED Program, plus donating time and skills for SEOTS events.

Overall, the SEOTS mission is strengthening our cultural connection and providing services and programs to enhance the well being of Onʌyoteʔaka in southeastern Wisconsin. During the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at 6:00pm the SEOTS Board meets to ensure that we are achieving our mission. All Tribal members are encouraged to attend Board meetings and offer feedback on any aspects of the SEOTS operation.

Above is six-year old, Kayla, she is the youngest youth in the Language class offered at SEOTS. At left, a traditional song was shared by Ronnie Preston. He also demonstrated his grass dancing technique.

Commencement for the Oneida High School Graduates took place on Friday evening, June 1, 2012 at the Radisson Hotel & Conference Center.

The Oneida Nation Am Vets Post #54 and the Buffalo Creek Drum were on hand to Post the Colors and provide the beat of the drum respectively as the impending graduates filed in to take their seats in the front.

Nineteen young men and women proudly stood before several family members and friends who were on hand to witness their education milestone.

Mason Storm Powless and Kanani Margaret Nunies were the Salutatorian and Valedictorian respectively for the Class of 2012. Powless held a 3.53 GPA and Nunies a 3.6 GPA.

Their fellow classmates included: Jordan Thundercloud Bain, Kalene Violet Beechtree, Jaleesa Quyre Caldwell, Kanikisa Lynn Corbin, Anthony Allen Cornelius, Colleen Marie Cornelius, Adrian Lee Huff, Terrill Rodney Gutierrez, Komanche Coy Jordan, Shanna Ann Violet Jourdan, Guadalupe Soledad Martinez, Matias Hayden Metoxen, Hodazha-Maniwinga Pidgeon, Michael Jo Santiago, Oscar Samuel Schuyler II, Bradley Robert Sievers and Allie Louise Spruce.

A reception was held in the Iroquois South room after the ceremony.

EPA creates Great Lakes protection advisory board

Traverse City, Mich. (AP) – The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is creating a board to advise federal agencies carrying out two wide-ranging programs to protect the Great Lakes, EPA chief Lisa Jackson said Thursday.

Jackson leads a task force with representatives of 16 federal agencies that have roles in the Great Lakes Restoration Initiative and the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement. The new panel will make suggestions.

The EPA will accept nominations for membership and expects to establish the board this summer. Candidates could include representatives of environmental advocacy, agriculture, academic research, state and local government, and Indian tribes.

"As we work to set a new standard of care for these waters, it's important that we hear from experts and stakeholders who can strengthen our efforts," Jackson said.

The Great Lakes Restoration Initiative is designed to make progress on some of the region's most longstanding environmental problems, such as invasive species, toxic pollution, disappearing wetlands and other wildlife habitat, and runoff from farms and cities.

Congress has appropriated more than $1 billion for the initiative. President Barack Obama has requested $300 million for the next fiscal year.

The water quality agreement is a U.S.-Canadian blueprint that identifies problems needing long-term attention. The two nations are renegotiating the agreement, first signed in 1972 and amended several times since.

Wisconsin DNR sets hearings on wolf hunt rules

Madison, WI (AP) – State wildlife officials are looking for public input on a draft rule setting up Wisconsin's new wolf hunt.

The Department of Natural Resources is planning four public meetings on the rule around the state this month. The first is set for Wednesday in Spooner, with others to follow Friday in Black River Falls, June 14 in Fond du Lac and June 15 in Rhinelander.

The meetings will begin with an open house with DNR staff followed by staff presentations and time for questions and comments.

State lawmakers passed a bill earlier this year calling for a wolf hunt. The DNR is currently developing an emergency rule setting up the details and logistics. The Natural Resources Board expects to take up the measure at a meeting July 17 in Stevens Point.

New pedestrian bridge on Wolf Path Trail

The new footbridge off Old Seymour Road will be part of a new path system that will connect the eastern Path of the Bear Housing Site with the western Green Valley Development.

Have you checked out the new pedestrian bridge on Old Seymour Road near the Turtle School?

The Wolf Path Trail is part of a series of trails being built to connect Housing Sites with destinations such as the Turtle School, the Norbert Hill Center, the Oneida Library, Enrollments, the Civic Center, the ball fields, the Episcopal Church, the Parish Hall, the Elderly Apartments, the Oneida Resident Centered Care Community, and the Health Center.

The bridge looks very long for crossing the narrow Oneida Creek. The reason for that is because of the laws that protect wetlands and the flood plain. There are also set back requirements for the high transmission lines.

If you have any questions regarding the trails please call Laura Manthe at 920-496-5360. Community outreach will continue at the General Tribal Council meetings to keep you updated on the routes, progress of construction and funding sources for the trails.

Oneida Land Commission

Community input sought in naming of structure, roads in Oneida

The Oneida Nation owns the following properties and, the Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input to name the following:

1. Oneida Residential Community Care Center – Building

The Oneida Residential Community Care Center is being built adjoining the Lee McLester, III Complex on South Overland Drive. Once ORCCC is completed, the residents at the Anna John Nursing Home will move into the new center. The Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input with the name of the building.

Original allottee:
Baptist King

2. Valley Green Housing Project – Roads

The Green Valley housing project on Florist Drive will be adding some tribal roads that will connect to Florist Drive, Valley Drive and Henry Street. The Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input with naming the potential roads.

Original allottees:
William Powless, Lewis Elm, Kate Elm & Peter Hill

3. Little Bear Development Center Conference Room

The Oneida Land Commission is seeking community input to approve the naming of the conference room in the Little Bear Development Center. Naming of a room is less formal than the naming of a road or building, so the Land Commission has been approached by the Planning Department to name the conference room The Ernest Stevens, Sr. Conference Room. If there are no strong objections received, the Commission will name the room by resolution.

Original allottee:
John Reid

All written recommendations will be submitted to the Division of Land Management. Tribal departments are encouraged to submit three names. Three recommendations will be presented to the Land Commission for final selection. The name selected will be translated into the Oneida Language through Land Commission resolution.

Submissions should include:
- Property to be named
- Location
- Recommended Name
- Reason
- Date
- Your Name or Department Name
- Tribal Enrollment number

Please submit recommendations in writing to:
Tina Hackett
Land Management Specialist
Division of Land Management
P.O. Box 365
Oneida, WI. 54155

All submissions are due by June 8, 2012.

Release and Wavier of Liability Assumption of Risk and Indemnifcation agreement
In exchange for my child, the "Participant", being allowed to take part in the Green Bay Packers Youth Football Outreach Camps at the Oneida Community Fest on June 9, 2012, (hereinafter "Activitiy"), the Participant and/or guardian (herein referred to collectively as "Participant") represents that:

I/WE UNDERSTAND THE NATURE OF THE ACTIVITY, and that participation in the sport of football by the Participant involves significant risks of serious injury and even in certain cases death. Injuries maybe caused by my participation, other participants or third parties involved in the play. I/We accept all the risks associated with the ACTIVITY and understand that bodily injury, or even death, may occur due to involvement in the ACTIVITY. I/We understand that there maybe other risks either not known to us or not readily foreseeable at this time.
I/We FULLY ACCEPT AND ASSUME ALL SUCH RISKS AND ALL RESPONSIBILITY for losses, costs, and damages, including reasonable attorney's fees, as a result of this ACTIVITY.
I/WE REALEASE, DISCHARGE AND PROMISE NOT TO SUE the Green Bay Packers, Inc. or the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin and all their employees, directores, referees/officials, or agents (hereinafter referred to collectively as "Sponsors") from all liability, claims, demands, losses, or damages that I/we suffer which are caused or alleged to be caused in whole or in part by the negligence of the sponsors.
I/WE WILL INDEMNIFY, SAVE AND HOLD-HARMLESS the Sponsors from any loss, liability, damage or cost. Which may occur due to participation in the Activity.
I/WE HAVE READ THIS RELEASE AND WAIVER OF LIABILITY, ASSUMPTION OF RISK AND INDEMNITY AGREEMENT, AND UNDERSTAND THESE TERMS AND UNDERSTAND THAT I/WE HAVE GIVEN UP SUBSTANTIAL RIGHTS BY SIGNING THIS AGREEMENT, and have signed it freely and without any inducement or assurance of any nature. I/WE understand that, in reliance upon our signatures on this form, voluntarily given, may be permitted to participate in the Activity noted above. I/WE intend it be a complete and unconditional release of all liability to the greatest extend allowed by law. If any portion of this Agreement is held to be invalid, the balance shall continue in full force and effect.

From August to April

By ONHS Math Instructors Mike Hanke & Tony Romandine
Reprinted from "High School Highlights"

This school year our stock market club tried a new competition. Instead of the usual 10 to 14 week competition, our Consumer Math class opted to try the school-year-long competition.

Our team, the Profiteers, consisted of Jordan Bain, Matias Metoxen, and Anthony Cornelius. They did quite well, finishing with a profit of 14%.

They did a lot of trading during the 36-week competition, holding both long and short positions. Some of their winning investments included Las Vegas Sands Hotels, Nike, Target, Microsoft, and the YUM group, a restaurant group that includes Red Lobster and Pizza Hut, among others.

This year-long format is quite a bit more relaxed than the shorter version. It was easy to lose sight of the goal, but the team did well checking up on their investment choices regularly and to tweak the portfolio as results dictated.

We were quite pleased with the format of this elongated contest and very pleased with our 5th place finish overall. Next year, 1st!

ONHS Students Like Their School

The Results Are In!

Reprinted from "High School Highlights"

Recently, students at Oneida Nation High School took a Student Survey that inquired about their school enjoyment and concerns.

92.44% reported that they are getting a good education at ONHS

98.18% reported that our teachers care about student learning

94.44% reported being proud of their school

98.03% reported feeling safe at Oneida Nation High School

The interesting statistics do not stop there. Did you know that this year ONHS held after school tutoring twice a week with snacks and transportation provided for students in attendance? Get the facts:

52 students attended tutoring at least once during the school year

693 additional hours were spent in after school tutoring by students

9.4 ---average number of students per session

Green Bay Bullfrogs Baseball

By Sheldon Skenandore
Thunderhawk Times

When you live on the East Side of Green Bay, you don't live very far from Joannes Park. At Joannes Park in the summer, you can see the Green Bay Bullfrogs play baseball.

According to their website, "Bullfrogs tickets are the hottest and most affordable entertainment option in town!"

You can watch a single game for five dollars. $6 will get you a reserved seat and $8 will put you in the 1st Base Club. The "Leinies Northwoods Fan Deck and Bullfrogs Beach Club" cost $25 on Thursday-Saturday and $23 Sunday-Wednesday. Kids 12 and under are only $15.

They call it Frogville when the Bullfrogs are playing.

June is a good month to catch a game. There are a lot of specials for home games and… you might see me there.

Anniversary of a US Classic

By RJ Webster
Thunderhawk Times

April 17 was the 48th anniversary of a classic US car… the Mustang. While the car is a legend, two versions of the "Stang" stand out for me: the 1967 Ford Mustang Shelby GT350 and the 2012 Ford Mustang Boss 302.

One look at either of these cars and you will fall in love yourself. I swear you will.

But the Shelby has to be original with all original stock parts. I don't want a kit car. I would soup the engine up, though.

The Mustang is often called the 1964-½ car because it came out in April. But if you do research you will find that these were actually 1965 cars.

You might wonder what an original Mustang is worth these days. The car cost between $2372 and $4567 when they first came out, depending on equipment.

These days, the price of an original 1965 Mustang depends on the model and condition the car is in. A quick look on the internet had them running from around $7500 to $35000.

Poniboy Time, the racehorse

By RJ Webster
Thunderhawk Times

Who is Poniboy Time? He's a racehorse our journalism teacher, Denis Gullickson, recently leased 40% of. He races at Canterbury Park in Shakopee, MN.

"Poniboy" is a 6-year-old gray gelding. His race record may not seem so good, but "I think this might be his year," said Denis.

He has raced thirteen times in his career and has won once, placed third four times, and, according to Denis, "was out of the money, but gave good effort" in the other races.

Poniboy worked 4 furlongs (a furlong is an eighth of a mile) on Tuesday, May 29 and "did alright," according to Denis.

One of Denis' partners, Kevin Lay, told Denis "all is well after his 4F workout yesterday, likely he'll get one more at the same distance next Wednesday then look for the 6F conditioning race as discussed."

Poniboy's first race of the season will be in a couple of weeks.

I asked Denis why he thinks Poniboy will do better this summer and he said, "I like his trainer, Christine Riddle. Chris really knows her horses and I think she's got him on the right program to win."

Stock Market Club spring 2012: A Challenge with a Capital C

By Mike Hanke & Tony Romandine
Reprinted from "High School Highlights"

This spring the Oneida Nation High School stock club competed in the stock market simulation game called "The Capitol Challenge." This was a competition of over 3000 teams from schools across the country, each sponsored by a local congressman or senator. Our sponsor was Senator Ron Johnson.

We fielded six teams comprised of students from the Geometry and Algebra II classes. Two of our teams did very well, the "A-List," the team of Aleah Jimenez, Abby Paprocki, and Kommanche Jordan; and the "Novelles," the team of Noelle Metoxen, Yasmine Denny, and Diego Metoxen.

It was a difficult ten weeks for investors. The market was volatile and overall it ended the period lower than it started. Despite these adverse conditions, the A-List made a 16% profit and earned a 27th place finish. This is very respectable indeed: in the top 1% of all competitors! The Novelles finished in 477th place with a gain of 3%, also most respectable. Only a few hundred dollars kept them from finishing in the top 100, so close was the competition this spring.

The big gainer for both teams was Apple Computer. Other high performers that our teams selected were LinkedIn, the online networking company, and Nike Sports. Some losing investments included gold, a perennial gainer, and J.C.Penney, whose new merchandizing model does not seem to be catch-ing on. One team did well by shorting U.S. Auto Parts, which dropped in market value as a "short seller" hopes.

It was a great ride and we are looking forward to competing again next fall. Remember everyone as Mr. Romandine always says: diversify not only your life, but also your portfolio.

"Riding in Cars with Boys"

By Josanna Cornelius
Thunderhawk Times

There's this movie called "Riding in Cars with Boys." It's one of my favorite movies. The main character is played by Drew Barrymore. It's about her struggle in life as a teenage mother. Her name in the movie is Beverly.

She starts out a little girl, her and her dads, who's a cop, are driving around on Christmas Eve looking at people decorated houses. He asks her what she wants for Christmas and she says a bra, but he says no. It skips to when she's 15, Beverly and her best friends Fay and Tina go to a party.

Beverly gives a poem to this boy she liked and he laughs in her face. She runs into the bathroom crying, and meets this guy Ray. Beverly tells him what happens; Ray goes to him and tries fighting him. Sky the boy Beverly liked threw a punch at Ray; he ends up breaking Sky's wrist. They get chased out the party because he's the quarterback of their school team.

Beverly ends up having intercourse with Ray, and ends up getting pregnant. She wrote a letter and put it in her mailbox telling her parents she pregnant. Her dad is really upset, he practically forces them two to get married. At her wedding her best friend Fay makes a toast, and tells everyone she's pregnant also. Ray and Beverly get a house together.

Beverly ends up having a boy Jason even though she wanted a girl. Fay has a girl named Amelia. Jason and Amelia are very close because they practically grew up together. Ray leaves Beverly and Jason because he's addicted to drugs. Beverly and Fay go to jail because there were growing weed in her kitchen. Beverly's dad dropped by to give Jason his coat and Jason tells on his mom. Fay bails Beverly out with the money she was saving up for to go to New York.

Fay's brother bails her out and told her she can live with him and he'll take care of everything as long as she agrees to never see Beverly again. Beverly ends up writing a book and finishing it when Jason's 20 years old.

They take a road trip to find Ray, because they need him to sign something so she can't get sued because there are a lot of bad things about Ray in there. He ends up signing it too. Jason leaves to college where Amelia goes, whose Fay's daughter, and they're in love. Fay knew the whole time and Beverly just now found out from Jason.

Ushakow Receives Wallace Payawasit Award

By Mark W. Powless

On Wednesday, April 25, 2012, Deb Ushakow, of Southeastern Oneida Tribal Services (SEOTS), and Roger Thomas from the Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa each received the 2012 Wallace Pyawasit Community Leadership Award. The award is presented by the American Indian Student Services of University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee to individuals who display the highest level of dedication to the Milwaukee Indian Community.

Ushakow was honored for her work with the Wisconsin Pink Shawl Initiative as well as her work with SEOTS and other community activities. In the words of her nominator, Carol Cameron, "From her job at Southeastern Oneida Tribal Services, to working with the community as an advocate for women's breast health, she has been a champion for the American Indian people."

Ushakow has been heavily involved with the Pink Shawls since its inception. The mission of the Pink Shawls is to reduce breast cancer in American Indian communities through education, advocacy and service and to increase the number of American Indian women accessing screening opportunities. Ushakow is not only a co-founder of this amazing group, but is also the current Board Vice-Chair and a family mentor.

Roger Thomas was an Ojibwe language teacher at UW Milwaukee and a proud veteran of the U.S. Marine Corps. His efforts in the community supported Native families in countless ways. One of his nominators, Mary Hicks, stated, "He served our country with honor as a Marine and he's done many things to empower, support, and sustain the Indian community through projects and activities almost too numerous to list."

Thomas' accomplishments include two Masters degrees from UW-Milwaukee, helping to establish a Native American Studies program at UW-Milwaukee, Director of the Native American Studies Program at UW-Oshkosh, establishment of the LCO Community College, assistance with the establishment of the Indian Community School, Director of the WE INDIANS Program of Milwaukee Public Schools and a lifelong dedication to learning and teaching the Ojibwe language.

Recently Thomas passed and will be dearly missed by friends, family, students, and the community.

Website offers Native Americans diabetes forums

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) ~ Two Native American professors living in Kansas say Type 2 diabetes has ravaged their race for so many years they felt compelled to help spread information and hope for those battling the disease.

Rhonda LeValdo and Teresa Trumbly Lamsam said they hope the Native American tradition of storytelling will help combat the spread among Native Americans of Type 2 diabetes, a chronic blood-sugar disease often triggered by obesity.

"It seemed inevitable," said Lamsam, 50, a visiting journalism professor at the University of Kansas who grew up on an Osage reservation in Pawhuska, Okla. "You're going to get older. You're going to get diabetes because you're Indian. When I saw complications, I used to think, 'I wonder how long before they lose their feet?' Amputations were so common."

Diabetes also ran in the family of LeValdo, 37, a member of the Acoma Pueblo from New Mexico. LeValdo is a media instructor at Haskell Indian Nations University and president of the Native American Journalists Association.

In response, the two women launched WellboundStorytellers.com, a website that originally invited Native American journalists to discuss their health struggles and successes, The Kansas City Star reported. Within days, Native Americans across the country were asking that the site be opened to bloggers too.

"We have a Hawaiian guy who is working on the website. I have an educator and filmmaker who say they want to be part of it," Lamsam said. "They are all on health journeys and they want to share and receive support."

Diabetes is only one of several health problems among Native Americans and Pacific Islanders, who rank at or next to the bottom of nearly every health category among all races.

"Diabetes, obesity, heart disease, cancer, suicide rates," said Darryl Tonemah, a Native American health psychologist of Kiowa, Comanche and Tuscarora descent who is a board member of the American Diabetes Association.

Lamsam said the website originally was part of journalism research she was doing on the mainstream media's coverage of a federal initiative known as the Special Diabetes Program for Indians, which has spent about $1.5 billion over the last 15 years battling diabetes in Native American communities.

During the research, LeValdo's uncle died from complications from diabetes, and she and Lamsam decided to start the website.

"We thought we needed to be role models," Lamsam said.

Sustainable Tourism

By Yvonne Kaquatosh
Kalihwisaks

Keshena, WI – Sustainable Tourism: Naturally Attractive is the conference theme chosen by the NATOW (Native American Tourism of Wisconsin) group for their annual gathering which was held earlier this week on a reservation which is known for it's sustainable practices in forestry.

The Menominee Casino Resort in Keshena is where NATOW organizers planned to highlight programs and methods to help all businesses, Native and non-Native alike, become more environmentally friendly.

"As stewards of the land, we Native Americans have always taken pride in maintaining our environment while developing our communities and economies," said Kirby Metoxen of the Oneida Nation of Wisconsin and acting NATOW Chairman, "Now we want to share our belief system and help all communities in their sustainability efforts."

The Menominee Nation is the perfect setting for sustainability. The tribal lands encompass 223,500 acres of heavily forested lands, representing the largest single tract of virgin timberland in Wisconsin and the wild and natural beauty of the Wolf River. The College of the Menominee Nation also showcased its sustainability program at the Conference.

Dan Ninham hired as Bemidji basketball coach

By Pat Miller
Bemidji Pioneer

BEMIDJI – During his 12 years as head boys basketball coach at Cass Lake-Bena Dan Ninham turned a small-town program into a perennial state championship contender.

In time the Panthers developed into the kings of Section 8A and during Ninham's final six years at the helm CL-B appeared in five state basketball tournaments. During a run which saw the Panthers play in four consecutive tourneys, Ninham's teams posted a runner-up and a pair of third-place finishes.

His coaching philosophy is based around pressure defense and pressure offense and any opponent that plans to stay with a Ninham-coached team better be prepared to constantly run up and down the court.

"We have had success offensively and defensively with our high tempo brand of basketball," Ninham said.

Two years ago Ninham left the Panthers and last winter he served as an assistant coach at Red Lake. On Friday he was named the new head boys coach at Bemidji High School.

"Susan (his wife) and our entire family are excited about this opportunity," Ninham said. "I look at this as a win-win for both the high school and for us. I think this is a great day to be a Lumberjack."

Ninham is a physical education teacher at the Bemidji Middle School and Bemidji activities director Troy Hendricks was happy to announce the appointment.

"Dan already has proven that he is a successful basketball coach," Hendricks said. "He also is a teacher in the district and is here for the kids. He is a man of character and we fell in love with his approach to building a program."

Ninham replaces Jeff Brown who resigned following the 2011-2012 season. Brown was on the BHS varsity bench for 10 seasons and last winter his team fell one game short of advancing to the state tournament.

When it was possible Ninham watched the Lumberjacks and he was impressed by what he saw.

"They were a senior-laden team last year but what I noticed were the talents at the younger levels," Ninham said. "I see a bright future for this program and we will get after things right away.

"The bottom line is that not only are we building a team, we are building a program. And I plan to be here for quite a while so we can do that.

Groups in 13 states want US to block Internet bets

By Wayne Parry
Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) ~ Family-centric groups in 13 states are calling on Congress to block states across the nation from legalizing Internet gambling, saying the societal costs will far outweigh the benefit to tax coffers.

They want Congress to strengthen the Unlawful Internet Gambling Enforcement Act "to ensure its clear intent that the Internet not become a giant online casino."

The groups are from Wisconsin, Kentucky, Louisiana, North and South Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Hawaii, Georgia and Tennessee.

The U.S. Justice Department ruled in December that in-state online bets not involving sports teams do not violate federal law. That has touched off a race by cash-strapped state governments to try to legalize Internet gambling.

Several national family groups expressed similar concerns last month.

"The bottom line is we are The Family Foundation, and expansion of gambling through casinos or online is targeting one group only: moms and dads," said Kent Ostrander, founder of The Family Foundation of Kentucky. "It's an effort to separate a family from its assets. The family is the building block of any society, and yet it is the most vulnerable institution in that society."

Ostrander said there is a push in Kentucky, as in many other states, to add slot machines or casino-style gambling to racetracks in order to increase the tracks' viability.

He said the added tax revenue to state governments will be more than offset by the societal costs of expanded gambling, particularly if it is made as easy as logging on to a computer.

"We are going to find ourselves with more broken homes and families than we can afford," he said.

The groups sent letters to congressional leaders asking them to strengthen the Internet Gambling law to make it clear that online betting is not what lawmakers wanted. "We must protect our children and families from the destruction of safeguards Congress has previously established," they wrote.

Referring to the Justice Department's December interpretation of the law allowing in-state Internet gambling, the groups wrote that the decision "unleashed actions by a growing number of revenue-hungry state governments to turn the Internet into the largest casino ever, and welcoming into homes a greater social cost than any government can handle. This action is undermining Congress' clear intent when it passed the Unlawful Internet Gambling Enforcement Act in 2006 that online gambling should be prohibited."

Many states, including New Jersey and Nevada, are rushing to be among the first to get Internet gambling up and running before the competition. At the East Coast Gaming Congress last month in Atlantic City, a panel of industry and Wall Street experts predicted that Internet gambling will soon become a reality on a state-by-state basis, rather than by a national law, because Congress is too divided to agree on such a far-reaching measure.

From 1A/Sustainable Tourism

Dr. Daniel R. Wildcat was the first speaker to set the premise with his message to the attendees.

After being introduced by Dr. Verna Fowler, CMN College President, he made a point to reference how CMN stands out (in his mind) among tribal colleges and universities in Indian country.

He shared four key points with the group with relation to the unique cultural personality that indigenous people have to showcase their individual locations in the area of tourism.

The first was Power and Place equals Personality. It's the right model/strategy for success. "We ought to play to our strengths as Indigenous people," he said.

Quoting Satchel Paige, he shared Paiges' definition of Indigenous, which is – To have an identity that connects your people to a place.

Dr. Wildcat had his own key word – 'Indigenuity' that he referenced quite often throughout his message. His new book Red Alert: Saving the Planet with Indigenous Knowledge, suggests current global climate change issues will require the exercise of Indigenous Ingenuity – Indigenuity – and wisdom if humankind is to reduce the ecological damage well underway.

The second point he shared was in the area of Health, and Fitness Opportunities outdoors. Posing the question, "How do you want to attract people to your homelands?"

> "We ought to play to our strengths as Indigenous people"
> – Dr. Daniel R. Wildcat

The third point was in the area of education. "Learn valuable lessons from relatives in your community," explained Dr. Wildcat. "People are hungry to go places and learn something they don't know," he added. "Who better to tell the history than those who have lived here." An experiential basis of learning - not necessarily inside a classroom, he suggested.

The fourth and final point was the development of a communities' sustainability in a qualitative, value added experience. "Menominee is a perfect example," he explained, pointing out the 'naturally attractive' area, which also offers white water rafting on the homelands.

"Make those exercises of Indigenuity," he said, adding, "We can create incredible tourism opportunities."

He shared one final thought he heard from an elder many years ago – the Natural Law – which is to Respect the Land, Air and Water.

Sarah Klavas, Wisconsin Department of Tourism Industry Relations and Services Bureau Director and Ernest Stevens, Chairman of NIGA (National Indian Gaming Association), both had opportunities to welcome and address the attendees on Monday as well. Klavas paid homage to the tribes for their cultural contributions in their communities and shared a variety of initiatives that are in place in Wisconsin. Stevens stressed the importance of the partnership with tourism, saying it was "vital" adding that the business of tourism is a natural for Indian country.

He also shared some personal experiences he endured growing up but shifted the focus on his motivation, his grandmother who just recently celebrated her 102nd birthday and her struggles in life.

The conference concluded on Wednesday with a NATOW Golf Fundraiser and an evening Awards Banquet. The Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa will host the NATOW conference in 2013.

Wisconsin officials strengthen fight against human trafficking

By Mario Koran
Wisconsin Center for Investigative Journalism

WISCONSIN DELLS - Wisconsin law enforcement leaders acknowledge they need to do a better job of attacking criminals who enslave victims in sex and labor markets. And this week, about 300 officials received training on how to identify cases of human trafficking -- which often are not spotted because victims are fearful to speak out.

"It's an issue that's happening right under our noses, it's an issue that we frequently categorize wrong," Wisconsin Attorney General J.B. Van Hollen said Thursday as he launched a two-day summit for law enforcement officials at Chula Vista Resort.

Law enforcement officers, prosecutors and victim-assistance specialists attended, along with survivors of human trafficking who shared their stories.

Lisa Tritt-Feleshchuk told the group that while attending college at Arizona State University, she met a man who became her boyfriend but later coerced her into prostitution.

Tritt-Feleshchuk said the man forced her to give massages and sell her body to strangers.

Over time, she grew dependent on him for survival and acceptance.

"I wasn't lured by drugs. I was lured only by the promise of love," she said.

"While most prostitution stories end in jail, that's where my journey begins."

Tritt-Feleshchuk served time in jail for prostitution, but her boyfriend escaped charges and abandoned her to focus on younger women in Eastern Europe.

Today, Tritt-Feleshchuk works on behalf of trafficking survivors and is calling for a law that would allow victims to have their records expunged if they were forced to commit their crimes.

Human trafficking involves controlling or attempting to control a person by force, fraud, or coercion. Its victims include children involved in the sex trade, adults who are coerced or deceived into commercial sex acts, and anyone forced into labor or services.

Jeff Stillings, group supervisor for the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, played video clips to illustrate signs of trafficking: Often a "spokesman" mediates between victims and public safety officials, while the trafficker withholds victims' passports.

The crimes remain difficult to prosecute. According to a report by the Bureau of Justice Statistics, between January 2008 and June 2010, federally funded task forces opened 2,515 suspected incidents of human trafficking for investigation. Yet, during that same period, only 389 incidents were confirmed cases of human trafficking, which included 488 suspects and 527 victims.

In a recent news release, Van Hollen said there's a need for better data. "We know human trafficking is happening in Wisconsin," Van Hollen wrote, "but we need to know more about the extent and nature of the problem locally."

Last August, the Wisconsin Center for Investigative Journalism reported that over the past decade, people have been trafficked to Wisconsin from at least 17 countries, including Brazil, China, Colombia, Ecuador, Guatemala, India, Laos, Lithuania, Mexico, Moldova, Nigeria, Peru, Philippines, Russia, Rwanda, Ukraine and Uzbekistan. Many additional victims were American citizens.

Experts quoted in that report said that since enacting a state law against human trafficking in 2008, Wisconsin had done little to expose situations in which which hundreds of state residents, including children, live as virtual slaves. They said Wisconsin lacked money for data collection, education, law enforcement training and victim services that could bring more cases to light.

Just a handful of cases have been prosecuted in Wisconsin under state and federal anti-trafficking laws.

Jill Karofsky, director of the Office of Crime Victim Services at the state Department of Justice, noted that because victims are often reluctant to testify, elements of trafficking are difficult to prove and defendants plead to lesser charges such as soliciting prostitution. The state recently published a guide to help law enforcement agencies crack down on trafficking.

"You're talking about a crime that's driven underground by the people who perpetuate it," said Karofsky, who expressed optimism that the new training will lead to more prosecutions.

"As soon as it becomes above ground, they're going to get caught."

There is no charge for obituary notices to be published in the Kalihwisaks for enrolled Oneida citizens or spouses.

Loretta Says... Old Cape Cod

Loretta Metoxen • Oneida Tribal Historian

Ongoing Kalihwisaks Column • Providing a connection to the past

Otis Air Force Base is in the town of Bourne, at Falmouth, Massachusetts. I served my tour of duty here, in the Eastern Air Defense Command. It is here that I met and married Wilfred Pauson Ellis. By this time, he had served 12 years in the military. He had just returned from a three year tour in Japan. His family was all Cap Codders and all his grand fathers were sea captains. Captain Theodore Ellis owned his own sailing vessel and possessed a license to sail the seven seas. Captain Richard E. B. Phillips served on the Handkerchief and other light ships off Monomoy Point for all of his sea career.

We lived off base in a little town called East Sandwich. We were very fortunate to have met Uncle Charlie Orcutt. He was a widower who owned and lived in Skiffe House which was built in 1638—yes, 1638. It had all original oyster shell plaster. There were fireplaces in every room which were higher than I was tall. The tiny window panes had bubbles and swirls in them, indicative of having been made more than a hundred years ago. The furnishings included a chair once used by President Thomas Jefferson. There was a secret panel in place alongside the large fireplace in the main sitting room on the first floor. It was only removed to allow slaves to go to the attic as part of the Underground Railroad.

We rented a large bedroom and had kitchen privileges as well as use of the entire large house. Uncle Charlie charged us $50.00 a month. I washed the sheets in an ancient gas operated washing machine for all five bedrooms and did some other minor chores. He paid me $10.00 a week for that, so we had virtually no costs for staying in that magnificent historical house.

The Mid-Cape Railroad ran behind the house. Spring Hill was on the other side of that. I discovered the entire hill was covered with high bush blueberries. I attached a bail handle kettle to my belt and picked many quarts. There were empty canning jars available, so I set to work canning all the blueberries. Uncle Charlie had relatives who were wool merchants. They spent a lot of time on the Cape in the summertime—at Skiffe House. One weekend they caught a 125 pound tuna, and they gave it to me. I created a steamer to process the tuna. I cleaned it, sliced into two inch parcels and steamed it off the bones. It worked perfectly, so I canned the whole tuna.

Cape Cod is where I learned about seafood. I ate fried clams, stuffed clams and clam chowder. There were places that served "lobster in the rough" outdoors on wooden picnic tables. I learned to cook salt codfish and scallops. Uncle Charlie's son, Freole, took us out on Long Island Sound in a converted PT boat to troll for bluefish. I caught five. They weighed four and five pounds apiece. They are very good eating.

The wool merchants often entertained guests. They usually served lamb: roast leg of lamb with mint jelly, Irish stew, lamb chops. They included us in the feasting. It was my first experience with eating lamb. Today, I buy it if it on sale because it is very expensive.

Our first daughter, Gail, was born at the Otis Air Force Base Hospital. My doctor was a civilian named Dr. Hartwell. I did not go to the Base doctors because women in service then were not allowed to have children (married or not). The Mashpee Indian Reservation was just outside the back gate of the Base. I had to drive through the Reservation on my way to work. One night, Dr. Hartwell made a house call to deliver a baby there. On his way home in the early morning hours, he fell asleep, hit a tree and died.

The Mashpees are descendants of the very people who helped the Pilgrims to survive. Now, they have lost nearly all their original homelands to conglomerate development corporations. The Federal Courts did not rule in their favor.

Horseshoe crabs, hermit crabs, quahogs and all kinds of clams, shore birds of many descriptions live in the water, in the sand or along the shoreline. Life on the beach or near the shore is very interesting. There are salt marshes. Salt marsh hay was harvested for fodder by those who kept cattle and horses on the Cape. The rivers and streams are filled with herring runs during certain times of the year.

The climate is moderated by the effects of the ocean and bay. There are not the extreme cold temperatures that the Midwest has in the winter. However, when I lived there, there was a massive snow storm that stopped all transportation for nearly a week. The summer winds off the ocean and the bay were most comforting when walking the beaches.

Oneida Nation Arts Program Dollars for Arts

Oneida Arts Program
Dollars for Arts
Application Deadline
Friday, July 27, 2012

The Dollars for Arts Program (DAP) is a re-granting program funded by the Wisconsin Arts Board and the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin. DAP provides funds to support excellence, innovations and the development of the arts in Oneida. The arts include both traditional and contemporary styles in dance, literature, music, theatre, and visual arts. There are three funding areas in DAP:

- Community Awards - are available to community groups or tribal programs for arts projects that are new and innovative or significantly enhance an existing program in the Oneida community.
- Oneida Fellowship Awards - are a $500 cash award to individual artists for artistic excellence in the Oneida community. There is a maximum of two Fellowships available per fiscal year.
- Artist Development Awards - are available to artists in the community who have identified a special project that will enhance their professional development and benefit the Oneida community.

Harvard University announces no tuition and no student loans

Harvard University announced that undergraduate students from low-income families will pay no tuition. In making the announcement, Harvard's president Lawrence H. Summers said, "When only ten percent of the students in elite higher education come from families in the lower half of the income distribution, we are not doing enough. We are not doing enough in bringing elite higher education to the lower half of the income distribution."

If you know of a family earning less than $60,000 a year with an honor student graduating from high school soon, Harvard University wants to pay the tuition. The prestigious university recently announced that from now on undergraduate students from low-income families can go to Harvard for free... no tuition and no student loans!

To find out more about Harvard offering free tuition for families making less than $60,000 a year, visit Harvard's financial aid website at: http://www.fao.fas.harvard.edu/ or call the school's financial aid office at (617) 495-1581.

CenturyLink offers telephone assistance to individuals living on Tribal Lands

Low-income consumers may qualify for assistance that will reduce the cost of basic monthly telephone service. The assistance program, known as Lifeline Affordable Telephone Assistance, is available to qualifying consumers in every U.S. state (territory and commonwealth). Qualifications for participation vary by state. In states that follow the federal guidelines, the subscriber must have a household annual gross income at or below 135% of the Federal Poverty Guidelines for a household of that size; or participate in any one of the following programs: Medicaid, Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (Food Stamps), Supplemental Security Income (SSI), Federal Public Housing Assistance (Section 8), Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP), National School Lunch Program's Free Lunch Program, or Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF).

Residents of American Indian and Alaskan Native tribal lands may qualify for up to an additional $25 of enhanced Lifeline support monthly and a credit of up to $100 on their initial installation charges. An individual living on tribal lands may qualify for Lifeline and Link-Up discounts if he or she participates in one of the programs listed above, the Bureau of Indian Affairs General Assistance, Tribally Administered Temporary Assistance to Needy Families, or Head Start (only for those households meeting its income qualifying standard).

Lifeline eligible subscribers may also qualify for reliable home high-speed Internet service up to 1.5Mbps for $9.95* per month for the first 12 months of service. Further details are available at centurylink.com/internetbasics

If you live in a CenturyLink service area, please call 1-800-201-4099 or visit centurylink.com/lifeline with questions or to request an application for the Lifeline program.

*CenturyLink Internet Basics Program – Residential customers only who qualify based on meeting income level or program participation eligibility requirements, and requires remaining eligible for the entire offer period. First bill will include charges for the \first full month of service billed in advance, prorated charges for service from the date of installation to bill date, and one-time charges and fees described above. Qualifying customers may keep this program for a maximum of 60 months after service activation provided customer still qualifies during that time. Listed High-Speed Internet rate of $9.95/mo. applies for first 12 months of service (after which the rate reverts to $14.95/mo. for the next 48 months of service), and requires a 12-month term agreement. Customer must either lease a modem/router from CenturyLink for an additional monthly charge or purchase a modem/router from CenturyLink for a one-time charge, and a one-time High-Speed Internet activation fee applies. A one-time professional installation charge (if selected by customer) and a one-time shipping and handling fee applies to customer's modem/router. General – Services not available everywhere. CenturyLink may change or cancel services or substitute similar services at its sole discretion without notice. Offer, plans, and stated rates are subject to change and may vary by service area. Deposit may be required. Additional restrictions apply. Terms and Conditions – All products and services listed are governed by tariffs, terms of service, or terms and conditions posted at centurylink.com. Taxes, Fees, and Surcharges – Applicable taxes, fees, and surcharges include a carrier Universal Service charge, carrier cost recovery surcharges, state and local fees that vary by area and certain in-state surcharges. Cost recovery fees are not taxes or government-required charges for use. Taxes, fees, and surcharges apply based on standard monthly, not promotional, rates.

Shooting of teen reopens Milwaukee's racial wounds

MILWAUKEE (AP) ~ Darius Simmons was buried between two tall maple trees, nine days after he was gunned down, allegedly by an angry neighbor who believed the 13-year-old had stolen his shotguns.

The tragedy has reopened wounds in Milwaukee, which has a long history of racial strife, the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel reported Sunday. A black boy shot at close range; the suspect, a 75-year-old white man now charged with first-degree intentional homicide. The boy and his family recently moved to the block, where the man has lived for decades, watching the neighborhood change from all-white to multiethnic.

And police are accused of treating the victim's family with a heavy hand. They grilled Darius' mother for two hours while the boy lay dead and left the family's house in disarray after scouring it in vain for the shotguns. They also arrested one of Darius' brothers for a year-old truancy violation.

"This was a huge, huge loss - one of those injustices that you can't even calculate," the Rev. Willie Brisco, president of the Milwaukee Innercity Congregations Allied for Hope, said at the youth's funeral Saturday. "You want to be angry but you realize that anger doesn't solve it."

"It's just unconscionable," Rainbow Push Coalition executive Tavis Grant said at the services, which drew a couple of hundred mourners to All Peoples Church, a multiracial Lutheran congregation.

Also attending was Mayor Tom Barrett, who on Friday promised an investigation of how police treated Darius' mother, Patricia Larry. So were three aldermen, the president of the Milwaukee branch of the NAACP and representatives of the Nation of Islam.

Darius attended at All Peoples Church, where he worked in the garden, cracked jokes frequently, occasionally whispered with friends during prayers, but always, Pastor Steve Jerbi said, responded respectfully when called to account.

Trees For Tomorrow offers Wood Energy Workshop

Eagle River, WI – Teachers seeking university credit and professional development are encouraged to register for Trees For Tomorrow's workshop entitled: Utilizing Wood for Energy: The Options Are Nearly Endless, taking place on July 23-25, 2012. The workshop will be taught by Mr. Don Peterson, President of Renewable Resource Solutions, LLC and a member of the Wisconsin Consulting Forester Association. An advantageous and grant-supported education opportunity for teachers, this course is aimed at professionals striving to expand the depth of their natural resources knowledge for direct application in the classroom. Register early, space is limited!

Attendees will gain experience in adapting a wood energy curriculum specific to their own community/area, the ability to explain the various wood energy products currently available and how they are produced, and the economic/societal/environmental impacts of using wood energy while earning two graduate credits. They will explore historical, current, and potential uses of wood for producing warming heat, process heat, electricity, liquid fuels, and even air conditioning. Teachers have the chance to travel on-location to observe in progress, the harvesting and processing of woody biomass and view on-site uses for wood energy. Take home classroom activities for educators will include determining moisture and BTU content of woody biomass samples, how to evaluate your school or other facilities in your community for feasibility of conversion to a wood boiler system, and much more. Trees For Tomorrow workshop participants will benefit from highly respected and knowledgeable contemporaries in their field, enthusiastic to contribute to natural resources education!

The Wisconsin State Energy Office has provided a generous grant for participating teachers to cover instruction fees, food, lodging and credit tuition for this workshop. A $50 non-refundable deposit is required to register for the three-day course. Interested educators will find complete information in the form of downloadable PDF documents outlining the course description, daily schedule and credit criteria at www.treesfortomorrow.com by clicking the Programs tab. To register by phone for Utilizing Wood for Energy: The Options Are Nearly Endless, call Trees For Tomorrow's office at (715) 479-6456.

Trees For Tomorrow is a natural resources specialty school located in Eagle River, Wisconsin. Various programs are offered for all ages throughout the year that place participants in direct contact with natural resources that support human needs. These programs develop awareness, knowledge and understanding of natural resources to help participants understand and make informed decisions regarding the management and wise use of those resources. The experience inspires informed participation in policymaking and promotes stewardship and renewal of natural resources for use by future generations.

Shekoli,

Community Concern Equates to a Safer Community

The Site I Oneida Indian Community has recently been the place where a couple of bad things have happened (standoff with police, stabbing incident and continuing gang problem). But Site I continues to be, in my mind anyway, a good place to be. Surrounded by woods, a river and green space, the community is not only the place where my youngest daughter was born some 20 years ago, it is also the home of a great recreational center, a very vibrant community library and is where some great Oneida people live.

Fritz Hill lives in Site I. He's lived there for many years. With the recent road construction, he saw that Oneida children were being forced to take alternate routes to get to Site I's baseball fields. He saw that the alternate routes were dangerous to the children and he sought out solutions. When he contacted my Office, my Executive Assistant Kitty Melchert and I went to Fritz and he showed us the problem and made a recommendation on how to solve the problem. With the expedient cooperation of Oneida Housing and Oneida Recreation, it was decided to create an alternate walkway to the baseball fields. As of yesterday, work on the new walkway began and very soon Oneida children in the area will be safer. Mr. Fritz Hill is truly one of those great Oneida people who live in Site I. He cares.

I'm an Indian - not Native American

For the almost 7 years that I have been on the Oneida Business Committee, I've consistently objected to being called a Native American, sometimes to the point of probably giving some of my colleagues on the OBC a big headache. Sorry. I think maybe I'm old fashioned. Being an Indian is good enough for me. Or maybe it's because I never read an Indian treaty that used the word Native American. I know that our Oneida treaties with the United States contain no mention of the term. We're Indians in those treaties and my rights to be an Oneida and live on this Reservation as an Oneida Indian are rested in those treaties. Those treaties set us aside not as a minority citizen of the United States, but as a separate classification with specific rights under the United States Constitution. I believe using the term Native American to identify ourselves diminishes that special classification and makes just another minority group, even though those minority groups are also great people like us. Today, in some of its policies, the US government uses the term Native American as a completely self-identifiable term and thus anyone can identify themselves as Native American and receive employment and educational benefits once granted to Indian people. It would seem that Indian leaders would want to protect the terms within our treaties. I am one Indian who will protect every term within our treaties by staying an Indian.

Tribal Sovereignty Continues to be Targeted

Bob Eberle, according to the Spokeman-Review, lives on the Swinomish Indian Reservation on Puget Sound in Washington State. Mr. Eberle, who is not a Swinomish Indian, is calling for federal force to make it mandatory to allow non-Swinomish people to vote in Swinomish Tribal elections. Elerle says in the article, "This business about the Indian having authority is a bunch of bunk." The article also carries a quote from a John Fleming, also a long time crusader against Indian sovereignty. The quote by Fleming has him saying, "The U.S. Army and the Air Force and the Marines and the National Guard are going to have to battle back." It sound like Washington State has some real backward and hateful bigots in their mist. Hopefully, they are few, and perhaps someday they will have to meet their maker to account.

Thank You for reading

Sincerely,
Ed Delgado

Oneida Nation Child Support Agency

Shakoti?nukú·lale? Latiksashúha?

Topic: Paternity FAQ's

Q. If I signed a voluntary paternity acknowledgement, can I withdraw it?
A. Once a Voluntary Paternity Acknowledgment is filed, the parents have 6o days to withdraw or rescind it. Contact your case manager with any questions regarding this.
Q. If I suspect a child is not mine, can I request a paternity test?
A. If paternity has not been established by signing a Voluntary Paternity Acknowledgment or a court has not issued a Judgment of Paternity, then paternity testing can and should be done.
Q. How much does it cost to have a Paternity test?
A. If you have a Paternity Case with the Oneida Tribe and paternity has not already been established there is no charge for Paternity testing done in the child support office.

NOTICE TO SPECIAL ELECTION CANDIDATES

The Oneida Election Board hereby informs you of the laws as they pertain to campaign signs and campaigning within the Oneida Election Law:

2.5-9. Campaign Signs and Campaigning:
(a) Placement of campaign signs:
(1) Campaign signs shall not be posted or erected on any Tribal property except for private property with the owner/tenant's consent.
(2) No campaign sign shall exceed sixteen (16) square feet in area. A maximum of seven (7) such signs may be placed on a building or on a lot.
(3) No campaign signs shall project beyond the property line into the public right of way.
(b) Removal of campaign signs. All campaign signs shall be removed within five (5) business days after an election.
(c) Employees of the Tribe shall not engage in campaigning for Tribal offices during work hours. Tribal employees shall be subject to disciplinary action under the personnel policies and procedures for political campaigning during work hours.
(d) Enforcement. The zoning Administrator shall cause to be removed any campaign signs that are not in compliance with this law, in accordance with the Zoning and Shoreland Protection Law.
(e) Fines. Violation of the campaign sign restrictions shall result in a fine imposed by the Oneida Election Board in an amount specified in a resolution adopted by the Business Committee.

Per 2.5-9 (3) above, all signs located within any right-of-way need to be moved. If they are not moved, the Zoning Administrator will remove these signs. If any signs are erected in any right-of-way, they may be subject to fines per 2.5-9 (e) of Oneida Election Law.

Birding adventure in Oneida

ONEIDA NATION– Experience all the birding opportunities in the Oneida Nation in this weekend's episode of Discover Wisconsin, developed in partnership with Oneida Nation. Shot over the past year, the episode will air Saturday, June 23 and Sunday, June 24 on the Discover Wisconsin broadcast network, reaching 250,000 viewers across the upper Great Lakes region, including Minnesota, Iowa, Northern Illinois and Upper Michigan. The episode airs state-wide on Fox Sports WI on Saturday morning at 10AM, and locally on WFRV TV-5 Green Bay on Saturday evening at 6:30PM.

Show Host Emmy Fink birding with the Wisneski Family in the Oneida Nation.

The episode will highlight several restored wetlands, Salt Pork Avenue, Bay Beach Wildlife Sanctuary, and the many species of birds you can expect to see in the Oneida Nation. Michelle Danforth Anderson, Marketing and Tourism Director of Oneida Nation is proud of the land the tribe has. "We will be one of the first Native tribes in Wisconsin to offer guided bird watching tours," said Anderson.

Show host Emmy Fink admits she hadn't spent much time birding before this, but sees why so many find it enjoyable. "The rare birds you can spot in the Oneida Nation, such as eagles, canvasbacks and many types of waterfowl make it a birding paradise" said Fink. Show producer, Danielle Bernard has really enjoyed this assignment. "I think viewers will be surprised to see all of the natural beauty we also found while birding, you don't have to be a bird enthusiast to enjoy Wisconsin's wild life and gorgeous landscapes," said Bernard.

Discover Wisconsin is the nation's longest running tourism program, and is celebrating its 25th Anniversary throughout 2012.

Kohl bids farewell to state party Democrats

APPLETON, Wis. (AP) – Herb Kohl, who has represented Wisconsin in the U.S. Senate since 1988, expressed gratitude to fellow Democrats Saturday, who in turn showered the senator with applause and chants after his farewell speech at the state party's annual convention.

Kohl, 77, announced last year that he would not be seeking a fifth six-year term.

Kohl told several hundred Democrats gathered at the convention that the next steps for the Democratic Party of Wisconsin should be focused on preserving the unifying grass-roots support that drove the recall election between Milwaukee Mayor Tom Barrett and Gov. Scott Walker.

The crowd stood and applauded as Barrett introduced Kohl.

"I want to make sure that we all recognize the incredible commitment he's made to this state, not just for the 24 years he's been an elected official, but for his entire adult life," Barrett said. "I want to give my thanks to him."

Kohl told Democrats he was thankful for the chance to serve in the Senate.

"As I look back on my time with you, I am forever grateful for the chance that you gave me, to be your senator," Kohl said. "It has been the greatest honor and responsibility of my lifetime, and I have loved every minute of it."

Kohl has endorsed U.S. Rep. Tammy Baldwin as his replacement. She will likely face the winner of the Aug. 14 GOP primary. Tommy Thompson, a former governor who was secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services under President George W. Bush; former U.S. Rep. Mark Neumann; state Assembly Speaker Jeff Fitzgerald; and millionaire hedge fund manager Eric Hovde are vying for the Republican nomination.

Before serving in the Senate, Kohl helped build his family-owned business, Kohl's grocery and department stores. He served as president from 1970 through the sale of the corporation in 1979. In 1985 he bought the Milwaukee Bucks.

Kohl serves on the Senate Appropriations Committee, Judiciary Committee, Banking Committee, and the Special Committee on Aging, of which he is chairman.

Kohl told Democrats he won't completely disappear from politics.

"I'm not going anywhere," he said. "I'll always be around to help you, and us and the great party that we represent as we serve the people of Wisconsin today, tomorrow and in the decades to come."

The crowd chanted, "Thank You. Thank You," as he finished his speech.

Voters in Mass. city say 'yes' to tribal casino

TAUNTON, Mass. (AP) ~ The Mashpee Wampanoag tribe got a vote of confidence from Taunton residents as the tribe pushes forward with plans to develop a $500 million resort casino.

By a nearly 2-1 margin, voters in Saturday's referendum expressed support for having a casino in their southeastern Massachusetts community, according to the Taunton clerk's office.

While nonbinding, the 7,693-4,571 vote marks the first time local residents have expressed support for a casino project at the ballot box since Gov. Deval Patrick signed the state's new gambling law last year.

The law legalized casino gambling, authorizing the state to license up to three resort-style casinos and giving exclusive rights to a federally recognized Indian tribe to develop one of the casinos if the tribe can reach a compact with the state by July 31. The Indian casino would have to be in southeastern Massachusetts.

Voters in the towns of Freetown and Lakeville recently gave a thumbs-down to a less detailed casino proposal offered by the Wampanoag Tribe of Aquinnah.

"We are overwhelmed by this resounding victory in Taunton," Tribal Council chairman Cedric Cromwell said in a statement. "But let's be clear. This is not just a victory for the Mashpee Wampanoag Tribe, this is a victory for the future of this city, for every person looking for a good job, and for the entire Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

Cromwell said the tribe will be back at work on Monday to finalize a compact with the governor on a project Cromwell said will create thousands of jobs and bring in millions in revenue. Patrick has said he expects negotiations on the compact will be completed by the summer deadline.

But opponents worried the project will bring traffic headaches and increased crime to the city of about 55,000. They contended that backers overstated the economic benefits of casino gambling. One major concern is the location of the proposed casino in the East Taunton neighborhood, close to three schools and sensitive environmental areas, said Tony LaCourse, chairman of the anti-casino group Preserve Taunton's Future.

After the vote, LaCourse said he and others individually will continue to push for the interests of the city and to ensure that any downside to the project will be mitigated. He said the group raised about $1,500 and will donate any left over money to the local schools.

The tribe has an option to buy 146 acres in an industrial park at the junction of Routes 24 and 140, where it has proposed a 150,000-square-foot casino. The land will have to be placed in federal trust. Eventually, the tribe expects to add three hotels, retail shops, conference space and a water park.

Under a host community agreement negotiated with Mayor Thomas Hoye Jr. and approved 6-1 by the City Council, the tribe would make about $33 million in upfront payments to Taunton, including about $15 for traffic improvements. The deal also calls for minimum annual payments of $13 million after the casino begins operations.

Sacred artifacts being returned to NY tribe

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) ~ A central New York historical organization is returning artifacts, including a rare wampum belt believed to be more than two centuries old, to an Iroquois tribe.

The wampum belt will be repatriated to the Onondaga Indian Nation during a ceremony Tuesday at the Onondaga Historical Association's museum in Syracuse, Gregg Tripoli, the association's executive director, said Wednesday.

The historical organization has recently returned human skeletal remains and several sacred ceremonial masks to the Onondagas, whose reservation is south of Syracuse.

The repatriation of the artifacts, first reported by the Post-Standard of Syracuse, was prompted by a now-deceased Onondaga clan mother who told the association's new executive director that his organization had items belonging to the tribe, including the wampum belt.

Tripoli said it's believed all the Onondagas' other wampum belts were lost when American troops destroyed Onondaga and other Iroquois villages during the American Revolution.

The belt being returned to the tribe is made of white and purple shells. Tripoli said it was obtained in 1919 by a Syracuse historian who worked for years with the Onondagas. The belt's origins have been traced back to William Claus, a Canadian government and military official who interacted with the Six Nations of the Iroquois Confederacy in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. The wampum is marked with his initials and the year 1800.

Sid Hill, an Onondaga spiritual leader, said the tribe will find ceremonial purpose in the masks, commonly known as false faces. He credited Dorothy Webster, an Onondaga clan mother who died in 2010, with getting the items returned to the tribe.

"Hopefully, it will send a message to other people to do the right thing," he said. "How much more sacred can it get than to want your ancestors' bones to be at rest? We want the ones we put to rest to have a good journey; all of our teaching about the cycle of life is surrounded by that."

Wind River Tribal College grads learn Arapaho

By Martin Reed
The Riverton Ranger

ETHETE, Wyo. (AP) ~ Karen Smith decided to enroll at the Wind River Tribal College in Ethete to learn about the Northern Arapaho's rich culture.

"I started taking Arapaho classes to learn our language. My siblings, we never spoke the language," said Smith, 49, of Ethete.

After taking the college's four Arapaho language classes, Smith said "it's just barely scratching the surface" with her linguistic knowledge.

"I can pray, I have my own prayer. I can introduce myself and it's motivating my other two kids to begin to learn the language also," Smith said.

Smith was one of two Wind River Tribal College's 2012 graduating class members. She and Layha Spoonhunter, 22, earned associates of arts degrees in Arapaho studies during the sixth annual ceremony last month.

The two joined several others who have taken advantage of the tribal college to learn about subjects unique to the institution while fulfilling their desire to gain a higher education.

"I wanted to learn my Arapaho language and my Arapaho culture, and I always wanted to be a student at the tribal college," Spoonhunter said.

Learning about the tribe's history and culture was a priority for him. "It was a chance to go back and kind of reclaim my heritage," he said.

Wind River Tribal College president Marlin Spoonhunter danced in traditional tribal attire before addressing the audience at the graduation ceremony at the Wyoming Indian High School Tech Center.

"I want to thank our two graduates for persevering through a lot of tough times as they pushed forward to obtain their associates of arts degrees," Spoonhunter said.

In the tribal college's short history, there have been people 19 years old who have graduated up to senior citizens, he said.

"It doesn't matter what tribe you are, you're all welcome. It's also open to non-Indians that want to gain knowledge of both worlds," Spoonhunter said.

Layha Spoonhunter before the ceremony began talked about the two worlds: "We have to balance the non-Indian and Indian worlds."

"Even when we gain our education, we must never forget where we came from," he said.

He noted that Lander Valley High School did not teach the Arapaho language. "That kind of motivated me to go to the tribal college to learn the language and the history of the Arapaho people and the Shoshone tribe," he said.

He hopes to serve as a role model "to further educate our youth to be proud of who we are and stay true to who we are."

Spoonhunter credits the tribal college for providing the knowledge he sought. "It's given me new perspectives, new opportunities to learn about different tribes and understand the legal issues tribes face every day," Spoonhunter said.

Wyoming Indian High School graduate Crystal LeBeau-C'Bearing, who is pursuing three majors at the University of Wyoming, talked about attending the tribal college during her keynote address.

She recalled enrolling in the college with her cousin to take an Arapaho language class. "It was all strictly Arapaho, no English, no writing," she said.

After class she felt amazed at what she had accomplished. "Can you believe we just did that? We spoke a whole hour of Arapaho,'"she recalled telling her cousin.

The next day her mother went to the language class with her. "It stays with me and I gained a very valuable lesson that anything is possible if you stay with it," she said.

Marlin Spoonhunter spoke highly of the accomplishments of the two graduates.

"Layha did a lot for the college. He went to all of the high schools and he stressed higher education and also stressed health and substance abuse issues" facing the reservation, he said.

Both graduates addressed the audience in Arapaho, thanking those who were important in their success.

"I thank my parents for encouraging me throughout the years to get a higher education," Smith said.

"We are Arapaho. We have a language and culture," Layha Spoonhunter said. "It is our responsibility to pass these ways down to future generations and this higher education is important to pass down to future generations."

Tsyunhehkwa products available at Highway 54 One Stop Store

By Jeff Metoxen
Director Tsyunhehkwa

Tsyunhehkwa (joon-hey-qwa), is a culturally and community based agricultural program of the Oneida Nation of Wisconsin. The title of the program Tsyunhehkwa is from the Oneida language and in in a loose translation stands for Life Sustenance. The program consists of two components of Agricultural and Cannery. The Agricultural component is located on a Certified Organic 80-acre site, which provides grass-fed beef, free range poultry, farm fresh eggs and organic produce. The Cannery processes not only Oneida produced products, but items produced in other areas of the Nation and the Community. The program provides you organic white corn products to the community in the form of soup, bread, meal, flour and packaged dehydrated corn.

We sell our products at the Retail Store and now at the Oneida One Stop on Highway 54 in Oneida. The community can now purchase the following products at that location: dehydrated white corn, apple sauce, triple berry jam, dill pickles and bread & butter pickles. We hope to see you there. Supplies are limited and seasonal based.

We continue to work throughout the Oneida Tribe to find ways to bring our products and services to our Community. We would not have been able to continue working on this project & direction without the help and support of many people and areas of Oneida, which include but not limited to: Oneida One Stop 54, Enterprise, Internal Services Division, Oneida Community Integrated Food Systems, and the many people that work at our Tsyunhehkwa Program! We will continue to work toward improving our services and products. Any questions please let us know.

CMN adds Bachelors in Business and Public Administration

KESHENA - The College of Menominee Nation has received approval to add two new degree programs to its academic offering. The majors – a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration and a Bachelor of Arts in Public Administration – were accepted in late May by the College's accrediting agency as meeting curriculum and other standards. Students may enroll in the programs with the 2012 fall semester, which begins Aug. 20 at the College.

Historically, the College has offered students a number of associate degree programs and technical diplomas. In early 2009, it introduced its first baccalaureate degree in Early Childhood/Elementary Education, a teacher education program recognized by the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction.

The ability to award additional four-year degrees is a major step for the tribal college, says CMN President Verna Fowler. "Our faculty and our students have been urging the College to make this move for some time, and the waiting list of students for these two programs suggests that they will be off to a good start."

Dr. Fowler notes that the College's two-year Associate Degree in Business Administration has consistently been among the most popular major, and business graduates account for nearly 20% of all of the College's alumni. A two-year degree in Public Administration was added to the College's curriculum in 2008. The Associate Degree programs in both Business and Public Administration will continue to be offered. These will provide students with an educational ladder on which all credits earned in the two-year programs will be applicable to completion of the baccalaureate for students who choose to continue.

"It is a model we use in other programs," Fowler notes. "It gives our students great flexibility in being able to complete their studies in manageable blocks. If they wish, they can seek entry-level employment immediately after earning the Associate credential, but they are assured that they can easily continue or return later for the Bachelor's Degree without a loss of credits."

The 120-credit Business Administration Degree from CMN will present the basic knowledge and problem-solving and critical thinking skills common to most business programs but also address the opportunities and challenges of indigenous communities, tribal enterprises and minority entrepreneurs. Public Administration, a 121-credit major, is designed to prepare graduates for employment in non-profit and community organizations and human services, crinminal justice, health services and other public sector settings. A total of 11 faculty and adjunct faculty members will deliver courses on both campuses and in a weekend-only component designed to accommodate working students.

Approval of the programs was granted by the Higher Learning Commission of the Northcentral Association of Colleges and Schools, the regional accrediting agency that reviews all colleges and universities in the upper Midwest.

Students interested in the Bachelor's Degree programs, or any courses of study at CMN, should apply for admission before the Aug. 3 deadline. Fall semester classes begin on Aug. 20 on both the Keshena campus, N172 State Highway 47/55, and the Green Bay metro area campus, 2733 S. Ridge Road, Green Bay.

Becker Recognized as U.S. Kids Golf Certified Instructor

ATLANTA ~ Mark Becker of Green Bay, WI, has earned the title of Certified Instructor, as announced by U.S. Kids Golf.

Becker has been a junior golf instructor for 16 years and is currently The PGA Director of Golf at Thornberry Creek at Oneida, where he has been for eight years. "Watching kids grow up learning the game, to appreciate the game and learn life lessons along the way, is amazing," Becker said, "I am very happy and fortunate to have the privilege to share this game with them." A U.S. Kids Golf Certified Instructor has received extensive training in teaching golf to kids ages 12 and under. Each instructor will provide a high-quality and fun experience that features game-based learning methods and a willingness to engage parents.

"Parents of young golfers can expect that a Certified Instructor will bring great enthusiasm to instruction," said Dan Van Horn, President/CEO of U.S. Kids Golf. "They understand that kids learn best while having fun." The Certified Instructor program was launched in March of 2012 with seminars in Atlanta, Chicago, Dallas, Denver, Los Angeles and Philadelphia. There were 170 PGA and LPGA members who participated in the seminars.

Oneida celebrates 40 years of Powwow memories

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

The Oneida Powwow is heading for its 40th year on Friday, June 29. Thinking back on the four decade history makes Ben Vieau want to paraphrase an old tune sung by Bob Hope.

"Yaw^ko for the memories," he said.

Vieau helped out with security at the request of Father Kiefer when the powwow was held on the baseball diamonds behind the Holy Apostles Church during the 60's.

"He called me up at three-o'-clock in the morning and that's how I got going," said Vieau.

Back in the early years, running the powwow was a volunteer effort.

"We used to have to go out and find food. Nothing was donated, the tribe didn't give us anything," said Vieau.

Lloyd Powless, Pow Wow Committee Chairman, noted the scale of the event has been the biggest change over the years.

"It's gotten so big, and you need more and more people to do all the parking and registrations and all the things that need to be done, and we use … at least six to eight departments of the tribe … and of course a lot of volunteers." said Powless.

Pow Wow Committee Vice-Chairwoman Tonya Webster remembers being in the tiny tot dances as a child and participating as a fancy shawl dancer growing up.

"I just know it was fun and being out there with

Tribe ends sole source contracting for Oneida owned businesses

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

A distinct advantage for businesses owned by Oneida tribal members is no more after the Oneida Business Committee rescinded resolution BC-11-24-10-C.

The resolution, passed in 2010, required all tribal departments, entities, and programs to utilize businesses owned by Oneida tribal members first, and then Indian-owned businesses. Non-tribal businesses can be used if no tribal businesses were available or grant funds required an open bid process.

With the lack of competition costs have risen. The Legislative Reference Office presented a case in which the tribe spent more in three months with an Oneida vendor than they would have in a year if they accepted the contract from a non-Oneida vendor.

With an already extremely tight budget, OBC Chairman Ed Delgado feels every tribal dollar should be stretched to make the greatest impact and sole source contracting isn't doing that.

"Our resources are meant to serve the people for the buildings we need, the homes we need, and the services we need. Indian preference was set up some time ago to give Indian vendors an advantage, that's great and has worked for years," said Delgado before the vote to rescind the resolution was taken. "What I'm hearing from sole source is were not getting non-Indian bids to the extant we used to. I support Indian preference but sole source has cost the tribe a lot of money."

OBC Councilman Brandon Stevens thinks sole sourcing has advantages but some problems have arisen. Stevens supported rescission of the resolution as work is currently being done to strengthen Indian preference for tribal businesses.

"There are some good things going along with (sole sourcing). We need to make sure the tribe is protected. Also, we need to make sure Oneida businesses can do the job the level of expectation of the tribe. Sole source contracting wasn't working the best it should have been," Stevens said.

OBC Treasurer Tina Danforth feels the policy lacked guidelines and needs polishing.

"Some of the large businesses that have resources and expertise have taken advantage of the sole source by the types of bids they submitted," said Danforth. "I totally agree that there are things that need to be amended. I can support rescinding this and come back at a later date as a more complete document."

Chairman's office utilizes volunteerism

By Travis Cottrell
Kalihwisaks

Beginning in September of 2011 community members have been volunteering their time and energy to the Oneida Tribal Chairman's office.

Each volunteer dedicates, on average, a few hours one day out of the week.

Roy Skenandore, and his son Barry Skenandore, are among those lending a helping hand at the office located in the Norbert Hill Center.

"They have us doing all sorts of jobs that need to be done. We do filing, deliver letters, posters, type letters, answer phones, paper shredding, notices, looking up maps and directions, general putting things in order or helping out where it's needed," said Roy Skenandore.

Roy and Barry Skenandore dedicate their Tuesday afternoons to their volunteerism.

Barry uses his Tuesdays off from his job at Aspiro to aid his father; who retired last year from Surveillance

Pending repairs force indefinite closing of Holy Apostles Church building

By Yvonne Kaquatosh
Kalihwisaks

It is a known fact that the Holy Apostles Episcopal Church in Oneida is in dire need of repairs. Falling mortar from the structure recently, is testament to the urgency of those repairs.

"Masonry fell from the bell tower near the front door last Saturday," explained residing priest Fr. Robert Clarke. He went on to say that no one was hurt and a building contractor was on sight to evaluate the damage shortly thereafter.

The Vestry voted last night (June 19) to close the doors indefinitely until a general contractor deemed the structure is safe to use while under construction, he explained. "This Sunday will be the first Sunday Services will be held at the Parish Hall," said Fr. Clarke.

The louvers (slats) on the bell tower are made of wood and have seen better days. Plans are to upgrade to an alloy said Fr. Clarke.

So far one General Contractor has bid for the job. Another contractor is due to bid on the job very soon. "Hopefully by next week, we'll have a general contractor in place," he added.

Church services will resume in the building once a contractor is hired, and proper scaffolding is in place. This is necessary primarily to protect parishioners.

A fair estimation for repairs is approximately $100,000.00 to $130,000.00 for the exterior. The formal process is to send a letter to the Bishop to secure funding for the repairs, which Fr. Clarke was preparing today. Funding for the repairs will be through the Diocese in Fond du Lac.

Youth summer program begins

Kali photos/Travis Cottrell

The Three Sisters Youth Summer Program began Monday, June 18, 2012 at the Three Sisters Community Center.

The program provides youth of the neighborhood opportunities to interact and participate in fun activities such as painting (above) and Wii sports games (right). The program also offers healthy activities, safety programs, and weekly field trips.

From 1A/Volunteers

at the Oneida Casino.

The unique part about these volunteers is the fact that they are the first group of volunteers to be utilized in the office of an Oneida Tribal Chair.

"Most of the volunteers are former employees and have since retired and they are all enrolled Oneida," said Chairman Ed Delgado.

Chairman Delgado explains that wanted to use community member's willingness to help the Oneida Tribe.

"Using volunteers is something that I had in mind to do, utilizing peoples volunteerism and allowing elders the chance to contribute. Kitty (Melchert, the Chairman's Administrative Assistant) has plenty to do on her own so it's nice to have the extra hands around. They really help out," Chairman Delgado added.

Roy Skenandore states how the work benefits him, as well as he believes all of the involved volunteers.

"This is something to fill our time. But I get a sense of fulfillment out of it. The fact that I'm contributing to the community, helping, and it keeps me up to date on what is going on in the tribe," Skenandore said.

The volunteers who currently donate their time in Chairman's office are: Yvonne Metivier (lead), Patsy Beaulieu, Karen Coffey, Simon DeCoteau, Ramona Kurth, Ruth Melchert, Linda Powless, Kevin Shikla, Larry Skenandore, Roy Skenandore, Barry Skenandore, Noreen Smith, Beverly Somers, Nadine Escamea, Floyd Silas Sr.

all the other tribe. I loved doing it and being out there and listening to the drums," she said.

Powless enjoys the grand entries that feature all the dancers and color guards.

"They're just fun to watch, and it's fun to meet all the people, especially the other tribal members from other tribes, they come there just about every year. Just renew acquaintances again. I think just the fellowship between the tribal people is really a lot of fun," he said.

Webster stated the powwow is adding southern dance categories for adults this year and will feature more specials.

"It's just grown as far as vendor booths, dancers, singers, spectators overall, but for the most part it's still the same concept, but it's just gotten bigger over the years," she said.

Powless remembered having to build a temporary arbor for the drum groups every year on the grounds behind the Norbert Hill Center because they were still used as ball diamonds.

"We finally got it ourselves, and started putting permanent stuff everywhere, planting trees, etc." he said.

However, there's debate on whether to move the powwow to a site with more elbow room. The current area is boxed in by a series of steep hills.

"It's a nice grounds and people like it, but it's pretty hard on the elderly and for getting emergency equipment in there, and it's hard to get anything more than we have because there's just no room anymore," said Powless.

Vieau believes the limitations of the grounds are part of its charm.

"I like the way things (are), they (are) compact, you knew you were going to have so many people and that was it. (In a new location), you can just keep adding on, but the bigger it gets, the harder it's going to be to control," he said.

Whether the powwow stays where it is or moves, one thing will stay the same, according to Powless.

"We just want everyone to come out and have a good time, and hopefully it's not too-too hot, but it usually is," he said.

Passing On...

Lammert, Caroline
September 25, 1931 – June 19, 2012

Caroline Lammert, age 80 of Rhinelander, passed away on Tuesday, June 19, 2012, at Taylor Park Nursing and Rehab. She was born on September 25, 1931, in Oneida to John Thomas and Celinda Stevens (nee Denney).

Caroline was a longtime resident of Rhinelander. She enjoyed spending time with her family, especially with her grandchildren. Caroline loved to play bingo and trips to the casino. When at home, she was always putting together a puzzle. She also enjoyed going on long car rides, fishing, and picnics.

Caroline is survived by her six children, Pamela Stone of Oneida, Vicky Jo Lammert of Chattanooga, TN, Cindy Moore and Rebecca (Donald) Meinert both of Rhinelander, Joel (LaDonna) Lammert of Odessa, TX, and Roger Lammert of Rhinelander; 21 grandchildren; 15 great grandchildren plus one expected in August; and a sister, Betty Lou Johnson of St. Louis, MO.

She was preceded in death by her parents; a daughter, Cindy Mae Lammert; a grandson, John Carl Whitefish; and a granddaughter, Ashley Martin.

Funeral services for Caroline will be held at 12 p.m. (noon) on Friday, June 22, 2012, at the Carlson Funeral Home (715-369-1414 / www.carlsonfh.com) in Rhinelander with Chaplain John Uhlarik officiating. Visitation will be from 10 a.m. until the time of service on Friday at the funeral home. Burial will take place at 3:30 p.m. on Friday in the Oneida Tribal Cemetery.

Turner, Sophia
January 17, 1937 – June 15, 2012

The Turner family sadly announces the passing of their mother Sophia Marie Turner (nee Freese) of Eagle WI, age 75.

She is survived by four of her children: Tom Turner, Judy (Turner) Hayter, Steph Turner, and Jodi Turner. She is also survived by six grand grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Her husband Glenn Turner preceded her passing in 1997, along with her son (and transgender daughter) Dan (Janet) in 2001.

Sophia was born to Violet (nee Cornelius, raised Wheelock) and Ellsworth Freese.

She is the granddaughter to Jacob Cornelius and Percy Mae Wheelock.

Sophia is survived by many cousins, nephews, nieces, grandnephews, grandnieces, great grandnephews and great grandnieces.

As a licensed daycare operator, she is known as "grandma" or "auntie" to countless children.

Included in her surviving cousins are Fred Muscavitch and Marion Muscavitch of Oneida.

In Loving Memory

Bryan R. McLester

on his 31st birthday - June 27, 1981

A star is born, one that shines the brightest
Brought up to be the best he could be
Loving everyone in his path
And in return we loved him back
But now he's gone and all we have are memories
Let's hold on to these memories
And keep them fresh in our mind so he will Not be forgotten
I loved him then, I love him now
With this love I will hold on

Wisconsin manufacturer struggles to recruit workers

MARINETTE, Wis. (AP) ~ A defense contractor that's one of northern Wisconsin's largest employers is struggling to recruit recent high school graduates for some of the region's best-paying jobs.

Marinette Marine Corp. says it is holding open 40 positions in its training program for welders and other shipyard jobs, hoping to attract recent grads from the area around Marinette and nearby Menominee, Mich.

The Milwaukee Journal Sentinel reported Sunday that the company has reached out to nine schools, but only seven recent graduates have applied for the training program, which begins in July. While the company prefers homegrown talent, it may widen its search.

A typical employee at the shipyard can earn $30,000 to $40,000 a year. Some earn more than $60,000 with overtime. Yet, like many companies, Marinette Marine is struggling to persuade people to enter the skilled trades, including welding, pipefitting and electrical work.

Each Navy littoral combat ship Marinette Marine makes takes about 40 months to build. The 10 ships under contract will keep the work going for nine to 12 years, and longer if Marinette wins additional ships in a new round of bids in 2016.

The company has added 600 jobs in the past 12 months, and now has 1,400 employees.

Right now, the future looks "pretty rosy for us," Marinette Marine President and CEO Charles Goddard said. "We can easily handle 100 or more hires out of high schools in a year."

Grower: Door County cherry crop has all but failed

FISH CREEK, Wis. (AP) ~ Door County in northeastern Wisconsin ranks among the country's top cherry producers. But this year's crop could be the pits.

Bob Lautenbach of Lautenbach's Orchard in Fish Creek says this is the worst year he's ever experienced, and his family has grown cherries all his life.

He tells WLUK-TV the 2012 cherry crop in Door County has all but failed. He says the county would normally produce about 8 to 10 million pounds, but this year the prediction is about half a million pounds.

That's because the warm March woke up the trees early, but several nights of frost then killed off the buds.

Door County growers say they'll try to keep their crop in the county this year, for tourists and locals to enjoy. Prices will be higher.

The LRC attorney will call the SEOTS offices every other Tuesday between the hours of 1PM and 4:30 PM to speak with Oneida members there who request legal advice. The next advice line is scheduled for June 26, 2012.

Due to the distance between Milwaukee area and Oneida where the LRC is located, the attorney will not be able to represent members in Milwaukee area courts. She currently represents members in the Oneida Tribal Judicial System and local area State Circuit Courts (Outagamie and Brown County).

Because of the complexity of laws, attorneys are usually not skilled and experienced in all areas of the law. The LRC attorney will be able to advise in the areas of Family Law, Criminal Law, Citations, Guardianship, Probate, and Social Security disability claims.

If there is interest in this service, the SEOTS and LRC team will determine what the next step will be for the Milwaukee area in regard to future member legal representation.

There is no charge for this tribally sponsored service.

The LRC is here in Oneida for tribal members who need to discuss their legal problems, receive legal advice or representation in local courts.

The Legal Resource center is located at Ridgeview Plaza, in Suite 7, 3759 W. Mason St., Oneida, WI 54155

Discipline of the Good Mind

By Freida J. Jacques
Onondaga Nation

Thousands of years ago, at a time when our people were in the midst of wars and pervasive violence the Peacemaker came and brought us a message of love and peace.

One of the gifts he brought to us at that time was the concept of the Good Mind (Ganigonhi:yoh). As children grow up in our Nation they hear the words "use a good mind," many times. I felt that a deeper explanation of what using the Good Mind means would be beneficial and this is how I explain it.

When the Europeans first came to this continent they were surprised to see that the Haudenosaunee did not have a police force or many laws to make the people behave themselves. I feel that the use of Ganigonhi:yoh was so pervasive that it was unnecessary to have a police force and many laws.

I refer to the Good Mind as a discipline, rather than just a description of a person's state of mind. First of all Ganigonhi:yoh recognizes that we are connected to the good, that we have access to a loving source of good thoughts. Each and every one of us has many, many thoughts each day. With discipline we can become aware of each thought, see its substance, realize its intent, and then determine if you should follow and build on that thought. This realization that you have a will over your thinking is key. You have a choice to follow your thoughts based on a loving purpose (the Good Mind) or let go of thoughts and certainly not build upon thoughts steeped in anger and judgement. In most cases it takes thousands of thoughts to get to a point where you are harboring hate for someone and capable of violence. This discipline helps us redirect our thinking to more constructive, kind and loving thoughts. Since our actions follow our thoughts, what we are doing with our lives will be kinder and gentler. Since the words we speak follow our thoughts, we also have a way of affecting the world around us with words that will reflect the Good Mind.

By observing our thoughts we may begin to identify areas in our lives that may need to be reflected upon and healed. Watch out for over reactions to your experiences and also under-reactions for they may help identify places that need healing. Consider being more willing to look at these parts of yourself and seek out people who work as healers to help you work through old hurts and anger. Stifled anger never goes away, it lingers in the background ready to show up to add to your next angry moment. This can make for more dramatic moments than you may want. Work through old anger and life will be less painful.

While we actively become aware of our thoughts, especially those that have a kind and loving intent; we naturally allow ourselves to become spiritually in tune with the Creators wishes. This allows us to use our talents to fulfill our purpose on Earth. This is my motivation to follow the Good Mind, when it is time to leave this Earth I would like to feel that I fulfilled the purpose that the Creator sent me here to accomplish.

As Haudenosaunee, we give thanks to all the parts of Creation that make life possible here on Earth (The Ganonhannioh). This keeps us connected with the very vital purpose of all living things. So our respect, love includes all parts of Creation. This understanding helps us use the Good Mind in our interactions with the natural world around us.

It has been said many times that change begins with the individual. If you want change to happen, begin by changing yourself. The discipline of the Good Mind is a process anyone can use to help him or herself change. Much can be accomplished with prayer, love and patience.

Thank You

Thanks to Ed and Kitty, Arlawin and Dale Wheelock and workers for the safety of the children and people by providing a safe path to the ball diamond.

Thank you,

Unfortunate Behavior

My name is Paul Barber and it has been brought to my attention that my grandson was involved in some behavior, which we find unacceptable. We try to involve him with family outings when we can. On this occasion we took him to enjoy the fireworks display and he had asked if he could play some basketball and we agreed. This is where the bad behavior occurred. The following is written in his words.

"Hi, my name is Joseph O'Leary, I apologize for what I said. I'm so sorry for what I said. I'm writing because I swore at a lady. It was wrong because it is not nice to disrespect elders or people. The reason why I swore was because she almost hit me. I will respect elders. You have to be nice, listen, be respectful, be kind, and helpful. I was at the family carnival. I was playing basketball and a lady honked her horn so she wouldn't hit me then I swore at her. I will not do it again. Consequences will be you can get shot, beat up, or murdered. I'm so sorry, very, very sorry. I apologize."

Joseph O'Leary

We are greatly ashamed of this type of behavior from someone in our family. We have not ran across this before, hope the offended lady will accept our sincere apologies. We try to bring up our children in a good way and realize there is no excuse for something like this to happen. We hope his letter made him stop and think about his actions in the future. If there is something else you would require of him, he can be available to you. He is young but a hard worker and off of school. You can contact me at (920) 423-3079.

June 13 Oneida Business Committee meeting

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Travel spending weaved a path of contention throughout the Wednesday, June 13 Oneida Business Committee (OBC) meeting.

Present: Chairman Ed Delgado, Vice-Chairman Greg Matson, Treasurer Tina Danforth, Secretary Patty Hoeft, Councilmembers Vince DelaRosa, Brandon Stevens, Melinda Danforth, David Jordan. Councilman Paul Ninham joined the meeting after the lunch break.

Secretary Patty Hoeft started the meeting with a request to add discussion of the OBC's spending on travel to the agenda. Hoeft stated the council budgeted $65,000 for travel in the October to September budget year, and has spent $60,000 so far.

"The Treasurer (Tina Danforth) has spent almost $20,000 in travel and (Councilman) Brandon (Stevens) has spent almost $9000 on travel," said Hoeft who stated each officer was budgeted $10,000 and each councilmember $5000.

Chairman Ed Delgado ruled her comments out of order, but the OBC voted to add the discussion to the agenda.

Oaths of Office

After approving the agenda, Hoeft gave the oath of office to Edwin Wallenfang for the Pow Wow Committee.

Minutes

The OBC approve meeting minutes from a May 18 emergency meeting and from the May 23 OBC meeting.

Resolutions

A group of OBC members and Oneida managerial employees participated in a Governance Analysis for Native Nations (GANN) session May 15-16. From the session, eight action plans were chosen (see page 1B). Councilwoman Melinda Danforth supported sending the GANN work to the Quality of Life subcommittee.

"It might be general, but that's the reason you put it under Quality of Life so that they would be able to support or held define what that could be to help the teams along," she said.

The OBC voted to appoint Quality of Life Sub Committee as primary team to implement the GANN work.

The Committee voted to approve the fee-to-trust application for W2700 block of County Road EE.

The OBC took a little deviation from the agenda to allow Barb Cornelius to thank the OBC, Oneida Health Services and other departments for the care and help her family received for her husband's lung transplant.

"My husband was diagnosed with pulmonary fibrosis in August of 2008. That turned our life upside down. This is the first time in my entire life I needed to utilize all the aspects of the services that the Oneida Tribe offers," said Cornelius.

Returning to the agenda, the OBC approved a revenue allocation plan for 2012 which will allow for the payment of per capita this fiscal year.

Directors and Managers quarterly reports

Comprehensive Health Division Manager Debra Danforth and Medical Director Dr. Ravinder Vir gave a report on the Comprehensive Health Department, informing the OBC on technology needs for record keeping, and giving an update on the new Oneida Resident-Centered Care Community (ORCCC). The OBC directed the Chairman's office to meet with the Internal Services Division Director and Health Center Team to address their Information Technology (IT) needs.

Board, Committee and Commissions

Jeanette Ninham of the Oneida Child Protective Board stated there was a need for more foster families.

The OBC accepted the report along with reports from the Anna John Nursing Home Commission and the Oneida Nation Commission on Aging.

Standing Committees

The OBC accepted the Legislative Operating Committee (LOC) May 2 minutes.

A great deal of discussion was expended over on creating a Health Board Corporation.

"By creating a corporation, we would put Indian Health Services funding, which is $20 million, in jeopardy," said Councilwoman Danforth. The update was accepted.

The Committee Okayed a request for a tribal environmental response law fiscal analysis, and accepted an Emergency Management and Homeland Security law update review memo.

The OBC approved the June 8 Finance Committee minutes and an e-poll, and approved the Community Development Planning Committee minutes for April 5.

General Tribal Council

The Committee deferred discussion on a petition from Yvonne Metivier that directs the OBC/Oneida Housing Authority to reduce all rentals for Tribal members to the next OBC meeting. The OBC accepted reports from the Legislative Reference Office concerning two petitions; one to mandate the Oneida Business Committee to review, amend and implement a new complaint process for Oneida Childcare, and another from Mike Debraska concerning the GTC meeting schedule, stipend, and per capita.

New Business/Requests

The OBC allowed the Gaming Division to post department trainer position.

The committee dissolved in its official capacity the Oneida Housing Strategic Committee and formed a new subcommittee work group which reports directly to the Community Development and Planning Committee.

A National Center for Senior Transportation Peer Mobility grant was approved by the OBC.

The Committee approved a $3 an hour bonus to be paid to Retail Employees who work during the 2012 Oneida Powwow at a cost of $22,500.

Travel

The OBC accepted four travel reports from Councilman Vince DelaRosa: ICDGB Block Grant Training, May 29-30, 2012, Chicago, IL; Manufacturing Matters Conference, May 8-9, 2012, Milwaukee, WI; South Eastern Oneida Tribal Services office hours and community meeting, May 18-19, 2012, Milwaukee, WI; and South Eastern Oneida Tribal Services (SEOTS) office hours, community meeting and Red Gala event, April 13-15, 2012, Milwaukee, WI.

When time came to approve a travel request for DelaRosa to travel to SEOTS June 22-23, a motion was made by Secretary Hoeft to defer all tribally funded travel requests until the Business Committee can figure out an alternative solution by the next meeting. The motion passed.

The OBC approved travel for Treasurer Danforth to speak at a LEAD program at Duke University, June 25, 2012, Durham, NC as the travel was paid for by Native American Finance Officers Association (NAFOA).

Additions

A request for Chairman Delgado to travel to a reception for Congressman Ron Kind was deferred to the next OBC meeting.

The Committee approved travel for Treasurer Danforth to Native American Bank meeting in July 17-19 provided the bank pays for her travel.

The OBC accepted a report on a request from a group called We the People which created an online petition addressing child poverty. The item was deferred to legislative affairs to research how work with the group.

Action in open session on items from Executive Session Discussion meeting of June 12, 2012

Reports

The OBC accepted a New York land claim settlement update and moved to approve the recommendation request to pull a trust application for the two acre plot in New York State.

The OBC accepted the Counsel report and approved option two contained within the memorandum from the Oneida Law office.

The OBC approved the April 19, 2012 minutes, and an Internal Audit April report with attachment A.

The Committee approved a Roulette Audit and lifted the confidentiality requirement allowing Tribal members to view the audit, as it did for the Let it Ride Audit, Three Card Poker Audit, Card Games and Poker, Craps Audit and Closeout Report: IRS

Vice-Chairman's Corner...

Greg Matson
Vice-Chairman

THE ISSUE: Community Building OR IS IT REALLY COMMUNITY REBUILDING?

The Observation:
June 9, 2012
Norbert Hill Center

I would like to talk about recent events in our community about our community and my concerns. I was able to once again attend the event put on by the Oneida Tribe at Norbert Hill Center on June 9, 2012. We have referred to this event as The Family Carnival, Taste of Oneida, and now the Oneida Community Fest. I have had the pleasure of attending all but one.

The Disappointment

My disappointment in this event began when the decision was made that this event should be scaled back. Please keep in mind this event was once on the list as one of the "Best In The Bay" events, it was recognized as having the "Best fireworks show in the valley area" and was attended by as many as 10,000 people from Oneida, Green Bay, De Pere, Pulaski, Seymour and other areas we are constantly trying to build relationships with. It was like an investment in our selves.

To begin, I arrived at the NHC grounds early Saturday morning and seen a number of community members as well as tribal employees already there and focused on getting this event together. It was already hot, and the forecast was to be even hotter, but this did not deter them. As the day went on so did the activities of the volunteers and employees making sure everything was up and running. Slowly attendees began to show up...very slowly. There was food, fun, singing, dancing, prizes, animals, hard work and conversation... everything needed to build/rebuild a community... however missing it seemed was the community. There was just a limited amount of community members. Please understand, I am not writing these comments with an intent to judge, scold or question anyone's weekend activities. I am simply trying to figure it out. What do we want? Who is our community? And how do we get there? As I stated earlier, this event has had thousands of people attend in the past and even though I left prior to the fireworks display due to another engagement, I only saw a few hundred in attendance. This is what is confusing for me, almost saddening. Where were we?

The Encouragement

However, there is a bright side. I witnessed Mike Metoxen, Rich Figuerao, Kirby Metoxen, Waylon Denny, Mitch Metoxen and Michelle Danforth, doing what they could to make this a good event even with the limitations they faced. I saw the Wisneski Boyz helping along with John Powless, Duane and Apache Danforth at the NFL Play 60 area. I saw Debbie Danforth and Sandy Schuyler at the first aid tent again, Leanne Laes, and many others at the game and prize area. Miss and Jr. Miss Oneida along with Jim Stevens and Neal Cornelius giving golf cart rides, and many of the same volunteers as I have seen for years, dedicating their time and effort to try and make this and many other events a success. I apologize for not knowing all the names, but I would like to say Yaw^ko to each and every one of them. They as community members and their mind set are the reason we move forward in many ways. The local talent that showed up and performed music and dance were "world class" in my mind. Yaw^ko to you all!

The Need

WE NEED TO DECIDE ARE WE COMMUNITY BUILDING OR REBUILDING...THINK ABOUT IT. WHAT DO WE HAVE? AND WHAT DO WE WANT? WHAT DO WE NEED? HAVE WE LOST SOMETHING? PERHAPS WE ARE REBUILDING WHAT WE ONCE HAD... MAYBE WE NEED TO ADMIT WHERE WE ARE ...WE DEFINITELY NEED TO KEEP TRACK OF WHERE WE ARE HEADED IN OUR EFFORTS AND OUR RELATIONSHIPS TO EACH OTHER...WE HAVE OPTIONS AND WE HAVE CHOICES...WE NEED TO CHOOSE WISELY. I believe this can only happen with good honest conversation with a good mind approach.

Some may think I should report out what it is I am doing "on the hill" in regards to governmental issues and I can write about that if nobody else is, but I think those issues are well covered in our press. I am trying to focus on getting more communication within the community. Please rest assured that we are in every State, Local, and Federal meeting we can be in, and we talk to many, many public officials from around the country and our voice is always about the needs of the Oneida People.

OBC Forum...

Shekólih,

For this article, I will be sharing information with you on two items: first, an update on Oneida's proposed Constitutional amendments and second, an update on the proposed Code of Ethics.

Update on Constitutional Amendments

I have some exciting news on the progress of the proposed constitutional amendments ~ we are ready to start moving forward with a federal Secretarial Election! The final component we have been waiting for from the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) has been addressed; this means the community will finally be able to vote on whether we should make the following changes:

1. Remove the Secretary of Interior from oversight & approval role for the tribe,
2. Lower the voting age from 21 years to 18 years of age,
3. Change our official name to Oneida Nation,
4. Formally add a judicial branch to our constitution, and
5. Eliminate the first Monday meeting requirement for GTC meetings held in July and January.

Many of you participated at the historic General Tribal Council (GTC) meeting in August 2010 where the GTC approved moving forward with a Secretarial Election. Since that time, our efforts have been focused on ensuring all of the appropriate processes have been completed, as well as clarifying last minute questions with the BIA. Our next step will be to submit Oneida's formal request to the BIA to proceed with the official calling of a Secretarial Election.

Many have asked "what is a federal secretarial election?" The federal Secretarial Election is basically a series of referendum questions asking if you agree with the proposed constitutional change, in our case, it will be items 1-5 as listed above. While this process is rather straight forward, it will require the Oneida membership to meet number thresholds that will require tribal members to be diligent in registering to vote and actually submitting their vote to be counted. We have been sharing this process with you through community forums as well as at GTC meetings and here in the paper. As we proceed, we will continue our efforts to educate our tribal members, so please watch for additional information in articles, on the members-only website, facebook and community forums. You may also email your questions to constitution@oneidanation.org.

Melinda Danforth
Councilwoman

Finally, a component of this process will require a federal election commission be put in place to manage the election. The Chair of the federal election commission will be a representative from the BIA, and additional members will be selected by the tribe to participate. If you are interested in participating, please fill out an Application for Boards, Committees and Commissions which can be obtained by request from the Tribal Secretary's office or found on Oneida's website under the "Government" tab, then scroll down to "Boards, Committees & Commissions" on the left hand side. Completed applications can be submitted to the Tribal Secretary's office and will be taken until 12:00 noon on Friday, July 20, 2012.

Code of Ethics

As I have shared with you in previous articles, my office has been working to revamp the tribe's Code of Ethics. Five community forums, comments in the facebook group and a survey were utilized to complete the first draft. I want to thank all of you who participated and provided suggestions to us as we completed this process, we received almost 75 comments! The first draft was accepted for processing by the Legislative Operating Committee on June 6, 2012 and has been sent for a preliminary analysis. Once the analysis is completed, it will help us better understand any changes that need to be made and why, this is where your comments and feedback will once again be needed. So, in preparation, a second round of forums will be starting in late July so please watch for the notices which will be posted in the Kalihwisaks, internet and on facebook. If you haven't seen the draft yet and would like a copy to review, please contact me or my assistant, Lisa Summers, either one of us will be happy to forward you a draft. I look forward to keeping the dialogue going and we are striving for a final draft to be completed and implemented in late summer/early fall.

As always, please feel free to share your thoughts and ideas by emailing me at mdanforj@oneidanation.org or by calling my office at 920-869-4461. You can also contact my assistant Lisa Summers at lsummer2@oneidanation.org or 920-869-4478.

Oneida Nation Child Support Agency
Shakoti?nukú·lale? Latiksashúha?
Topic: Paternity FAQ's

Q. If I signed a voluntary paternity acknowledgement, can I withdraw it?
A. Once a Voluntary Paternity Acknowledgment is filed, the parents have 6o days to withdraw or rescind it. Contact your case manager with any questions regarding this.
Q. If I suspect a child is not mine, can I request a paternity test?
A. If paternity has not been established by signing a Voluntary Paternity Acknowledgment or a court has not issued a Judgment of Paternity, then paternity testing can and should be done.
Q. How much does it cost to have a Paternity test?
A. If you have a Paternity Case with the Oneida Tribe and paternity has not already been established there is no charge for Paternity testing done in the child support office.

Upcoming Events and Updates:

- See us at Oneida Farmers market from 3:00-5:30pm for information and a child-friendly activity.
- The start of the Outagamie County transfer process was initiated in May 2012. Call 920-490-3700 and ask for Michelle with any questions regarding the transfer.

Please keep address and contact information current with the agency in order to avoid any delay in the transfer.

Dispute over North Dakota Fighting Sioux nickname nearing end

By Dave Kolpack
Associated Press

FARGO, N.D. (AP) ~ North Dakota residents say they've had enough of a decades-old controversy on its flagship university's nickname.

Voters overwhelmingly decided Tuesday to dump the University of North Dakota's Fighting Sioux moniker, an issue that has put its athletic teams at risk for NCAA sanctions and divided sports fans, alumni and even tribes. But even for the winners, the outcome was bittersweet.

"This is a political matter with no celebration," said Tim O'Keefe, executive vice president and CEO of the UND Alumni Association and Foundation and the man who led a campaign to retire the nickname. "We've said all along that this is not an issue about preference. Clearly if that were the case, the name would be staying. The price of keeping the name is simply too high."

Some American Indians from the state's two namesake tribes lobbied for the name and logo to be kept, arguing that they reflected a positive image for their tribes. Eunice Davidson, an enrolled member of the Spirit Lake tribe and member of the committee to save the nickname, was too devastated to talk about the result, her husband Dave Davidson said.

"I will be honest with you. I'm heartbroken and I'm ashamed of this state," Dave Davidson said. "On the other hand, there are a lot of wonderful people we have met in the course of this."

Voters in Tuesday's North Dakota primary were asked whether to uphold or reject the Legislature's repeal of a state law requiring the school to use the nickname. The vote sends the matter back to the state's Board of Higher Education, which is expected to re-retire the nickname and American Indian head logo that seven years ago was deemed hostile and abusive by the NCAA.

The final tally showed about 68 percent in favor of retiring the nickname, but the divide was still evident at the voting booths. Only one county voted to save the nickname. Billings County, in far western North Dakota. Residents there voted 150-148 against retiring the name.

Lynn Megal, a 59-year-old stay-at-home mom in Bismarck, said she voted to keep the name. Scott Neumann, a 59-year-old high school orchestra teacher in Bismarck, said the moniker is offensive and voted to dump it.

"I'm Irish. I don't have any complaints about the Notre Dame Fighting Irish," Megal said.

Said Neumann, "I'm happy to see the opportunity to get rid of it. Native American logos have been abused in too many schools around the country."

Robert Kelley, the UND president, said the vote will allow the college to focus on its students.

The group that collected petitions for the ballot measure has said it will pursue another vote in the fall to make Fighting Sioux part of the state constitution. Sean Johnson, spokesman for the nickname group, said the results were disappointing but said they plan to continue gathering petitions.

"We don't have the option of forfeiting," he said. "There are more things at stake than some unfounded concerns about the athletic program."

Advocates for retiring the nickname say the issue is hurting the athletic department in recruiting and scheduling. Some fear it could affect the school's standing in the Big Sky Conference. Supporters of the name say coaches and administrators are exaggerating the harmful effects, including the conference threat, and don't believe the NCAA sanctions are a big deal.

The NCAA banned UND from hosting postseason tournaments and said the school could not use the nickname or logo in postseason play, or else it must forfeit those games. The men's hockey team wore Sioux-logo jerseys in the regular season but switched sweaters in the playoffs.

A settlement agreement with the NCAA called for UND to retire the nickname unless it received approval from both the Standing Rock and Spirit Lake Sioux tribes by the end of 2010. Only Spirit Lake passed a resolution supporting the name. Standing Rock has not held a vote.

The law forcing the school to use the name and logo was approved in March 2011 but was repealed in a special session after NCAA representatives told state officials that it would not budge on sanctions. Johnson's group then collected the necessary signatures for the ballot measure.

Johnson said his group was outspent 25-to-1.

O'Keefe said the alumni association spent about $250,000 on the campaign to retire the nickname, all through donations. His group is prepared to launch a similar effort against a possible constitutional amendment, but O'Keefe is calling on the nickname backers to stand down.

"All it does is hold the University of North Dakota hostage and create more division," he said.

Court won't stop lawsuit against tribal casino

WASHINGTON (AP) – The Supreme Court won't stop a lawsuit seeking to shut down a Native American casino in Michigan.

The high court on Monday upheld a lower court decision that would allow casino foe David Patchak to sue to shut the casino down.

The Match-E-Be-Nash-She-Wish Band of Pottawatomi Indians, also known as the Gun Lake Tribe, opened a casino in Wayland Township, 20 miles south of Grand Rapids. Patchak challenged how the government placed the land in trust for the tribe, saying that the move was illegal because the tribe had not been recognized by the government in 1934 when the Indian Reorganization Act was passed.

A federal judge dismissed his lawsuit but the high court in an 8-1 ruling decided it could move forward. Justice Sonia Sotomayor was the only dissent.

Oneida Business Committee Approves Governance Analysis Action Plans

On June 13, 2012, the Oneida Business Committee passed a resolution affirming its formal support of the action plans generated at Oneida's recent Governance Analysis for Native Nations (GANN) session. The resolution also lays out how Oneida will work to engage tribal members in the ongoing development and implementation of those plans, which collectively seek to improve Oneida governance and strengthen the delivery of programs and services to its people.

Leaders, employees and community members of the Oneida Tribe gathered at Thornberry Creek in Oneida on May 15-16, 2012 to take part in the GANN session, conducted by the Native Nations Institute for Leadership, Management and Policy (NNI) at the University of Arizona. During the two-day self-assessment exercise, participants: (1) learned about the key findings of NNI's research on Native nation building, (2) examined Oneida's current system of governance, and (3) engaged in intensive deliberations to identify Oneida's long-term priorities and determine what governance changes the tribe needs to make to turn those priorities into a reality.

"I was moved by the energy in the room. The group seemed ready and willing to roll up their sleeves and get down to work," said participant Michele Doxtator. "Discussions about our future should be ongoing, and with more member involvement. It was great to have experienced facilitators bring us together. Even more important were our own Oneida facilitators, who will be able to move this work forward, so more people can participate."

Participant Danelle Wilson also commented, "I was honored and humbled to have been a part of the GANN experience. I learned so much from the NNI faculty and am grateful for the two days they gave to Oneida. Yaw^ko (Thank you) to Tina Merdanian (Oglala Sioux) and Eileen Briggs (Cheyenne River Sioux) for the beautiful song they sang to us on the second day. The entire NNI team said they felt hopeful and inspired from their first day with us as they witnessed the passion and drive on the part of the GANN participants. My hope is that we, the people, can advance the initiatives developed through this process, to help 'change the conversation' for Oneida and continue rebuilding our Nation."

During this two-day session -- which represents another milestone in Oneida's ongoing strategic planning and implementation process -- participants broke into small groups to identify five top priorities for Oneida and then a detailed objective and action plan to advance each group's number-one priority. The following are each group's top identified priority, followed by a specific objective/action plan that can be achieved within a year's time:

- Ensure ongoing support for GANN Action Plans (objective: secure formal commitment from the Oneida Business Committee to implement GANN Action Plans. COMPLETED: JUNE 13, 2012)
- Engage the Community to adopt a vision, destination and strategy to get there (objective: Ten percent of Oneida population (18+ years provide feedback to engagement opportunities)
- Develop a strategic plan for the tribe (objective: build on the strategic plan tools that already have been developed)
- Rebuild trust within the Oneida Nation of Wisconsin (objective: unite our citizens so that we are proud to be Oneida and can leverage our assets to sustain a strong economy and community)
- Create a financial plan that supports nation rebuilding (objective: develop a budget that reflects the priorities identified in Oneida's strategic vision and not the status quo)
- Citizen investment in the Oneida Nation (objective: move from a sense of entitlement to citizen investment)
- Prepare citizens to work together for nation building and financial accountability (objective: educate General Tribal Council on the financial health of the nation in a way that everyone understands)
- Prepare citizens to work together for nation building (objective: educate General Tribal Council on the process of conducting business)

The GANN session was limited to 50 participants by Native Nations Institute. NNI recommended that 40 participants include all Oneida Business Committee members, senior administrators, economic development staff, planners, the judiciary, corporate leadership, and community leaders. Oneida was able to secure 10 more slots for Oneida staff facilitators, who will help the OBC continue the Nation building work and bring the conversation a broader audience. # Cardinals off to a fast start in Little League Baseball

By Kyle Casper
Recreation Supervisor

May 29th games

Dylan Doxtater, Tommy Kaquatosh, Kennedy Kaquatosh, and Xavier Summers all collected hits to lead the Eagles to an 11-7 victory over the Wildcats. Peter Penass and Ciarra DeGroot each had 2 hits while David Doxtater-Hill hit a triple for the Wildcats.

In the second game the Cardinals used a 7 run first inning en route to a 12-2 victory over the Bears. Lindsey Doyen, Ramon Neosh, Fox Christjohn, Elijah Danforth, and Jay Doyen were the leading hitters for the Cardinals. Seth Charles collected the lone hit for the Bears.

May 31st games

The Wildcats jumped out to a 7-1 lead and then held off a furious Hawks rally to hang on for a 7-5 victory. Herlinda Hernandez led the Wildcats with 2 hits while Ryan King and Kyle Betters each doubled for the Hawks.

In the nightcap the Cardinals used a 6 run first inning during their 13-4 victory over the Eagles. Gavin White and Eli Metoxen had 2 hits apiece for the Cardinals. Dylan Doxtater had a hit and 2 runs scored for the Eagles.

June 5th games

Kyle Betters had 2 hits and Ryan King added a double to lead the Hawks to a 12-7 victory over the Eagles. Tommy Kaquatosh was the leading hitter for the Eagles with 3 hits while Kennedy Kaquatosh added a triple.

The Bears used some good pitching and a 7 run third inning in their 9-2 victory over the Wildcats. Eli Thomas, Merlyn Metoxen, and Seth Charles were the leading hitters for the Bears. Herlinda Hernandez had 2 hits for the Wildcats while Peter Penass added a double.

June 7th games

The Bears used a 7 run first inning and were led by 2 hits from Seth Charles and another from Jacob Jordan and Kameron Jorgenson in their 15-5 victory over the Eagles. Miguel Hernandez and Tommy Kaquatosh were the leading hitters for the Eagles.

Jaydee Johnson had 2 doubles while Lindsey Doyen, Mercedes Ackley, and Clifford Bodway all tripled to lead the Cardinals to an 8-4 victory over the Hawks. Jack Mehojah, Ryan King, Kyle Betters, and River Hawk were the leading hitters for the Hawks.

Oneida Housing Authority
Notice for Community Input on
FY 2013 Indian Housing Plan

The Oneida Housing Authority will be meeting with the Oneida Business Committee/Tribally Designated Housing Entity on Wednesday, June 27, 2012 regular OBC meeting at 9 a.m. to obtain approval of the FY 2013 Indian Housing Plan (IHP).

This agenda item is a requirement by HUD for the submittal of an IHP to be submitted to HUD in Chicago by July 1, 2012. This is for the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin formula HUD funding allocation. Last year the HUD formula allocation was $3,738,660 for NAHASDA housing work activities.

OHA is taking the initiative to leverage $250,000 from the IHP as a match of funding for an USDA Section 515 Multi-Family loan program application for $1 million dollars. OHA has been awarded the FY 2012 Indian Community Development Block Grant of $600,000 for the infrastructure off Overland Road. This site is designed for one and two bedroom single family apartments of approximately 40 units. Instead of building three apartment units the leveraging of the IHP grant OHA would be able to build closer to 16 apartment units at the Overland Road development site in 2013. This would be in addition to the FY 2013 development budget for 16 apartment units scheduled for construction at the site. Leveraging of IHP funds with other programs will enable OHA to obtain more housing units for the Oneida community.

Your attendance, input and comments at the OBC meeting on June 27, 2012 would be appreciated.

Wis. officials announce dual-enrollment agreement

WAUSAU, Wis. (AP) – Wisconsin officials are launching a statewide initiative to help high school students earn college credits.

Education leaders say the new program would reduce the cost of a college degree and help students be more prepared for college.

The Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction is partnering with the University of Wisconsin Colleges on the program. Details were announced Tuesday at UW-Marathon County in Wausau.

Under the program, high school students could take classes at their high schools while earning UW college credit. Courses would be taught in person and online.

But WAOW-TV reports some details are still being worked out, such as who will pay for everything.

Gov. Scott Walker says he supports this program. Both sides are committed to starting a pilot program by the 2013 school year.

Camp KARE receives $25,000 grant

GREEN BAY, Wis. – American Foundation of Counseling Services (AFCS) is honored to have received a grant from the Cornerstone Foundation of Northeastern Wisconsin to support Camp KARE an educational summer program for foster youth.

Camp KARE is offered through AFCS's Foster Care services. The focus of the program is to enhance each foster child's social and independent/transitional living skills, as well as provide a fun, safe and productive summer vacation.

Specifically, Camp KARE aims to prepare foster children for independent living after they reach the age of 18 and "age-out" of our program. Many youth age out of the foster care system without family, emotional connections, financial assistance, or positive prospects for self-sufficiency.

The program works on various independent living skills, including:

- Financial Literacy
- Employment
- Housing
- Education

The camp runs for nine weeks, beginning in June and ending in August. It is offered at no charge to AFCS foster children, however, open enrollment is also offered. If interested in learning more please contact Ryan Good at (920) 370-3058 or rgood@afcscounseling.org.

About AFCS

*American Foundation of Counseling Services was established in 1965 by George Kress and Norman Vincent Peale with the original goal of providing training and counseling education to clergy and congregations in northeast Wisconsin. Today, AFCS provides outpatient counseling to individuals, regardless of their insurance coverage or ability to pay. The organization is also a state-licensed child placing agency, providing intensive out of home placement for children that have been a victim of abuse or neglect or who have delinquency issues. AFCS continues to work closely with the faith community in the area by providing pastor leadership groups, premarital counseling workshops, marriage enrichment seminars and individual consultation to clergy and church leadership teams. KODU GAME LAB

Coming This Summer to the CEC – Microsoft Kodu Game Design Workshop

If you like to play video games, you might already be thinking about creating your own games someday. Maybe you have an idea for a great storyline, great characters, or maybe ideas for how things should work. Don't wait until "someday" to create your own game – take the Microsoft Kodu Game Design Workshop at the CEC and learn to create video games right now!

Microsoft Kodu is easy to use game design software that already has built-in characters and actions and the ability to create complex landscapes for the action to take place in. No computer programming skills are necessary, because the games are created using graphical "building block" commands instead of code. You won't be ready to design the next Halo or Zelda game when we're done, but you will have a good idea of the elements that go into a video game, and how to make them work for you!

The 2-day Microsoft Kodu Game Design Workshop for Youth and Adults will be held at the Oneida Nation Community Education Center on Monday and Tuesday, July 9 – 10, from 1:00 – 4:00 PM.

Then use your newly developed programming skills some more by taking the Lego Logo Robotics Workshop and learning to create and program robots made from Legos!

LEGO

Coming This Summer to the CEC – Lego Logo Robotics Workshop

The Lego Logo Robotics Workshop will let participants build with Legos, and then show them how to use the Logo easy-to-learn computer programming language to make their creations to come to life! It's Alive! Bwa-ha-ha-ha! Schools and colleges have been using Lego Logo Robotics for years to introduce beginners to computer programming, and now it's coming to this easy and fun workshop at the CEC! This workshop is also a good follow-up to the Microsoft Kodu Game Design Workshop. The Lego Logo Robotics Workshop will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, July 11 – 12, from 1:00 – 4:00 pm at the Oneida Nation Community Education Center.

Ojibwe tribe, WI community discuss land issues

LA POINTE, Wis. (AP) ~ A Lake Superior tribe and its local community are forming a committee to discuss the possibility of reclaiming reservation land.

The Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa settled on Madeline Island in Lake Superior's Apostle Islands. Tribe chairman Mike Wiggins says his people consider the island sacred.

However, it also has high-priced homes where hundreds of visitors stay in the summer. Some of those homeowners have leased land from the Bad River Band for decades, but Wiggins says it's possible the lease won't be renewed when it's up in 2017.

He tells Wisconsin Public Radio he'd like to see that area opened up for tribal people.

La Pointe town chairman Greg Nelson hopes the newly formed tribal-relations committee will help both sides keep the lines of communication open.

200 years later, Chicago battle provokes new fight

By Don Babwin
Associated Press

CHICAGO ~ Just because a battle happened in 1812 doesn't mean there isn't anything left to fight about.

Chicago Alderman Edward Burke has learned that for himself as he's pushed for a "Day of Remembrance and Reconciliation" on Aug. 15 to mark the 200th anniversary of the Battle of Fort Dearborn, which left about 60 Americans and 15 Native Americans dead.

From offering a resolution about the battle that had much more to say about soldiers than Native Americans to a speech in which he described in grisly detail how Indians scalped and tortured their enemies, Burke has angered and offended some Native Americans. At one point he suggested it was time to "smoke a peace pipe," but that phrase also got him in trouble.

"This is what kids are learning today," said Joseph Podlasek, executive director of the American Indian Center of Chicago. "These types of stereotypes and myths are several generations old, and people tend to believe them."

Burke's comment about a peace pipe took an item sacred to Native Americans and reduced it to the status of a movie prop, Podlasek said, citing it as yet another example of the kind of trivializations and distortions of Native American traditions and history that he and others have spoken out against, including during a decades-long fight over the University of Illinois' now-retired mascot, Chief Illiniwek.

There's long been dispute between Native Americans and mainstream historians about what happened at Fort Dearborn and in other battles involving American Indians. Three years ago, the city of Chicago changed the name of a park at the approximate location to Battle of Fort Dearborn Park, abandoning the former reference to what happened at Fort Dearborn as a "massacre."

The fight happened during the War of 1812 between the United States and Britain. As U.S. soldiers and civilians evacuated Fort Dearborn, they were attacked by Potawatomis allied with the British.

Podlasek didn't dispute the outcome of the battle or the number of dead but said there's no evidence to support the violent descriptions of atrocities recited by people like Burke. There's no evidence scalps were taken at the fort, Podlasek said, and he questioned how much can be known about what was, in the end, a 15-minute battle.

"How come every time native people win it's a massacre, and when we lose it's just a war?" he asked.

For his part, Burke, whose fascination with history is evident to anyone who has ever heard him quote everyone Ralph Waldo Emerson and Albert Einstein at council meetings, tried to soothe bruised feelings.

After Podlasek wondered why the resolution detailed information about the soldiers, including some names, but little about those on the other side, Burke added the names of tribes and leaders who supported a treaty letting the U.S. acquire land for the fort. The resolution approved by the City Council also includes a plea to city officials to "encourage thoughtful and inclusive discussion and education involving Native American history and culture."

On Monday, after a speech to a Chicago civic club about the battle, Burke said he made the changes in an effort to "get the Native American contingent on board." Then he delved once again into the battle's gruesome details, talking about wounded soldiers who were "tortured to death" and "possibly burned ... at the stake."

Podlasek said he remains bothered by what he sees as the alderman's spreading of misinformation about the battle.

"How would he feel if I said that kind of thing about his heritage?" he asked.

Creeks, lawyer disagree on Supreme Court ruling

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) ~ The Poarch Creek Indians and an attorney for a county commission trying to tax the tribe disagree about the impact of a U.S. Supreme Court decision.

The court ruled Monday that a lawsuit seeking to shut down a Michigan tribe's casino can proceed in court. At issue is whether the casino could be built on tribal land taken into federal trust after the Indian Reorganization Act of 1934.

State Sen. Bryan Taylor, who is a lawyer representing the Escambia County Commission, says it's a green light to tax the tribe because the Creek land went into trust after 1934.

Tribal attorney Venus Price told the Press-Register that it's a narrow ruling that does not impact the tribe's land.

Escambia County is home to the tribe's largest casino and hotel.

Tips for Garage Sale Shopping

Summer is in full swing, and many people take advantage of the nice weather to either host or shop at a garage sale. Whether you call them yard sales, garage sales or rummage sales, they're a great opportunity for shoppers to save money and sellers to get rid of unwanted items without accepting a complete financial loss. Before you hit the sales this weekend, consider the following tips for garage sale shopping:

Plan where and when to shop. It may seem like common sense, but where and when you go shopping should depend on what you're shopping for. For example, if you want higher-quality items, you're more likely to find them in more affluent neighborhoods. If you're looking for a big ticket item - furniture, TV's, etc. - get to the sale early because these items typically sell quickly. If you're looking for the absolute lowest prices, get there just before the sale closes because the seller will be more willing to discount items that haven't been sold yet.

Have your money ready. Remember to bring along small bills. Often the seller will not accept personal checks. If you've purchased a large item that you need to pick up later in a different vehicle, obtain a receipt or pay with a check to prevent confusion later.

Try before you buy. Especially with electronics and mechanical items, be sure to plug them in and test them before purchasing. When buying anything battery-operated, be sure to check the battery compartment for corrosion, too.

Talk to the seller. If you're looking for a specific item, ask the seller directly if they have it. You'll avoid wasting time and potentially buying items you don't need. Once you've selected an item to purchase, don't be afraid to haggle or name a price for a group of items.

Know what not to buy. There are certain items you should never buy at a garage sale, no matter how much you might save. Bike/motorcycle helmets, child car seats and infant cribs should all be bought new. There's no way of knowing if they've been damaged and poorly repaired or if they no longer meet safety standards. If you have any concerns about purchasing items, refer to the Consumer Product Safety Commission website at www.cpsc.gov, where you can find lists of recalled items and unsafe products. Shoppers should also avoid used shoes, because the sole will be molded to a differently shaped foot, which can cause discomfort when walking.

Shopping at garage sales is a great way to save money on clothing, books and other items. Remember to carefully inspect each item before you buy, and don't forget to tip the kid at the lemonade stand on your way out!

American Indian tribes alarmed by IRS tax audits

By Suzanne Gamboa
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) ~ John Yellowbird Steele, chief of the Ogalala Sioux Tribe, said the Internal Revenue Service is failing to recognize tribal sovereignty by trying to tax government-funded assistance such as housing, school clothes and burial aid that tribes give their members.

Speaking to a Senate panel Thursday, Steele invoked the treaties between the U.S. and his South Dakota tribe as he criticized the IRS for what seems to be a stepped-up effort to tax tribal assistance.

The IRS over the years has narrowed its tax exemptions for federally, state and locally funded social benefits for tribe members so that only those with significant financial need do not have to pay taxes on the benefits, tribal leaders said.

The agency has been meeting with tribes to develop and clarify rules on what is taxable under the General Welfare Doctrine, which governs whether the assistance tribal members receive should be counted as income and be taxed. But as the meetings have gone on, tribes are getting notices that they are being audited, Steele said.

Steele said the tribal assistance helps members raise their living standard and in some cases survive. He accused the IRS of launching a fishing expedition, saying his tribe has been asked to provide documentation on payments to employees, council and tribal members; petty cash and bank records; health care benefits to tribal members and employees, and Pow-Wow prizes, among other things.

The IRS has been reviewing per capita payments that tribes make to members from trust money raised through tribal businesses.

All of this comes as the Obama administration has won accolades from Native American tribes and Alaska natives for recognizing their sovereignty and requiring federal agencies to do a better job of explaining changes in policy or adoption of new policies. IRS officials said many of the concerns have been raised as the agency has been meeting with tribes to develop guidance on the exemptions.

From 1B/Governance Analysis

to effective governance, sustainable development, and healthy communities. Increasingly, the leaders and key decision-makers of those nations have expressed the need for an instrument that enables them to assess the structure and effectiveness of their governance systems, and the ability of those systems to achieve their priorities for the future. Seeking to answer this need, NNI developed the GANN tool. The Oneida Tribe was one of seven Native nations selected by NNI and funded through a grant from the Bureau of Indian Affairs Office of Indian Energy and Economic Development to evaluate their nations and formulate plans to strengthen their nation-building efforts.

The GANN process to help the Oneida Nation determine how to move forward to a brighter, collective future. It is the hope of the participants that what was learned and discussed through this experience will serve as a catalyst for us to conduct visioning sessions with our Oneida members tribal-wide.

To learn more about the GANN process, the priorities and action plans developed by Oneida participants through that process, and how Oneida tribal members can contribute to their implementation moving forward, please contact Melanie Burkhart at mburkhar@oneidanation.org, 920-869-4352 or Danelle Wilson at dwilson1@oneidanation.org, 920-869-4389. # Summer fun at the Oneida Libraries

The libraries just finished their "Have a COW" promotion--in which both libraries had a C.O.W. or "check-out week". We competed with each other for which library could get the most check-outs (Oneida Community Library won) and which library could get the most new patrons (Green Earth Branch Library won.) Everyone that checked anything out or got a library card was entered into a contest for a Kindle! The program ended with the start of the Summer Reading Program on Monday. Tuesday, a birthday girl, Arianna Two Crow, got to pick out the winner of our contest, and the winner was Glen Kelly, Jr.! We thank everyone for participating and using our libraries!

The Summer Reading Programs have begun at both Oneida libraries: the Oneida Community Library, and the Green Earth Branch Library! At the Oneida Community Library, we've already read 10 books this week, and had lots of fun with crafts and activities! The Summer Reading Program is 1-3 pm Monday through Friday, except July 4. The program runs now until August 31,2012, so come in when you can and hear stories, play games, enjoy some arts and crafts.

At Green Earth Branch Library, the Summer Reading Program goes on throughout the day and runs through August 17, 2012! You can drop in any time and there will be fun activities to do for the day! Kim is organized for the whole summer and you can pick up the June arts and crafts themes and schedules at either library so you know the Green Earth Branch Library activities.

LEAPS (Library Enrichment and Parenting Skills) program is a new and wonderful program conducted by Ana Balbuena from BIA-Early Intervention Birth-5 that is also happening at both libraries: 10 am at the Green Earth Branch Library, just like the year 'round Toddler Time, and at 3:00 pm at the Oneida Community Library! Same great program at two locations to serve our Nation better! For more to do, there is also the 2012 Toddler Twilight Time from 6-7 pm on Thursdays at Oneida Community Library on June 21, July 19, and August 16. The teens have activities as part of the 2012 Own the Night Teen Regime on June 14, July 12, and August 9. In August, the teens will also be a part of an Oral History Project with the Olihwayo: Oneida History Program.

On July 18, both libraries are having a special summer performance! At 11 am, Miller and Mike will be performing at the Green Earth Branch Library. They are former Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus clowns! They will have a repeat/encore performance at the Oneida Community Library at 2:00 pm.

Drop into any of these programs any time you would like to, no sign-ups are required. However, if you can, please take the time to register your children for the Summer Reading Programs, as those are the numbers we turn into the state so we can obtain more funding from them for our services.

Speaking of funding, we received official notification that we were awarded the IMLS (Institute of Museum and Library Services) Native American Library Services Basic Grant for 2012 (Fiscal Year 2013.) Yay! It's a $7,000 grant, but every bit helps us to do wonderful summer programming, after school programming, and get great books, movies, and technology into our libraries to serve our Nation!

Oneida Farmers Market set to begin year at new location

By Bill Vervoort
OCIFS Coordinator

We are pleased to announce it is Farmers Market time again. What a great way to spend a nice summer day; buying fresh produce right from the farmer, having a brat or a burger and taking a little time to socialize with the people around you. The Farmers Market will start on Thursday, June 28th and run every Thursday throughout the summer. It will start at Noon and go to 6pm, this will give those people that have to work a chance to visit the Market right after work. Due to Hwy 54 road construction, the Farmers Market moved ½ mile west of the Hwy 54 Oneida One Stop in the Oneida Business Park near the water tower.

The 2012 Oneida Farmers Market runs every Thursday from June 28 through October 11 from Noon - 6:00pm

The Oneida Farmers Market has about 30 - 35 vendors selling fresh produce, hand made arts & crafts, Native American jewelry, flowers, pet supplies, and much more.

Educational demonstrations will be every Thursday from 3pm to 5pm. Topics will be: rain barrel making, raised garden beds, composting and vermiculture, learn about medicinal oils & herbs, learn how to plant a garden, etc.

The Oneida Falling Leaves 4-H

The Oneida Falling Leaves 4-H brat booth is always open for the Farmers' Market. Serving delicious Oneida Black Angus beef burgers and brats starting at 11:00am.

Oneida Farmers' Market Bash

Each year we have two bashes, the first will be on July 19th and the second is on August 16th.

- Live Music
- Door Prizes
- Raffles
- Raised straw bale gardens
- Games and prizes
- Cooking Demonstrations
- Golf game

For more information about the Oneida Farmers' Market or the Oneida Falling Leaves 4-H club please contact Grace at 494-4006 ext. 1920, or Bill at 496-7423 or Wvervoor@oneidanation.org You can also visit our website at www.oneidanation.org/ocifs.

The Oneida Farmers Market is set to begin Thursday, June 28. The market has moved to the Oneida Business Park, just west of the prior location on Highway 54. The market runs from noon until 6 p.m. and features about 35 vendors.

Oneida Comprehensive Health Division Management

Appointment shortage for counseling

There is a nationwide shortage of physicians in Primary Care and Psychiatry. We currently have Provider vacancies in Family Practice, Internal Medicine and Psychiatry. We are faithfully attempting various strategies to meet our community's healthcare needs:

- We have contracted with a firm to assist with Provider Recruitment.
- Oneida Business Committee approved Nurse Practitioner and Physician Assistant positions.
- The Health Division is working on a Provider retention plan.
- We are negotiating with a local health system to provide urgent care services.

We seek your continued support and patience as we recruit additional providers to become fully staffed.

You can assist us in our goal of improving healthcare access by:

- Keeping your scheduled appointments
- Providing us at least 24 hours' notice if you are unable to keep your appointment
- Providing complete and accurate information at registration

Thank you

Construction, roundabouts greet powwow traffic

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

The road to the 40th annual Oneida Powwow may be highlighted by orange cones and heavy construction equipment.

Travelers from all directions will encounter construction activity as major roads such as Highway 29 and 41 are undergoing work. Drivers utilizing I-43 will encounter roadwork on the Leo Frigo Bridge east of Oneida. Drivers entering the area using Highway 29 will see numerous shoulder and lane closures west and eastbound. Travelers using Highway 41 will encounter construction on 14 miles of the highway in Brown County with the exit to Highway 54 being closed.

The biggest wrench for powwow travelers may be work being done on Highway 54 in Oneida.

The installation of a new bridge over Duck Creek, wider lanes along with roundabouts has caused traffic delays in the Oneida area. The stoplights at the intersection of Seminary Road and Highway 54 have been removed and replaced with a four-way stop. The north leg of Seminary road will be closed until mid-September. During the work Highway 54 will remain open until completion in November.

With construction work comes the need for driver patience.

"First of all slow down," said Wisconsin Department of Transportation

The Oneida Police Department will direct traffic during peak times at the intersection of Hwy. 54 and Seminary Road during the powwow.

Getting ready for the 40th Annual Oneida Powwow

Department of Public Works employees updated the electrical boxes while others set up tents for the 40th Annual Oneida Powwow.

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Preparations are underway for the 40th annual Oneida Powwow being held Friday, June 29 to Sunday, July 1. Oneida Department of Public Works employees were out updating the electrical boxes while other workers set up shade tents around the dance grounds behind the Norbert Hill Center (NHC).

According to Pow Wow Committee Vice-Chairwoman Tonya Webster, there will be some new items like a southern style dance category for adults and a father-daughter special, along with a lot of old favorites.

"It's still the same concept, it's just gotten bigger over the years," she said.

Before the powwow, the Woodland Indians Art Show will being at 5:00pm in the NHC. Lil' Miss Oneida will be selected at a pageant starting at 5:30pm on the dance grounds. Grand Entry begins at 7:00pm. See page 9B for more Oneida Cultural events.

Tribes start receiving settlement money

HELENA, Mont. (AP) – Some Indian tribes have started receiving their shares of a $1 billion settlement with the U.S. government over mismanagement of their money and trust lands, while others are waiting and remain undecided on what to do with their windfall.

The agreement between the government and 44 tribes across the nation was announced in March to settle claims of money lost in mismanaged accounts and royalties from natural resource development.

The tribes sued in an attempt to receive an accounting of the Interior Department's management of the trust funds and to learn how much had been lost.

Their claims dealt with tribal trust funds and not individual trust funds, which is addressed in the $3.4 billion class-action settlement led by Elouise Cobell, the Blackfeet woman who died last year.

Blackfeet chairman T.J. Show said that tribal leaders will soon distribute $9 million of the $19 million his tribe is due to receive. That's about $550 per person, which Show said will help residents on a reservation where the unemployment rate is between 70 and 80 percent.

"I believe it will be an economic benefit to the tribal members to use as they see fit, whether it be for college kids going to school or parents just needing to feed their child," Show said.

The other $10 million has been earmarked for investment in projects such as a 90-room hotel to be built on the reservation, Show said. The Great Falls Tribune first reported the Blackfeet tribe's plans to disburse the settlement money.

Ganka says onʌki?wah to Oneida Nation High School

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Oneida Nation High School (ONHS) Principle Bob Ganka is retiring June 28 after eight-and-a-half years of heading the high school, making his time in office the longest of all the ONHS principles. Ganka stated his long tenure helped build trust with the students, staff and community.

"We needed structure, we needed organization, and stability and those are the things that I brought by the fact that I've been here for a while. There's been continuity, kids know what to expect," said Ganka. "I've seen a lot of change in our kids. I think we have a more clear understanding of what our mission is. I built a sense of trust with the kids which seems to take a long time, and takes a long time to get a sense of trust with the adults in the community. Once they realize you're here and you do what you say and say what you do, then it seems to come together, but it takes some time to build that trust. I think our kids are more responsive now. I think our curriculum is better, I think our staff is better."

Ganka is proud of the reading program he implemented in response to test scores that indicated it was a problem area.

"I just didn't think our

Community discussion meetings

The Oneida Business Committee held community discussion meetings for the July 2 General Tribal Council meeting. Two meetings will be held Thursday, June 28: Norbert Hill Center, 10:00am to 12:00pm, and Social Services Community Room, 6:00pm to 8:00pm. Above: Brenda John-Stevens hands out information.

(WisDOT) Regional Communications Manager Kim Rudat. "Follow the signs, be alert and leave distance between you and the vehicle in front of you."

Increased traffic along with construction may lead to bottlenecking but the Oneida Police Department will be visible to ensure the safety of drivers.

"We will be patrolling all of the construction sites to ensure the safe travels of all. Parking will not be allowed in the construction zones," Said OPD Police Chief Rich VanBoxtel. "We will be monitoring the traffic flow during the busy times and direct traffic as needed."

New roundabouts in the area have been completed and may be a new experience for some powwow goers. The WisDOT offers roundabout navigation tips.

Approach and entry

- Choose the proper lane for multi-lane approach roadways. Slow down and yield to pedestrians in the crosswalk.
- Look to the left. Traffic in the roundabout has the right of way.
- Approach the yield line and enter the roundabout when there is an adequate gap in the circulating traffic flow.
- If another car is waiting at the yield line ahead of you, do not stop in the crosswalk. Keep the crosswalk clear for pedestrians.
- Bicyclists are permitted to ride within the roundabout. Please share the road and do not pass a bicycle in the roundabout.

Exiting the roundabout

- Once you have entered the roundabout, proceed counter-clockwise to your exit. You now have the right of way.
- As you approach your exit, turn on your right turn signal.
- Exit the roundabout, yielding to pedestrians in the crosswalk.

Above all, VanBoxtel recommends following traffic laws and take your time to ensure safe travel.

"Slow down and leave space between you and the vehicle in front of you. The roadways will not be ideal, but it will be open. With the large concentration of folks that are trying to get to the powwow grounds, the area will be congested and they are narrow. Use an alternate route if possible. Our main concern is the safety of our community," he said.

From 1A/Ganka says onʌki?wah

reading scores were where they should be. We had a lot of data, and we didn't really use the data that well. I think we're using the data now to drive the curriculum.

Our reading scores are going up, and it's just because we practice it, we've made it a point of emphasis," he said.

Ganka noted some contrasts within the school. He stated its weakness is that it's a small school, approximately 75 students, but its strength is it's a small school where students can get individual attention. The Class of 2012 consisted of 19 seniors, yet nearly 400 people attended the graduation ceremony, a testament to the support Thunderhawks receive from the community. He advises the future principle to keep the community in mind when tackling issues.

"I think that's going to be important for the new person, whoever who he or she might be, is to listen to the needs of the community and realize the role that the school plays within the community, and help the school to grow," he said.

Ganka said he enjoyed his time as principle and learning about Oneida culture and history.

"I'll miss the kids the most. That interaction with kids keeps you going. Some kids have a real difficult time; it's very rewarding to see a kid do something right because … you helped him realize there's another way," he said.

CLARIFICATION

In the story "Pending repairs force indefinite closing of Holy Apostles Church building" on the cover of the June 21 Kalihwisaks, it was reported that funding for the repairs would be through the Diocese in Fond du Lac. Rather, the funding for the repairs will be through the Davis Trust if approved by Bishop Jacobus is in his capacity as Trustee. The Davis Trust was established from a bequest of J. Howard Davis and Mildred S. Davis on their deaths for use by the Church of the Holy Apostles for its ministry among the Oneida Tribe of Wisconsin. Information received was not clearly explained at press time. The Kalihwisaks apologizes for the inconvenience.

Loretta Says... Things My Dad Taught Me

Loretta Metoxen • Oneida Tribal Historian

Ongoing Kalihwisaks Column • Providing a connection to the past

I am the oldest of six siblings. Sister Shirley is next and two years younger. Then, in order, are Kenneth, Patricia, Jerry and Linda. Dad lost his right arm at Hobergs Paper Mill on May 13, 1941. He was hospitalized for a month. On my ninth birthday, June 8, I went to St. Vincent's Hospital to visit him. The farm, machinery and animals were purchased with his settlement money from the Wisconsin Industrial Commission.

One of the first things I learned to do was milk cows. This is a chore needing to be done every day of the year, once in the early morning, and again before supper time in the evening. In order for the cows to be contented and produce the maximum amount of milk, they need to be provided with hay, grain and silage and have access to plenty of water at all times. We did not have electricity, so we had to pump the water by hand and haul it to the barn from the pump shed. The process was to place a wash tub between two cows and fill it with buckets of water. When they drank as much as they wanted, we dragged the tub in the manger over to the next two cows.

Dad purchased a big team of dapple gray horses called Cap (for Captain) and Colonel. They weighed 2200 pounds each (a long ton). Cap was gentle and easy going. Colonel was a little high strung. They were involved in an accident in front of a freight train when first acquired. Colonel never forgot that and was always jumpy and ready to run when surprised by loud engines and machinery. I first drove this team when hitched to a wagon to load hay. At first, we loaded loose hay with three-tine forks. Later, we put the hay in windrows with a dump rake (also pulled by the horses) and picked up the row with a hay loader hitched to the hay wagon. This team pulled every kind of machinery: plows, spring-tooth, riding cultivator, mower, and grain and corn binders. They also pulled the heavy duty rope on a series of blocks and tackles hitched to the hay fork to lift the hay from the loaded wagon to the track in the hay loft where the hay was dropped with a smaller trip rope. I drove this team for every kind of work. My hands and fingers were always calloused.

Machinery always needed to be fixed. The mower and grain binder had sickle bars on them with individual blades affixed along the length of the bar. When the blades were broken or worn out, they needed to be replaced. They were held in place with two rivets. The rivets had to be punched out. A new blade was riveted in its place by pounding the rivets sufficiently flat to avoid hitting the guard teeth. The sickles were powered by a pitman rod when the machine was pulled forward. The mower sickle could be taken out of gear when not cutting hay. Sometimes the pitman rod broke and had to be replaced. The binder had canvases attached to long thin wooden slats. The slats often came off and the canvas wore out with use. There is a knotter on the grain binder that ties a knot in the binder twine to secure each bundle of grain. Again wear and tear on the knotter meant getting a new piece.

Teeth on the spring-tooth , cultivators and riding cultivator became round with use instead of sharp and pointed to do a good job. The teeth on the riding cultivator were affixed by two bolts, which when removed, allowed the teeth to be turned upside down, so the reverse sharp points would be utilized. When they, too, wore down, they were taken off the machine, fired up in the small forge we had, and pounded on the anvil into a point again. This could occur just so many times and then it was time to buy new teeth.

Dad sent me down to a lower corn field near Duck Creek on the Nick Bronz farm (later belonging to the Tony Van Schyndel family). The corn was tall and heavy and the chain links that fed the cut corn out kept breaking. There is a small tool box on the reach with a few tools and some extra links in it. I had to unhitch the horses a few times so I could replace broken links. The replacements had to be pounded into place.

Every machine required complete oiling and greasing before starting out for the field. Oil was administered on various moving parts with an oil squirt can. Grease was taken out of the container with a wooden stick or paddle and put into the grease cups. Lubrication is key when operating machinery, especially in hot dry weather and when sand and dirt could get into the bearings or gears. Of course, doing this allowed the machinery to run easier and prevented unnecessary wear.

Dad knew how to splice rope to make a longer rope or to put pieces of rope back together. He couldn't manage the procedure, but he could show me how to do it. He also showed me how to tie a simple square knot, double bolands and many others. Horse harnesses are made of thick leather. They can be fancy with brass fittings and hames and ivory rings for the reins or they could be quite plain. Either way straps or reins may break. Then they were often riveted together with a hollow rivet put in a device with a handle to mash the rivet so it split in all directions after it went through two layers of harness. The black rivets came in two sizes: short and long. (More to come)

Note: Some of the words I used in this column are not in the dictionary, such as knotter and double bolands, but they were quite common when I was growing up, so I used them. Also, on occasion, I feel like I'm writing a manual for the Amish Community. They may not appreciate my reference to them, but I admire their way of life, especially their very good food.

Oneida Tribal Judicial System

Newly Elected Oneida Judicial Officers

By Janice L. McLester
Chief Judicial Officer,
Oneida Tribal Judicial System

The purpose of this article is to answer questions individuals may have in regard to their role as a Judicial Officer and the time commitments required within this position. This information is intended to provide a good understanding of the position's expectations.

Prior to being elected, a background check will be completed. As a member of the judiciary, you cannot have been convicted of a felony, nor been removed from any tribal board, committee or commission. Once you are elected to the position you can no longer sit on any tribal board, committee or commission. This rule is in place to minimize conflicts of interests. Many of the cases filed at the judiciary involve decisions made within the tribe's system. Being on a board, committee or commission outside the Oneida Tribe is acceptable, however requires disclosure to the Oneida Tribal Judicial System.

There are eleven (11) Judicial Officers. Elections are staggered, with eight (8) Judicial Officers having four (4) year terms and three (3) Judicial Officers three (3) year terms. The July 7, 2012 election will be for three (3) seats on the Judiciary with three (3) year terms. The remaining eight (8) Judicial Officer positions will not be up for election until 2015.

Will I be a full-time or part-time Judicial Officer?

The three seats of the July 7, 2012 election are for part-time positions.

Will I receive any training on the Judiciary prior to sitting on any cases?

The judicial system has a guiding document that sets forth its training expectations for its Judicial Officers. Judicial Officers must attend training as outlined in Oneida Tribal Judicial System's Comprehensive Training Plan. Some of the training offered will be conducted at the National Judicial College in Reno, NV with courses ranging from one (1) week to two (2) weeks. Two (2) week courses run continuously. The National Judicial College is an internationally recognized college in training judges and other court personnel. Note: You will be required to utilize your personal or vacation time if you are a tribal employee.

Required training consists of Jurisdiction, Essential Skills for Judges, Administrative Law, Federal Indian Law, Conducting the Trial, Rules of Evidence and Decision Writing.

Other training presenters such as Falmouth Institute, National Indian Justice Center, Wisconsin's Judicial College and Wisconsin Tribal Judges Association, provide excellent training opportunities.

Which part of the Judiciary will I be on Trial or Appellate?

Newly elected Judicial Officers will begin their term serving on the Trial Court. This is done to familiarize the Judicial Officer with the operation of the court setting. As part of the training, you will have an opportunity to audit trial court proceedings and learn the administrative functions of the clerk of courts.

What time commitments are required?

Trials/hearings are held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, with the majority being held on Tuesdays and Thursdays beginning at 9:00A.M. and continue throughout the day, with the last scheduled trial at 3:00P.M. Judicial Officers are required to be in deliberation prior to the trial/hearing beginning at 8:00A.M.

Oneida Tribal employees are required to obtain prior approval from their supervisors for any time away from your regular positions within the tribe in order to sit on a judiciary panel during regular work hours in order to fulfill judicial responsibilities.

Yethiya>tan&nha (We are watching over them) part of the Twahwahtsi·láyʌ Project it is a program for youth who need a different way and/or extra support for a time.

The Yethiyaʔtanúnha Program acknowledges those who have helped make a program happen.

We have just recently seen the end of another school year and have begun our summer schedule for Yethiyaʔtanúnha. As we move forward we wish to take the time to thank all or those who have helped us. These will include, but, are not limited to:

- Randy Cornelius – YawʌʔkÓ - This is the second year Randy has assisted in the education of the youth in regard to the Oneida Culture. The youth met with Randy every other week.
- Nicholas Reynolds – YawʌʔkÓ – Nic has been teaching the youth about their Oneida History and taking them to location throughout the area where history happened. The youth meet with Nic every other week. Over the summer they are working on a traditional garden with Nic and Randy.
- Kimberly Pelke – YawʌʔkÓ – Kimberly meets with the youth weekly to introduce them to Native Author, keep them up to date on current events, lead discussion group and document their activities. Kimberly is continuing to meet with the youth over the summer.
- Laurie Becker - YawʌʔkÓ – This is the second year Laurie and the staff of Prevention have assist the youth of the program. Last year they worked on character building this year they worked on 'Corrective Thinking'.
- Norbert Hill – YawʌʔkÓ - Norbert and (Connie, Dorothy, Doug and Jerry) - Over the last two years the youth attending Yethiya>tan&nha have built credits through the use of material from the Oneida Community Education Center year round.
- Leander Danforth, Tracy Williams and Curtis Summer – YawʌʔkÓ - This trio (with Curtis being the primary teacher) is helping the youth learn the Oneida Language. The youth meet at the Oneida Language House once a week and are continuing to do so over the summer.
- JoAnn Ninham - YawʌʔkÓ - JoAnn has been and continues to be a great support to the Yethiya>tan&nha program in many ways. One way JoAnn supports the program is by allow us to use the Youth Educational Services (YES) Conference room daily.
- Elijah Metoxen - YawʌʔkÓ - Eli was with the youth twice a week during the school year and continues once a week over the summer. His assist the youth with their personal exercise program.
- Sonny Hill - YawʌʔkÓ - Sonny has been willing to assist with teaching the youth as needed. He is now teaching the staff of Yethiyaʔtanúnha about the Haudenosaunee Culture and Ways. The staff meets with Sonny once a week.

YawʌʔkÓ staff:

- Candy Clark-Durphey - YawʌʔkÓ - Candy a Student Intern who has been with Yethiyaʔtanúnha since October of 2011. Candy has gone above and beyond to assist the youth and the program. When we lost our first case manager Candy stepped up and took on greater responsibility. Candy has a strong understanding of youth and a heart for the community. She is a creative thinker, an excellent team member and detail oriented. She is a great asset to the program.
- Crystal Skenandore - YawʌʔkÓ - Crystal, the second Student Intern, began with the program in January of this year. She has taken on the data entry for the program; while assisting with the youth when needed. Crystal is timely and accurate. She is always willing to learn and take a risk.
- Sarah Wunderlich - YawʌʔkÓ - Sarah is the newest employee and just completed her first 90day with the program. Sarah is a certified teacher and is quickly learning about interventions and case planning.

OBC Forum...

This month has been busy as we continue to wrestle with the fact that we are still working on balancing the budget for the next fiscal year. A large multi-million dollar shortage is forecasted which at one point was in excess of $24 million dollars.

We need to think about some of the economic pressures which are wearing us down. There are some heavy issues here, from over-staffing to the continued need for us to seek out ways to grow top-end revenues. To this end, I have begun work on a comprehensive report to the Oneida Business Committee (OBC) which is associated with my assigned duties on economic diversification, commerce code designs and regulatory promulgations matters. Last week, I reached out to the tribal financial staff and the OBC to seek some input and assistance from these collective areas for inclusion in the report.

In the report as I move forward, I will necessarily note some very honest points. I will note how we are off track economically and how we need to re-shuffle the deck.

In the balance of this article are some excerpts from a memo I released on June 18, 2012. My memo was designed to elicit feedback from financial staff and the OBC as I begin some of my work around commerce and economic diversification:

As you're all aware, we previously enjoyed record double-digit economic growth from 1998 through 2007; today we are in a very sluggish economic environment. At risk is our long term financial health as a tribe, we need solutions now!

In my report, it will be important to note, Oneida finds itself in a very tough economic position and I want to spell out some of these perspectives and highlight prime examples.

Vince DelaRosa
Councilman

Some of the areas where I would like your intellectual assistance and technical feedback for the report are as follows:

1) Current economic conditions.
2) Breaking point. At what point will we collapse financially if we continue to make no changes? For example, what is the actual number of employees the Tribe is recommended to have on its payroll? I understand this number was projected at approximately 2,500 a few years ago.
3) Past economic failures.
   a) How do we prevent past economic failures from occurring again in the future?
   b) Is there a better model to consider as we move forward?
4) Explanation for the need to grow top end revenues.
5) Budget deficits. Budget deficits create an environment where all we can do is barely survive by just making the grade. We have been operating under massive budget deficits for several years. This is not a good path and I am requesting we spell out in more detail the harm of operating under looming and yearly budget deficits.
6) A new model for public / private partnerships.
7) Commerce ideas or concepts which should be considered.
8) Economic growth and long-term sustainability. How are things so different here in terms of governmental economic growth and long-term sustainability?
9) Government businesses.
10) Budget Management Act. I am working on a Budget Management Act and am requesting feedback on the components you feel should be covered. What are some of the ideas and concepts you envision in this type of legislation to streamline our budget processes?

I would note, I have a training and housing development program which I want to bring forward in the next few weeks. I am hoping that we can merge this program with NWTC credit programs. I will release this suggested program in late July of this year.

Thanks for your attention to this report. If you have any question, please feel free to contact my office at 920-869-4426.

Respectively,
Vince DelaRosa

Letters & Opinions...

Raising the standard of ethics and morale

Although I am not aboriginal to this community, it is to my inclination that all individuals, tribal members in particular be up held of their integrity. I am truly honored to be a member of this "great nation", that is "The People of Standing Stone", I see a need for improvement and the time has beckoned. I have always sought to "pay tribute to my nation trough hard work and dedication", however, it seems many are still quite inept. I have always been adamantly striven to promote cohesiveness, combat dissonance, while exemplifying the positions I have held. The question I have consistently asked is "why are the ethics and morale so desolate?"

During my tenure at the "Oneida Casino", I have been subject to vast mutiny, examples include: workplace hostility, harassment, and intimidation. Most imperatively, circumvention has become quite rampant, this can be eradicated through ample facets of communication. It seems everyone is off on a tangent, which attributes to greater ambiguity, thus impacting productivity, as well as effiency. If no affirmative is taken, the rights of many employees will continue to be infringed upon. How ironic that we have a credo of ethics which is to do the right thing for the right reasons. This is all futile if fallen on deaf ears, such as the case for those of whom are wrongfully terminated.

For years I have surmised, commensurate wages, benefits would suffice however the morale and ethics, not just in gaming but tribal wide are need of bolstering, and obligation I will always strive ascertain as a member of this great nation! This can only be feasible if we allow those tact and prudence to thrive, hence exuberance should permeate! Embrace diversity!

I wish to be employed nowhere other then for "People of the Standing Stone", if afforded the opportunity, we can all ascend to new plateaus! For my life encompasses not only me but also society in general.

Conclusively, I am asking for an apology from personnel at the Main Casino in the Vault third shift, for if they had humbled themselves, allowed me to exemplify my position, had faith in my work, it would have been a winning experience for everyone. I would also like to say hello and I love you to four of the most extraordinary individuals I have ever known, that being a beautiful young lady and her three boys. All gaming employees will always be like family!

Emergency cooling shelter

A recent heat wave has opened the doors of the Oneida VFW as an emergency cooling shelter for community memebers needing a break from the heat.

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

With temperatures expected to reach the mid 90's over the next few days officials have opened the doors of the Oneida VFW as an emergency cooling shelter.

The VFW will be open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The VFW is located at 2980 E. Service Road.

The best defense to heat related illness is prevention. Here are some tips:

- Drink more fluids (nonalcoholic), regardless of your activity level. Don't wait until you're thirsty to drink. Warning: If your doctor generally limits the amount of fluid you drink or has you on water pills, ask him how much you should drink while the weather is hot.
- Don't drink liquids that contain alcohol or large amounts of sugar–these actually cause you to lose more body fluid. Also, avoid very cold drinks, because they can cause stomach cramps.
- Stay indoors and, if at all possible, stay in an air-conditioned place. If your home does not have air conditioning, go to the shopping mall or public library–even a few hours spent in air conditioning can help your body stay cooler when you go back into the heat. Call your local health department to see if there are any heat-relief shelters in your area.
- Electric fans may provide comfort, but when the temperature is in the high 90s, fans will not prevent heat-related illness. Taking a cool shower or bath, or moving to an air-conditioned place is a much better way to cool off.
- Wear lightweight, light-colored, loose-fitting clothing.
- Never leave anyone in a closed, parked vehicle.
- Although any one at any time can suffer from heat-related illness, some people are at greater risk than others. Check regularly on, infants and young children along with people aged 65 or older.
- Cut down on exercise. If you must exercise, drink two to four glasses of cool, nonalcoholic fluids each hour.

Cardinal Stritch University hosts American Indian Leaders

American Indian Leadership Program Panel on Leadership and Family

A high profile panel of American Indian leaders from Wisconsin will be sharing their stories and experiences at "Living Leadership: American Indian Family Journeys", a special event scheduled for July 11, 2012 at the Cardinal Stritch University main campus in Milwaukee.

The family panel will include guest speakers Potawatomi Tribal Chairman Gus Frank and his nephew Mike Goodrich, General Manager of Potawatomi Bingo Casino; Ernest L. Stevens, Jr., Chairman of the National Indian Gaming Association and his wife Cheryl Stevens, Director of the grants department at the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin; Nate Nez, Tribal and Regional Coordinator for the Wisconsin Dept. of Veterans Affairs, and his 18-year old son Travis Nez, who was recently elected to the Price County Board of Supervisors.

For the past year the American Indian Leadership Program at the Cardinal Stritch Leadership Center has nurtured a dialogue with members of the American Indian community in Milwaukee and outreached to Wisconsin tribal communities. The program is funded by the Forest County Potawatomi Foundation and the Greater Milwaukee Foundation.

Walker: Wis. Won't act on health care ruling

By Scott Bauer
Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ Regardless of the outcome of the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling on President Barack Obama's health care overhaul law, Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker has vowed not to do anything until after the November election.

Walker, an outspoken critic of the law, originally said in January that he would not begin setting up the state's health insurance exchange required by the law until after the court ruled. Earlier this month, the Republican governor went even further, saying that if the law is upheld he will not do anything until after the election, hoping that the next president and Congress will repeal it.

Only after those two fail would Wisconsin "figure out some alternative within the state," Walker said in a statement released by his office this week.

Republican state lawmakers appear to be on board with that approach, even while Democrats and health care advocates say the state should be more bullish in moving forward with consumer protections and other reforms under the law.

The law would provide health care to about 30 million uninsured people and make coverage more affordable to millions of others by expanding the reach of Medicaid, forbid insurance companies from refusing coverage to people with pre-existing illnesses and creating new subsidies. Officially known as the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, the law is called "Obamacare" by opponents, including Walker.

The Supreme Court, expected to rule on the law Thursday, could allow it to remain or strike down all or part of it. But the ruling is likely to signal only the next stage of the debate, not settle the issue, especially in states such as Wisconsin where Republicans control the governor's office and legislature.

Walker's decision to wait until after the November election before doing anything makes sense, said state Assembly Health Committee Chairman Rep. Jeff Stone, R-Greendale.

"There's no way we're going to do anything between now and the elections anyway on this topic," Stone said. "We owe it to business in this state, and our own economy, to have some clear direction."

One of Walker's first actions on the day he took office in January 2011 was to authorize Republican Attorney General J.B. Van Hollen to join the multistate lawsuit trying to block the law, which Congress passed in 2010.

"He's on the far end of the spectrum in terms of trying to block the law and doing nothing to prepare for it," said Robert Kraig, executive director of Citizen Action of Wisconsin, a health care advocacy group that supports the law and expanding health insurance coverage.

Even if the court does as many predict and strikes down the mandate that everyone have health insurance, Kraig said other important changes, including the expansion of Medicaid and allowing young adults up to age 26 to remain on their parents plans, could remain.

"Wisconsin needs to be in position to take full advantage of this law," he said.

State Rep. Jon Richards, the ranking Democrat on the Assembly Health Committee, said it's a big mistake not for Wisconsin to move forward with implementing the health insurance exchange and other parts of the federal law.

"Wisconsin should be in charge of our own destiny with health care and the consumers in Wisconsin should get the benefits of the law no matter what happens in Washington," Richards said.

Wisconsin, like many states, has done nothing to set up a health insurance exchange through which residents could choose among different plans to buy private insurance with taxpayer-provided assistance to cover the cost of premiums. The exchanges are designed to increase competition by requiring insurers to offer more plans and provide more information.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services has set a Nov. 16 deadline for states to submit plans for their health insurance exchanges, which must be in place by 2014. The federal government would step in and run exchanges in states that don't have them.

Richards and Democratic state Sen. Jon Erpenbach introduced a bill last year, supported by a host of consumer advocacy groups, that would have put major parts of the federal overhaul into state law, including the ban on denying coverage due to a pre-existing condition and removing annual and lifetime benefit caps.

The proposal went nowhere in the Republican-controlled Legislature.

Richards said it's frustrating that the Walker administration has been blocking the changes and ``frittered away'' the opportunity to be proactive.

"It's about political posturing," Richards said.

Wisconsin has relatively few people without insurance coverage, thanks its popular BadgerCare programs that began under welfare reforms enacted by Republican Gov. Tommy Thompson in the late 1990s. The programs were expanded under Democratic Gov. Jim Doyle, but Walker scaled them back amid skyrocketing demand and state budget troubles.

Based on 2010 U.S. Census Bureau data, 90.6 percent people in Wisconsin had insurance coverage. That tied with Maine for the third-highest rate of any state, after Hawaii at 92.3 percent and Massachusetts at 94.4 percent.

A spokeswoman for Walker's Department of Health Services emphasized that Wisconsin was able to reach a high level of coverage without a federal mandate.

NYC sues Seneca cigarette dealer

By David B. Caruso
Associated Press

NEW YORK ~ The City of New York filed a lawsuit Wednesday against a cigarette dealer on an Indian reservation in western New York, claiming that the business has been flouting state and federal law by shipping thousands of packs into the city without paying state or local taxes or verifying the age of the buyer.

The suit, filed in a federal court in Manhattan, targets Robert and Marcia Gordon, members of the Seneca tribe who were outspoken opponents of attempts by state and federal authorities to rein in the sale of untaxed cigarettes from reservations.

It accused the couple's Salamanca-based business of blatantly ignoring state laws requiring that taxes be paid on any cigarettes shipped off a reservation to people who aren't members of a tribe.

An official with the New York City Sheriff's office confirmed the company's defiance of the law through a simple sting this spring, the suit said. In April, an investigator went on the couple's website, allofourbutts.com, and placed an order for 400 cigarettes at a cost of $30, plus $20 for shipping.

The cigarettes arrived a month later as promised, and were signed for by an office clerk. The suit said the delivery driver didn't seek to verify the age of the person receiving the order, the cigarettes didn't carry the surgeon general's required health warnings and no taxes were collected. City lawyers said in the suit that they believed that thousands of similar sales had taken place, costing the city substantial tax revenue.

Reached by telephone Wednesday, Marcia Gordon said she hadn't seen the lawsuit yet, but was sure nothing the business was doing was illegal. She declined further comment.

Gordon and her husband have made no secret of their company's operations, and have repeatedly argued in court that, as members of the Seneca tribe, they are exempt from certain state taxes.

The couple went to court in 2010 in an attempt to prevent enforcement of the federal Prevent All Cigarette Trafficking Act, a new law that banned the sale of cigarettes through the U.S. mail. They said the law had decimated their business, which, at its peak, was selling $2 million-worth of cigarettes each month.

Last December, they persuaded a federal court to temporarily block enforcement of a part of the law requiring dealers shipping through private delivery services to pay any applicable state and local taxes in advance. That suit is still pending.

New York City's Law Department argued in the suit that the couple's involvement in that legal challenge indicated that they were fully aware of their responsibilities under the law. The suit said the business' willful defiance of the law amounted to civil racketeering.

"The City has made clear through our previous lawsuits that illegal sales of cigarettes will not be tolerated in any form," the city's chief lawyer, Corporation Counsel Michael A. Cardozo, said in a statement. "Businesses that flout the law injure the public health and evade taxes used to pay for vital public services. They can expect future enforcement actions directed against them."

American Indian museum eatery wins DC food prize

WASHINGTON (AP) ~ The restaurant at the Smithsonian's National Museum of the American Indian has won a new distinction among Washington eateries.

On Sunday night, Mitsitam (mitt-SEE-tom) Native Foods Cafe won a Rammy Award from the Restaurant Association of Metropolitan Washington. It was named "Casual Restaurant of the Year."

Mitsitam is the first museum restaurant to be nominated for a Rammy Award. Mitsitam was competing with Bar Pilar, C.F. Folks, Hank's Oyster Bar and Room 11.

The museum eatery has a rotating menu of foods that have been grown, raised and harvested in North and South America for thousands of years, from Peruvian ceviche to pork tacos.

Last week, Mitsitam unveiled its summer menu featuring crispy rabbit, grilled sweet corn, purple potato soup, and other items.

Bus line expands service for Mich., Ill., Wis.

CHARLEVOIX, Mich. (AP) ~ A bus service is expanding in Michigan's northern Lower Peninsula to connect with several other Michigan cities as well as Illinois and Wisconsin.

The Petoskey News-Review reports Indian Trails service is scheduled to begin Aug. 1 in Charlevoix. The stop will be near the dock for the ferry to Beaver Island.

One route will take passengers north to Petoskey, across Michigan's Upper Peninsula and to Milwaukee, while another will go south to Traverse City, Grand Rapids and Chicago.

Stops on both routes offer an opportunity to connect with Amtrak passenger trains.

Tribes work for record Native American vote

The head of the largest group representing Native Americans and Alaska Natives said federal and state governments should provide voter registration at Indian Health Service facilities.

Jefferson Keel, president of the National Congress of American Indians, said in a phone interview Tuesday with The Associated Press that the health facilities should be designated voter registration sites in the same way state-based public assistance agencies are under the National Voter Registration Act. He said the facilities are ideal for voter registration because they're in many tribal communities.

"Not all Native Americans are registered, and that's one of the things we are pushing for this year is to turn out the largest Native vote in history," Keel said.

Indian Health Service spokeswoman Dianne Dawson, reached late Tuesday evening, said the agency had no comment at this time.

Only two of every five American Indians and Alaska Natives who are eligible to vote were registered in 2008, Keel told a gathering of tribal leaders Monday at the opening of the midyear meeting of the National Congress of American Indians in Lincoln, Neb. He said an estimated 1 million Native Americans and Alaska Natives who are eligible to vote are not registered.

"This should be considered a civic emergency," Keel said.

Keel said the voter registration and turnout work is not intended to be partisan, but American Indians have made significant gains under the current administration and tribes want to protect their resources and sovereignty.

Head of Bureau of Indian Education resigning

WASHINGTON (AP) ~ The director of the Bureau of Indian Education is resigning to take a position in his home state of South Dakota.

Secretary of the Interior Ken Salazar announced Wednesday that Keith Moore is leaving the BIE to serve as state director for the Fellowship of Christian Athletes in South Dakota.

Moore, an enrolled member of the Rosebud Sioux Tribe in South Dakota, has led the Bureau for the past two years. He was selected for the position by then-Assistant Secretary of Indian Affairs Larry Echo Hawk.

BIE Chief of Staff Brian Drapeaux will serve as acting director until a replacement is named.

The BIE operates the federal school system for Native American students. It oversees more than 180 facilities on 64 reservations in 23 states.

Medical College trustees approve 2 campuses

MILWAUKEE (AP) ~ Medical College of Wisconsin trustees have voted to move ahead with establishing two community-based medical education campuses in Wisconsin.

The campuses will be located in Green Bay and central Wisconsin. The Medical College has a goal of admitting its first group of students in the summer of 2015.

Regional health systems, academic institutions and civic and business leaders in Green Bay and central Wisconsin will partner with the Medical College in developing the campuses. The college says a key to the success of the campuses is the commitment of the regional health systems to create residency programs.

The cost of creating the campuses is about $23 million. College spokeswoman Maureen Mack says the specific central Wisconsin site has not yet been determined.

Community Meeting on Housing in Oneida drawing near

The Oneida Planning Department is sponsoring a Community Meeting On "Housing" on Thursday, July 5, from 5:00–6:00PM in the Little Bear Development Center Conference Room.

The purpose of the community meeting is to present the progress of the Housing Comprehensive Plan Element and to gather information from community members about visioning the future of housing development for the Comprehensive Plan Re-write.

The Oneida Reservation Comprehensive Plan sets broad policies and guidelines for future growth and development. The plan will serve as the basis for both daily and long-range decisions that will influence the development of the physical, social, political, economic, aesthetic, and other related factors of the community.

Below is a schedule for future Comprehensive Plan meetings. The schedule includes the date, time, place, presenters and comprehensive plan topic. Please mark your calendars and plan to attend these and future community meetings so you can voice your vision of the future of our community.

New community technology center opens at CMN

KESHENA - The Community Technology Centeron the Keshena campus of the College of Menominee Nation will launch operations on Monday, June 25,with high-speed internet access for people living in local and surrounding communities. The new facility is located on the College campus at N172 State Highway 47-55 in Keshena.

The center will provide the general public with internet access, on-site use of computer equipment, and a variety of learning opportunities.Programs at the center will include technology-based community education and critically needed community support and job training. This project is made possible through funding received by the College of Menominee Nationfrom the Broadband Technologies Opportunity Program (BTOP), a Federal initiative under the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA). The initiative is designed to increase broadband access and use by under-served populations in areas with limited internet availability.

Beginning on June 25, the Community Technology Center will open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.seven days a week for walk-in users and program participants. Patrons will find the following technology-based activities offered concurrently:

- Open Lab for general public use.
- Workshops to meet the needs of all people—regardless of ability or need
- Skill building activities including GED, math, reading, andcareer exploration and placement.
- Certificate/technical diploma job training (using technology equipment).

We will kick off the summer schedule with a Broadband Summer Blast of Activities. Join the fun and earn participation rewards such as iPods, tablets, and eReaders. Stop in to get started earning these rewards.

Orientations and tours are being scheduled throughout the first couple weeks. Call the Community Technology Center at 715-799-6226, ext. 3300 to reserve a spot.

KODU GAME LAB

Coming This Summer to the CEC – Microsoft Kodu Game Design Workshop

If you like to play video games, you might already be thinking about creating your own games someday. Maybe you have an idea for a great storyline, great characters, or maybe ideas for how things should work. Don't wait until "someday" to create your own game – take the Microsoft Kodu Game Design Workshop at the CEC and learn to create video games right now!

Microsoft Kodu is easy to use game design software that already has built-in characters and actions and the ability to create complex landscapes for the action to take place in. No computer programming skills are necessary, because the games are created using graphical "building block" commands instead of code. You won't be ready to design the next Halo or Zelda game when we're done, but you will have a good idea of the elements that go into a video game, and how to make them work for you!

The 2-day Microsoft Kodu Game Design Workshop for Youth and Adults will be held at the Oneida Nation Community Education Center on Monday and Tuesday, July 9 – 10, from 1:00 – 4:00 PM.

Then use your newly developed programming skills some more by taking the Lego Logo Robotics Workshop and learning to create and program robots made from Legos!

LEGO

Coming This Summer to the CEC – Lego Logo Robotics Workshop

The Lego Logo Robotics Workshop will let participants build with Legos, and then show them how to use the Logo easy-to-learn computer programming language to make their creations to come to life! It's Alive! Bwa-ha-ha-ha! Schools and colleges have been using Lego Logo Robotics for years to introduce beginners to computer programming, and now it's coming to this easy and fun workshop at the CEC! This workshop is also a good follow-up to the Microsoft Kodu Game Design Workshop. The Lego Logo Robotics Workshop will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, July 11 – 12, from 1:00 – 4:00 pm at the Oneida Nation Community Education Center.

Declare Independence from Foodborne Illness this Fourth of July

WASHINGTON—When celebrating our nation's independence this Fourth of July, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) reminds Americans that proper food handling practices can prevent their "Life, Liberty, and pursuit of Happiness" from being threatened by foodborne illness. The warm temperatures that draw crowds of people to outdoor celebrations also encourage the growth of bacteria, and incidents of food-related illnesses rise in summer months. But four simple steps—Clean, Separate, Cook, and Chill—can help families declare freedom from foodborne illness at Independence Day celebrations.

"We want to provide families with important information that will help reduce the risk of foodborne illness during their Fourth of July celebrations," USDA Under Secretary for Food Safety Dr. Elisabeth Hagen said. "Small children and the elderly are among the most vulnerable to foodborne illness, and this information is essential in protecting loved ones at family barbecues and picnics."

In time for the Fourth of July holiday, FSIS has created a new infographic in partnership with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and the Ad Council featuring food safety tips from the Founding Fathers. The infographic, fact sheets, videos and podcasts about safe food handling and preparation in warmer months can be found on FSIS' "Grill It Safe" webpage at www.fsis.usda.gov/Food_Safety_Education/Grill_It_Safe.

Additionally, representatives from FSIS' Meat and Poultry Hotline will answer consumer questions in English and Spanish from the Twitter handles @USDAFoodSafety and @USDAFoodSafe_es on June 28 at 1 p.m. ET.

Clean

Freedom from foodborne illnesses starts with clean surfaces and clean hands. Be sure that you and your guests wash your hands before preparing or handling food. Hands should be washed with soap and warm water for 20 seconds before and after handling food. Equally important is making sure that the surfaces that come in contact with raw and cooked foods are clean before you start and are washed frequently.

Separate

Raw meats and poultry should be prepared separately from vegetables and cooked foods. As you chop meats and veggies, be sure to use separate cutting boards. Juices from raw meats can contain harmful bacteria that could spread to raw veggies and already cooked foods.

As you take the cooked meats off the grill, be sure to place them on a clean platter, not on the dish that held them when they were raw. The juices left on the plate from raw meat can spread bacteria to safely cooked food.

Cook

Never begin cooking without your most important tool—a food thermometer. Color is not a reliable indicator of doneness. Meat and poultry cooked on a grill often brown quickly and may appear done on the outside, but still may not have reached a safe minimum internal temperature to kill any harmful bacteria. Whole cuts of pork, lamb, veal, and beef should be cooked to 145 °F as measured by a food thermometer placed in the thickest part of the meat, followed by a three-minute rest time before carving or consuming. Hamburgers and other ground beef should reach 160 °F. All poultry should reach a minimum temperature of 165 °F. Fish should be cooked to 145 °F. Fully cooked meats like hot dogs should be grilled to 165 °F or until steaming hot.

If you are smoking meats, the temperature in the smoker should be maintained between 225 °F and 300 °F for safety. Be sure to use your food thermometer to be certain the food has reached a safe minimum internal temperature.

Chill

Keeping food at a safe temperature can be a concern at outdoor picnics and cookouts. Too often, food is prepared and left to sit out while guests munch over the course of several hours. Bacteria grow most rapidly between 40 °F and 140 °F, so perishable food should never sit out for more than two hours. If the temperature is higher than 90 °F—which is common in the summer—food should not sit out more than one hour. Refrigerate or freeze leftovers promptly and discard any food that has been sitting out too long.

It is important to keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold. Hot foods can be kept hot on the grill and cold foods can be kept chilled with ice packs or ice sources in a cooler.

Still have questions? Ask Karen!

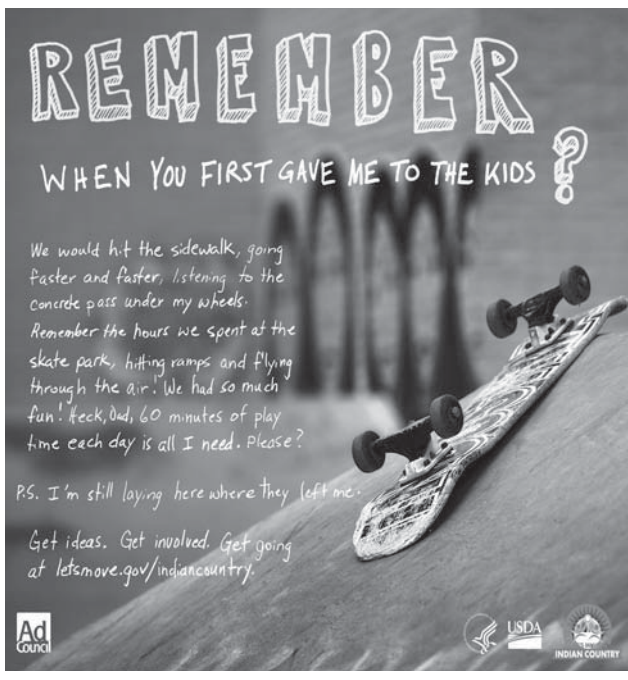
Whether you are cooking in the kitchen or grilling out this Independence Day, make Mobile Ask Karen the first guest on your list. Ask Karen is USDA's virtual food safety representative available 24/7 at www.AskKaren.gov or m.AskKaren.gov on your smartphone. Mobile Ask Karen can also be downloaded from the Android app store. On June 26, 2012, FSIS launched "Mobile Pregúntele a Karen," the Spanish-language version of Mobile Ask Karen. Mobile Pregúntele Karen and the desktop-based Pregúntele a Karen also are available 24 hours a day at m.PregunteleaKaren.gov or PreguntéleaKaren.gov.

Consumers can email, chat with a live representative, or call the USDA Meat and Poultry Hotline directly from these apps. To use these features on the app, simply choose "Contact Us" from the menu. The live chat option and the toll-free USDA Meat and Poultry Hotline, 1-888-MPHotline (1-888-674-6854), are available in English and Spanish from l0 a.m. to 4 p.m. ET Monday through Friday.

This seasonal food safety outreach is part of a multi-faceted USDA initiative to prevent foodborne illness. As part of this initiative, USDA has joined the Ad Council, the FDA and the CDC to launch Food Safe Families, a consumer food safety education campaign. It is the first joint public service campaign to empower families to further reduce their risk of foodborne illness at home by checking their key food safety steps: clean, separate, cook, and chill. For more information, go to www.foodsafety.gov.

Today's action is in addition to other FSIS has put in place during President Barack Obama's Administration to date to safeguard the food supply, prevent foodborne illness, and improve consumers' knowledge about the food they eat. These initiatives support the three core principles developed by the President's Food Safety Working Group: prioritizing prevention; strengthening surveillance and enforcement; and improving response and recovery. Some of these actions include:

- Test-and-hold policy that will significantly reduce consumer exposure to unsafe meat products, should the policy become final, because products cannot be released into commerce until Agency test results for dangerous contaminants are known.
- Labeling requirements that provide better information to consumers about their food by requiring nutrition information for single-ingredient raw meat and poultry products and ground or chopped products.
- Public Health Information System, a modernized, comprehensive database with information on public health trends and food safety violations at the nearly 6,100 plants FSIS regulates.
- Performance standards for poultry establishments for continued reductions in the occurrence of pathogens. After two years of enforcing the new standards, FSIS estimates that approximately 5,000 illnesses will be prevented each year under the new Campylobacter standards, and approximately 20,000 illnesses will be prevented under the revised Salmonella standards each year.



REMEMBER
WHEN YOU FIRST GAVE ME TO THE KIDS
We would hit the sidewalk, going faster and faster, listening to the concrete pass under my wheels. Remember the hours we spent at the skate park, hitting ramps and flying through the air. We had so much fun! Heck, Dad, 60 minutes of play time each day is all I need. Please?
P.S. I'm still laying here where they left me.

Santa Fe hosts world's largest folk art market

By Jeri Clausing
Associated Press

SANTA FE, N.M. ~ The stories are as diverse as the artists themselves: Afghan women who have lifted themselves out of poverty through a cooperative that sells their traditional embroidery; a former cook for the Sudan People's Liberation Army who now sells beaded corsets to help support her family and send her many grandchildren to school; and sisters from Kyrgyzstan who make hand-stitched felt and silk scarves using a family tradition that dates back some 300 years.

The women and their tales are just a sampling of the real lives behind the work that will be featured in New Mexico next month at the popular Santa Fe International Folk Art Market, which sends 90 percent of its $2 million-plus annual proceeds back to the artists and programs that can dramatically alter their lives and their communities.

The market is the largest of its kind and runs July 13-15, turning Santa Fe's Milner Plaza into a global destination where buyers can mingle with artisans, some of whom have left remote villages for the very first time.

The show is among this artistic mountain enclave's many popular summer events, drawing 20,741 people last year.

The biggest difference between this and Santa Fe's other shows, like its Spanish and Indian markets, is the impact it has in far-flung corners of the globe. Besides making life-saving or life-changing contributions like helping communities build schools, houses and wells for clean drinking water, the effort is also helping to preserve traditional art forms while teaching the artists how to create cooperatives and businesses for selling their wares year-round.

Now in its ninth year, the market was founded by of Charlene Cerny and Judith Espinar, two longtime fixtures in the Santa Fe art scene and lovers of folk art.

Espinar says the idea blossomed quickly after she called UNESCO for help locating artists.

"(They) said come to Paris, look through the files. We'll give you 10 Gold Medal winners," Espinar said.

Local businesses quickly lined up to help support the show and sponsor the artists. And the rest is, well, history.

Cerny originally agreed to join Espinar in the project only if it had no more than 25 artists. The first show had 18. This year, more than 150 artists from 49 countries will be in attendance selling everything from traditional scarves and attire to jewelry, rugs and baskets. Fifty-four participants will be representing cooperatives with more than 20,000 artisans. Since its inception, the market has earned more than $12 million. Prices at the market range from $5 to tens of thousands.

Espinar and Cerny travel the world looking for new artists. A jury vets the applicants and some first-timers are offered financial assistance. The artists are also offered training to help them market and sell their wares, enabling many to return in later years on their own.

Among this year's first-timers will be Mary Padar Kuojok, who spent many years traveling with and cooking for the Sudan People's Liberation Army. When the Republic of South Sudan was created in 2010, she moved to Juba, where she joined the Roots Project, which helps tribal woman from around the country revive long-ignored art traditions.

Kuojok, now a grandmother, hadn't made the beaded corsets that were unique to her Dinka tribe since she was a child, said Roots Project founder Anyieth D'Wol, a former human rights worker.

"I asked her if she knew how to make something traditional ... and it was beautiful," D'Wol said. About 15 such corsets will be available at the market, but D'Wol said pricing had not yet been set.

Kuojok's trip to Santa Fe will be only her second time to leave South Sudan; her first trip was to Nairobi to get a visa.

She will also bring beaded work from artisans from other tribes represented by the Roots Project.

D'Wol said the Roots Project not only helps women learn to take care of themselves and establish a business sense, but is also helping to revive traditions that have gotten lost in two decades of war.

"When I first started working with the women, it was 'What do you know how to make?' I had no idea what they were. They are not documented and many of the items are rarely even worn by the tribes anymore."

A similar project in Afghanistan, Kandahar Treasures, is giving financial freedom to women who do the traditional geometric embroidery unique to the area. Started by Rangina Hamidi, an Afghan whose family fled war to the United States when she was a child, the project now has more than 400 women selling products.

Some of the women earn up to $100 a month, which is almost double the average government salary. Homes with mothers and daughters participating have dramatically improved their family's economic standing, and given women more control over their lives.

"One of the women has 13 daughters," Hamidi said. "In a country where manhood is so great, any woman who gives birth to that many daughters is cursed. Now that they have been earning money for almost nine years ... they have risen themselves out of poverty. They are no longer invited as servants to weddings and parties, they are invited as guests."

Some of the artists are well established, but this year, 40 percent will be showing at the market for the first time.

Cerny and Espinar say the market has become a destination, drawing visitors last year from 26 states.

"More and more people are looking at they do as a vote for what they care about," said Cerny. "... They are getting the idea that they are helping build a school in Pakistan, helping put a roof on a women's shelter."

Appointment shortage for counseling

There is a nationwide shortage of physicians in Primary Care and Psychiatry. We currently have Provider vacancies in Family Practice, Internal Medicine and Psychiatry. We are faithfully attempting various strategies to meet our community's healthcare needs:

- We have contracted with a firm to assist with Provider Recruitment.
- Oneida Business Committee approved Nurse Practitioner and Physician Assistant positions.
- The Health Division is working on a Provider retention plan.
- We are negotiating with a local health system to provide urgent care services.

We seek your continued support and patience as we recruit additional providers to become fully staffed.

You can assist us in our goal of improving healthcare access by:

- Keeping your scheduled appointments
- Providing us at least 24 hours' notice if you are unable to keep your appointment
- Providing complete and accurate information at registration

Thank you

Information for patients who utilize OCHC On-Call Nurse

Registered Nurses (RN) are available for patient phone calls – 24 hours a day/7days a week. When the clinic is closed the RN is home. They do not have access to medical records or pharmacy information.

When to call and speak with the RN after clinic hours:

- You/your child have an urgent health care need/question that cannot wait until the next open day of the clinic.
- Don't call the RN when you are having a life threatening issue. For example, chest pain, difficulty breathing, or bleeding profusely from wound. Access the nearest emergency department to get medical attention as soon as possible. Call 911 as needed for intervention. Call the Contract Health Services Department to report the visit within 72 hours to ensure coverage.
- The RN's on call also work 40 + hours per week at the OCHC medical clinic, in addition to providing on call services. Calling in the middle of the night with a concern that is not urgent is not appropriate.
- On call staff does not determine Contract Health eligibility. You need to contact the Contract Health Department when the clinic reopens to check on eligibility

TRIAD Program Enhanced with Nutrition Classes

Good News! The Diabetes Team is proud to announce enhancements made to the TRIAD Program. The TRIAD program is a structured exercise program for patients diagnosed with diabetes on behalf of collaboration between the Oneida Community Health Center Diabetes Team, Health Promotion Disease Prevention Department, and Oneida Family Fitness. To improve participant success, Registered Dietitian and Certified Diabetes Educator, Betty Schwantes will be providing monthly nutrition classes at Oneida Family Fitness Education Room, covering the following topics:

1. YOU CAN HAVE YOUR CAKE AND EAT IT TOO
2. YOUR CHEAT SHEET TO GOOD EATS
3. FEARLESS FITNESS

Beginning May 1, 2012, TRIAD program participants will be required to:

1. Attend one nutrition class every quarter.
2. Exercise at least 24 times every quarter.
3. If you complete 1 and 2, you will receive a $25 Oneida retail gift card every quarter when you meet with your Health Promotion Wellness Coach.
4. The Oneida retail gift card will NOT be dispensed at the nutrition class.

No pre-registration is required. For more information, please contact Margaret VanDen Heuvel, Diabetes Program Supervisor, at (920) 869-4941. See flyer below for dates, time, and location.

GTC meets for semi-annual meeting

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

Nearly 1900 General Tribal Council (GTC) members worked efficiently through the Semi-Annual meeting's agenda.

The GTC approved meeting minutes from the July 4, 2011 Semi-Annual meeting, November 21 special meeting, November 28 Budget meeting, and January 2 Annual meeting.

The Treasurer's fiscal year 2012 semi-annual report was accepted. The report was as of May 31, 2012. A wide-range of topics were discussed that didn't pertain exactly to the report but were entertained. The Oneida 2012 semi-annual report was then quickly accepted with no discussion.

Bulky amendments to the current Oneida Trust/Enrollment Committee Bylaws were approved. They include the additions of the committee's ability to hire personnel and oversee trust fund distributions, the requirement of the committee chair to gather input from other committee members when evaluating Directors. The amendments removed the committee's responsibility to interpret the tribe's Membership Ordinance, Trust Agreements along with any subsequent trust or enrollment laws. They also removed the committee's duty to assist with per capita payment distribution.

The amendments also increased the committee chairperson's meeting stipend to $100 from $75 along with the ability to conduct a meeting even if the committee chair and vice-chair are not present. The secretary can call the meeting and a Chair Pro Tem is selected to preside over the meeting.

An amendment to the Vacation and Personal Day policy within the Personnel Policy and Procedures capping the accrual of vacation and personal time at 280 hours was approved.

Three referendum questions were turned down by the GTC by a simple hand vote. The long debated absentee voting option was voted down during an August 2010 meeting by the GTC but then supported in a vote in July of 2011. The OBC was looking for final direction. The GTC again voted to disallow absentee voting. No further action will be taken regarding absentee voting.

The referendum question prohibiting tribal employees that are required to attend GTC meetings from collecting the GTC meeting stipend was voted down.

The final question asked of the GTC was if they wanted the Chief of Police position to be elected. The GTC again voted down the request to make the Chief of Police an elected position. Many cited the importance of consistency in a public safety position and that they didn't want political pressure to play any role in decision making during a Chief's tenure.

Indian health care act permanently authorized

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

After passage of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA) in 2010, the nation waited for the June 28, 2012 United States Supreme Court to ruling that declared act was constitutionally sound. As part of that act, the Indian Health Care Improvement Act (IHCIA) was permanently reauthorized. According to Oneida Comprehensive Health Division Director Debra Danforth, there was a 14 year wait on that legislation. As for the impact the Supreme Court ruling will make on the Oneida Community Health Center, "It's exciting it passed, but it's still a wait-and-see kind of game," said Danforth.

The IHCIA permanently authorizes daily health care delivery to nearly 2 million American Indians and Alaska Natives served by the Indian Health Service (IHS), who are in critical need of improved health care services. A snapshot of health conditions highlights the critical need for improving health care in Indian Country; Native people suffer from higher rates of diabetes and related illness, heart disease, and substance abuse than any other group.

Part of the IHCIA allows for expanded third-party billing to federal programs such as Medicare and Medicaid. Also, under the PPACA individuals will be required to get health insurance, although Native Americans are exempted from the penalties for not getting insurance.

"With the passage of the Affordable Care Act, that would allow us to decrease our demand for tribal contribution even more, because we would be able to generate and collect revenue from those services," said Danforth.

"To have everybody have insurance could mean tremendous impact for us in terms of the ability to generate revenue. We're only funded right now at about 44% to 45% of the level of need for the patients that we serve through Indian Health Service, so with that funding, what we've attempted to do is enhance our third party coverage, our third party revenues, so that anybody that doesn't have coverage, we try to see if they're eligible for anything,"

The IHCIA expands programs for mental health, dialysis services, and long-term care.

"That could have a tremendous impact for us, too, in terms of revenue generation coverage for the new Anna John Residence Centered Care Community," she said.

The act also allows tribes to enter into memorandums of agreement with the US Department of Veterans Affairs.

Flag raising kicks off Oneida Days

Oneida veterans raised the flags at the Norbert Hill Center Thursday, June 28 to mark the beginning of Oneida Days 2012. A tobacco burning also was done to guide and protect visitors and community members as they visited for the 40th annual Oneida powwow.

Parading through the Oneida streets

Kali photos/Nate Wisneski

The annual Oneida Parade made its way through the streets of Oneida on Saturday, June 30. Prize money was given to the best floats along with candy and treats for kids watching the parade go by. This year's theme was Walt Disney and Star Wars.

From 1A/IHCIA

"We could negotiate with the Veterans Administration to allow our tribal members to access care for long term care at our facility. Those are some of the things that were still in the negotiation phase," she said.

Finally, tribal health services could do more to recruit and retain health workers in their facilities.

"We have a shortage of primary care, we have a shortage of internal medicine, we have a shortage of psychiatrist and psychologist and so if those things get funded by the federal government, it's going to mean a tremendous impact for us in terms of being able to approve our access and potentially improve the level of access to the community and recruitment of providers. All of those kinds of things that will have a direct impact on," she said.

However, the IHCIA is dependent on funding which hasn't been allocated.

"When the Supreme Court came back with their decision, a lot of those things that were included in the affordable care specifically through the Indian Health Care Improvement Act basically were … unfunded mandates. They said 'you have to do this, but there's no money,'" she said.

Also, politics makes the future of the PPACA and possibly the IHCIA uncertain. While some states have started setting up insurance exchanges, including the Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa in Minnesota, Wisconsin's Republican led government returned federal funds that were to be used to set up the state's exchange. This may cause some organizations to wait until after the Presidential election in November to see what party is in power before making plans.

"Overall, it's a tremendous step in the right direction for us in terms of what we want to do. Even if they do repeal, I think they're going to have a lot of opposition to repeal the Indian Health Care Improvement Act after all the benefits that it has brought forward as far as a permanent ruling on Indian Health Care. That's the biggest win that we have in terms of moving forward," said Danforth.

In Loving Memory

In Loving Memory of...

Rory Hill

It has been 21 years
Can hardly believe it
We all still shed so many tears.
The pain just won't quit.

It was June 30, 1991
The day of your last breath
Leaving behind your only son
Taking a piece of so many when you left.

If only we'd known… Gotten some sort of sign
More love we would've shown,
Would've taken more time.

Say the words that mean so much
To hug you oh so tight
How could we know it would be our last touch?
How could we know you were about to take flight?

Time passes, but it seems like only yesterday.
When you were called to fly away
Like the balloons we release – one for every year
It was God's will, you couldn't stay
So we cherish the memories & in our hearts we keep you near.

On her 75th birthday ~ July 5th
July 5, 1937 ~ September 11, 1987

As I look up to the sky, to the Heavens above…

Precious memories of you are thought of with so much love.

So, on what would have been a celebration of your 75th Birthday…
I honor you for the gift of life and the love you unselfishly gave.

Thank you for the wisdom, patience and guidance you shared, while you were here…
It has shaped me into the person
I am today… and for that, I have less fear!

Cherished memories of you, I reminisce…
My heart is happy for them all…
But truthfully, Mom,
It is you, and your love that I truly miss,
most of all!

Love & Miss You, Mom!

Deeply Missed & Forever Loved…
Yvonne Marie, and the rest of your children,

Oneida Nation Child Support Agency

Child support calculations

Under Chapter 78 of the Oneida Code of Law titled Child Support sets the standard for payment amounts for child support. These guidelines are based on the belief that both parents are responsible for supporting their children, whether they live together or not.

The child support guidelines are based on:

- the parent's gross income
- the time a child spends with each parent
- whether a parent is supporting other children
- a percentage standard

The percentages below are applied to the parent's gross income for child support:

- 17% of income for 1 child
- 25% of income for 2 children
- 29% of income for 3 children
- 31% of income for 4 children
- 34% of income for 5 or more children

In special cases, the court may use other guidelines to set support. Special cases involve:

- ➢ Parents who share placement of their children (the court order states that the parents will share the placement of their children at least 25% of the time)
- ➢ Parents who support more than one family. This is known as a serial family obligation.
- ➢ Parents who split the placement of their children (the court order gives one parent the placement of one or more children and gives the other parent placement of the other children)
- ➢ Parents with a low income
- ➢ Parents with a high income

Note: Oneida Tribal Judicial System may order a parent to pay more or less than the amounts set by the Percentage Standard if the court decides that the Standard would be unfair to the child or one of the parents. The court must note the reason for not using the guidelines.

Loretta Says... WWII and the War Effort

Loretta Metoxen • Oneida Tribal Historian

Ongoing Kalihwisaks Column • Providing a connection to the past

We are at war, the term for it is War on Terror. This war ensued after the attack on the World Trade Center in New York by two United States commercial airliners hijacked by foreign terrorists. The Twin Towers of the World Trade Center collapsed killing approximately 3000 persons.

I decided to write about this because we are oblivious to the war. We seem to have very little connection to it unless we have an immediate family member involved. Over 6000 of our military have already perished in this war.

During World War II, we were involved in the war every day—every man, woman and child. We collected cans and flattened them for recycling. Kitchen grease—pork and bacon fat—was saved and collected to produce nitroglycerine for explosives. All scrap metal went to produce ships, tanks, and jeeps. The soft down of mature milkweed pods were gathered by children to fill life-saving jackets for the Navy. It was called Kapok.

Many, many Oneida men and women enlisted in all branches of military service. Men and women moved off the Oneida Reservation to work in defense plants at Sturgeon Bay, Manitowoc and Milwaukee. Women who worked in the shipyards or factories producing big machinery were called Rosie the Riveters. All young men were drafted. Many were volunteers. All able bodied men on farms had to go, but at least one was exempted to run the farm. Our next door neighbors sent three brothers to the Army.

Families purchased War Bonds. Famous people, primarily movie stars, participated in tours throughout the United States called bond drives to encourage everyone to participate in the War effort. Children would buy stamps at school for a quarter to put on a card. When the card was filled with about $18.00 worth of stamps, it could be redeemed at the end of the War for $25.00. After Ira Hayes (Pima from Gila River Reservation) assisted in raising the U. S. Flag on Iwo Jima, he was recruited to circulate around the Country to raise funds for War Bonds. These funds were used to finance the War.

Food was rationed. Gas was rationed. Shoes were rationed. Ration books with stamps in them were issued to every family. Sugar and meat were two items that were controlled by the number of stamps issued, depending on family size. We always had plenty of our own food on the farm whether it was meat or vegetables, so we could trade some things we produced for sugar. Sugar stamps could be obtained from acquaintances or relatives who lived in Green Bay. More gas was allowed to farmers with tractors because they had to produce as much food as possible for the war effort. They had to produce for the troops as well as for the civilian population. I believe we got one pair of new shoes a year. We passed them on down anyway. We all ran barefoot all summer. My brother, Jerry, said he had to join the Marines to get a pair of boots, but he was too young during the war to recall if he had shoes or not. Only the pictures of that time show proof.

My mother wrote letters to Joe Ninham, one of the Ninham cousins she grew up with. He was called Joe Diamond. I don't know why he had that name. He was killed while aboard a ship off of Saipan. Mom knew he was a casualty before the telegram arrived to tell his mother (Aunt Adeline) so. Mom also wrote to Martin Van Schyndel from the next door farm. He served in the Army in the South Pacific. Letters were important to boost the morale of those in the front lines. Letters were written in one direction in the normal fashion. Then, the letter would be turned sideways and the writer would write over the original message directly across it. The letters were censored. Everybody's letters were read by somebody to screen out dangerous messages. A slogan was "Loose lips sink ships". The letters would be copied in a smaller version before sending to the military recipient. This method reduced the tonnage of all the mail.

We had air raid drills in Oneida, right here in the heartland. That meant we had a blackout, so any possible low flying enemy bombers could not bomb an inhabited area if they could not see it. All lights were extinguished, except one in the room where everyone had to gather. Blankets or mattresses were put up on the windows of that room. Joe Baumgartner was the guy who went from house to house to see that everyone was complying.

New clothes, especially for the coming school year, were looked forward to. Clothes were shared between kids. Skirts were actually much longer after the war, nearly down to the ankles. It wasn't necessarily a vogue, but rather that we were no longer conserving material.

Every family grew a Victory Garden—even if you lived in the city. Today, we do little to feed ourselves because it is too easy to purchase fast food or food prepared for us off the grocery shelves. If suddenly all of this disappeared or vanished, we would be near starvation for not knowing how to provide our daily food.

All of this continuing effort was headed up by the United States government. I do not know why we are not unified in doing something like this today, even if the motivation was to reduce the national debt. The war costs trillions of dollars and we are going deeper in debt every day. It would be far less costly if every man, woman and child participated in the war effort.

Evergreen Theatre announces Auditions for Bram Stoker's Dracula

BIA issues environmental impact statement on Kenosha project

(Keshena, WI) - The Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) has released the Menominee Indian Tribe of Wisconsin Kenosha Casino - Hotel Fee-to-Trust Acquisition Final Environmental Impact Statement (EIS). The Final EIS analyzes the potential effects of the proposed acquisition of 223 acres in Kenosha, Wisconsin for the Menominee Indian Tribe and the Tribe's subsequent proposed development of the property as a casino-hotel; offering Class III gaming pursuant to the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act.

Upon notice of the completion of the EIS, Menominee Tribal Chairman Craig Corn stated: "This is a great step forward for the Menominee Tribe, citizens of Kenosha, and the State of Wisconsin. A project of this magnitude will bring over 5,000 good paying new jobs to Wisconsin, while also creating thousands of family sustaining construction jobs." Chairman Corn went on to state, "I commend the BIA for taking the time and effort to thoroughly review the effects of the Tribe's proposed Kenosha facility and ensure that all applicable regulations have been met. I believe the EIS provides the Secretary of the Interior the information he needs to make a decision that this Project is in the best interest of both the Menominee Tribe and the greater Kenosha community."

Federal transportation bill means $719M for Wisconsin

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) ~ The new highway bill that Congress approved this week preserves funding flexibility for transit systems in Green Bay and Appleton, and provides Wisconsin $1.4 billion in funding over the next two years.

The bill passed Friday in a rare show of bipartisanship. It passed in the House by a vote of 373-52, and in the Senate by a 74-19 vote.

The only members of the Wisconsin delegation to vote no were two Republicans: U.S. Sen. Ron Johnson and U.S. Rep. Jim Sensenbrenner, according to a Green Bay Press-Gazette report.

The measure authorizes about $100 billion for federal highway programs over the next two years. It also averts the need for another extension of funding based on the 2005 transportation bill. The current extension would have expired on June 30.

U.S. Rep. Reid Ribble, a Shorewood Republican, had served on the conference committee that crafted a compromise between the original House and Senate versions. He said he was pleased that both parties collaborated on a multiyear highway bill that will restore certainty to the economy.

"It's been a long road to this point," Ribble said. "A sound infrastructure goes hand in hand with a sound economy, and I'm glad that we finally reached this historic agreement that puts an end to the status quo of short-term, uncertain extensions."

Ribble had joined with U.S. Rep. Tom Petri, a Republican from Fond du Lac, to fight for an exception to one funding restriction. The restriction would have prevented Appleton's Valley Transit and Green Bay's Metro Transit systems from applying $1.5 million toward operating expenses.

Appleton Mayor Tim Hanna applauded the results, saying the outcome buys more time for transit officials to work on a more permanent funding solution.

"We're thrilled that provision was included in this bill," Hanna said.

Petri had voted against an earlier House version. He said the bill that passed Friday has a funding formula that's more favorable for Wisconsin.

"Today's bill essentially maintains the favorable formula we have been working with since 2005," Petri said. "We are getting this bill through just in time to avoid disrupting our state's road construction season."

Under the formula, Wisconsin would receive $719 million next year and $725 million in 2014, Petri said.

The other major aspect of the bill involved averting interest-rate increases on new loans to millions of undergraduate college students. Interest rates of 3.4 percent for subsidized Stafford loans were slated to double on Sunday. Instead they'll continue for another year.

Had the measure failed, interest rates would have mushroomed to 6.8 percent for 7.4 million students across the nation who are expected to get the loans over the coming year, adding an extra $1,000 to the average cost of each loan.

U.S. Rep. Tammy Baldwin, a Madison Democrat and U.S. Senate candidate, said the agreement will benefit more than 160,000 Wisconsin college students in the upcoming school year.

"In passing this important legislation today, members of Congress have shown that they can work together in bipartisan fashion to address challenges facing our nation," Baldwin said. "I sincerely hope that today's action marks a new commitment to focus on the issues that matter most to hard-working, middle class Wisconsinites."

Treasurer's Report

By Cristina Danforth
Oneida Tribal Treasurer

Sheku, Greetings

We have had a few successes in the Finance area over the past few weeks. Our first big triumph is that we paid off the Wastewater Treatment Center Bond in the amount of $6.8 million dollars. We also were able to pay off the Health Center Bond Redemption in the amount of $4.710 million dollars. Paying off these bonds has reduced our overall Tribal debt by $11.510 million dollars. Our second accomplishment is we have reached $11 million dollars in our reserve account. This is a huge victory for us as we have struggled for quite some time with the ability to put money into savings. These major achievements are due to our execution of prudent fiscal management. While none of the decisions have been easy, they have been necessary in order for us to regain comfortable footing.

One of the largest issues when debating due diligence and fiscal management is, needs versus wants. Getting to the root of what each area needs has been instrumental in deciding what has to be budgeted for. Yes we all want more, more money to hire additional staff, more money to travel to seminars, more money for the latest computer system (in some cases, a current one), more money for additional supplies, etc., but are those things really necessary? While some areas were and are still resistant to the implemented changes, the Finance Department has not lost sight of the goals and have pushed for less discretionary spending. With the goals of putting money in reserve and paying down our debt, all the changes were necessary.

One of the projects I have been working on for quite a while now is the creation of an Oneida Health Board. In the past, our Health Boards have been oversight boards without any authority. The Health Board I would like to promote would have authority over the business as well as the personnel. The discontinuation of the General Manager position has left the Division Directors reporting to the OBC Chairman. There is a fine line between supervising the Division Directors and being involved in the day-to-day business. The creation of a Health Board with authority would allow for supervision of the Health Care Directors and it is my hope that we would see improved customer service as well as more available appointment times.

The Health Board would be staffed with people who have health care backgrounds as well as those with business backgrounds. My thought is to have a well-rounded board that is able, not only to understand the issues, but to also implement solutions in a timely and efficient manner. This new idea, considering none of our other Boards have authority over their respective areas, has met with some resistance. Change is not something that everyone likes or can buy into immediately. While I understand the hesitation to try something new, I believe the creation of this Board will be instrumental in the Tribe's re-organization process. When the new Health Board proves to be successful, we can implement these types of Board's throughout the Tribe and that is what I believe the GTC is asking for when they mention re-organization. They are not looking for boxes to be moved around on a chart, they are looking for accountability and responsibility.

It is too easy to point fingers at others and say things like, they're not doing their job, or they don't do anything all day long. These comments are out there because it is someone's perception of what is occurring. Remarks of these types are made about everyone in a supervisory capacity, including myself. Rather than taking the time to ask questions and determine what is really happening, many of us choose to take the easy route and place blame. While this is unfortunate, it occurs very regularly and I hope with the creation of authoritative boards, we will see more compliments than complaints.

I wish you all continued happiness and health through these beautiful summer months and hope you find the time to enjoy the good weather.

Tina Danforth

Corruption

The Oneida Nations of Wisconsin has been disgraced by the decision to mislabel its ill-advised trash incineration project "Green Bay Renewable Energy," despite the fact that "renewable energy" means natural resources that cannot be depleted such as solar, wind, water or geothermal power.

Clearly, trash incineration is NOT "renewable energy" since the supposed objective is to diminish stock piles which should instead be reused and recycled, as well as wisely avoided in the first place.

Was the woeful choice of a misleading misnomer merely mindless, or was it Machiavellian?

Some People worship the money, but should we therefore call our casino a "Native American Church'?

People of conscience must oppose this odious corruption of language and leadership by insisting that candor prevail over a pattern of chicanery.

Sincerely,
Leah Sue Dodge

Holy Apostles Church: Correction

In a proactive effort to be more accurate about church documentation (and the Kali is kept for historical reference) I provide the following information.

1. Clarification One: The Vestry of Holy Apostles Episcopal Church met at a specially called meeting by the Finance Committee on June 27, 2012 and passed the following motion:

"Motion to close access to church based on imminent danger to our parishioners and or anyone who comes within the parameters of the front of Holy Apostles Episcopal Church. The vestry member who made the motion requested to be put on record with the following statement: " It is the responsibility of the vestry and the "priest in charge" to assure the safety and wellbeing of the church community and all others who come within the church grounds and should the motion fail I absolve myself from any responsibility."

The motion passed.

2. Clarification Two: The funds which will be utilized for the critical repairs are from a trust fund set aside for Holy Apostles Episcopal church by one Mildred Davis and in no way is the Diocese of Fond du Lac paying for this repair. On the contrary, since the Bishop holds the control for the Davis Trust the wording in the Kali states, "Funding for the repairs will be though the Diocese in Fond du Lac" - -it can be misleading. Those funds belong to our church.

3. Clarification Three: The information given the Kali states, "A fair estimation for repairs is approximately $100,000 to $130,000 for the exterior. For the record that estimate is from four (4) years ago with the understanding that every year that went by the damage would increase – and it has! So, to say $100,000 to $130,000 is "fair" does not do justice to our situation.

4. FOR THE RECORD: The vestry passed a motion which would set aside $250,000 to accommodate the most critical needs as based on the 2008 appraisal which we know has four years of additional degradation.

The Finance Committee continues to work very diligently on correcting our beautiful as well as historically significant and spiritual beacon. We meet every Monday evening at 5:30 pm in the former convent if anyone is interested in helping figure out a way to help save our sanctuary you are welcome to join us.

Yours in Christ.

Million Dollar Church Restoration

Every Oneida, no matter where you live continues to be impacted by Oneida Holy Apostles Episcopal Church. The historical church building is in need of "tip of the iceberg" repairs consisting of the bell tower and east elevation side walls and has temporarily closed. The June 21st Kalihwisaks repair costs and funding sources are not accurate and thus the reason for this comment. Now and in the next few years, Holy Apostles will have no choice but to undergo a series of major "below the iceberg" repairs starting with the roof; steep pitch, brittle slate shingle perhaps containing asbestos, and three chimneys in poor repair. Then the west elevation walls will need repair. Also, the ceiling will need insulation and west end ventilation.

The point is this… fixing the church is a long-term community commitment because the "true" costs of restoration and repair cannot be sustained by the congregation. What does this mean? The congregation can start fixing some of the needed repairs but without community financial support; Holy Apostles will eventually degrade beyond the congregational ability to maintain it. This brings us to current repairs for which it is all from congregational (mostly Oneida tribal member money) and not from Diocese of Fond du Lac or other sources such as the Oneida Tribe. It is currently up to us (tribal community) to fix the church building and in the future it will still be up to us.

Resolutions
1. Commitment to Complete Oneida Governance Analysis Process
Sponsor: Melinda J. Danforth
Motion by Patty Hoeft to adopt resolution #06-13-12-A Commitment to Support Implementation of Oneida Governance Analysis Action Plans by December 31, 2013 and to appoint Quality of Life Sub Committee as the primary team to implement the Gann work, seconded by David Jordan. Motion carried with one abstention:
Ayes: Melinda J. Danforth, Vince DelaRosa, Greg Matson, Patty Hoeft, David Jordan, Brandon Stevens
Abstained: Tina Danforth
For the record: Tina Danforth stated the recommendation provided in the memo of June 5th says adopt resolution titled Commitment to Complete Oneida Governance Analysis Initiatives by December 31, 2013. So I just wanted to note that there is a time frame with that resolution.
Motion by Tina Danforth to appoint Quality of Life Sub Committee as primary team to implement the Gann work, the members include Paul Ninham, Melinda J. Danforth, Ed Delgado, David Jordan and Patty Hoeft, according to the discussion today, seconded by Brandon Stevens. Motion carried unanimously:
2. Fee-to-Trust Application for W2700 block of County Road EE

3. Tribal Environmental Response law fiscal analysis request
Motion by Melinda J. Danforth to request from the Treasurer/Finance department that a fiscal analysis be completed on the Tribal Environmental Response law by September, seconded by Brandon Stevens. Motion carried unanimously.
4. Emergency Management and Homeland Security law update review memo
Motion by Patty Hoeft to accept the report, seconded by Greg Matson. Motion carried with one abstention:
Ayes: Vince DelaRosa, Greg Matson, Patty Hoeft, David Jordan, Brandon Stevens
Abstained: Tina Danforth
Not present: Melinda J. Danforth
For the record: Tina Danforth stated currently the Emergency Management and Homeland Security law is intact as approved by a prior Business Committee. It is intact without any changes. There has been no formal action of the Business Committee to change that. The only formal action of the Business Committee right now, was to send it to the LOC for review, with some changes a few committee members made, which is fine, they can do that. Currently we are operating under the Emergency Management and Homeland Security law as adopted by the last Business Committee. No formal action was taken by this body, that I am aware of, that changed that or changed the status of personnel within the Homeland Security department, to carry arms. No formal action is taken to that effect.

Finance Committee
Treasurer Tina Danforth, Chairwoman
1. June 8 minutes and e-poll
Motion by Tina Danforth to approve June 8 Finance Committee minutes and e-poll, seconded by Patty Hoeft. Motion carried with one abstention:
Ayes: Tina Danforth, Vince DelaRosa, Greg Matson, Patty Hoeft, Brandon Stevens
Abstained: David Jordan

General Tribal Council
1. Petitioner Yvonne Metivier: The GTC directs the OBC/Oneida Housing Authority to reduce all rentals for Tribal members
Motion by Patty Hoeft to defer the Yvonne Metivier petition regarding Housing Authority rental rates to the next Business Committee meeting, seconded by Greg Matson. Motion carried unanimously.
2. Petitioners Connie VandeHei, Wanda Diemel, Nikki Johnson, Wanita Decorah, Jessica Wallenfang: To mandate the Oneida Business Committee to review, amend and implement a new complaint process for Oneida Childcare
Motion by Patty Hoeft to accept the report from the Legislative Reference Office, seconded by Vince DelaRosa. Motion carried with one abstention:
Ayes: Vince DelaRosa, Greg Matson, Patty Hoeft, David Jordan, Brandon Stevens
Abstained: Tina Danforth
Not present: Melinda J. Danforth
3. Petitioner Mike Debraska: GTC meeting schedule, stipend, per capita Motion by Patty Hoeft to accept the report from Legislative Reference Office, seconded by Brandon Stevens. Motion carried unanimously.

New Business/Requests
1. Post department trainer position for Gaming Division
Sponsor: Louise Cornelius
Motion by David Jordan to approve the posting, seconded by Brandon Stevens. Motion carried unanimously.
2. Determine best action for Oneida Strategic Housing Committee
Sponsor: Vince DelaRosa
Motion by David Jordan to dissolve in its official capacity the Oneida Housing Strategic Committee and a new subcommittee work group be reassembled which would report directly to the Community Development and Planning Committee, seconded by Patty Hoeft. Motion carried with two abstentions:
Ayes: Tina Danforth, Vince DelaRosa, Greg Matson, Patty Hoeft, David Jordan
Abstained: Melinda J. Danforth, Brandon Stevens
For the record: Vince DelaRosa stated it's not confusing, I'm sorry it is for you but I will try and spell it out. Essentially that committee will still be able to work as you described earlier. Looking at plans from Stock Lumber or Menards, or however they bring plans forward, but they will be reporting directly to the Community Development and Planning Committee. That's the only differentiation. They can meet all they want and they can work in sub-groups all they desire to.
For the record: Brandon Stevens stated the reason my abstention is more so with what the Chairman has expressed, we have a process of dissolving committees under a formal committee level, so it's just kind of awkward we're doing it in this fashion.
3. Approve National Center for Senior Transportation Peer Mobility grant
Sponsor: Don White
Motion by Tina Danforth to approve the National Center on Senior Transportation contract, which provides for what could be construed as a limited waiver of sovereign immunity, per the specific binding arbitration that is within the rules of American Arbitration Association, article 11, which is within the law of the State of Illinois, seconded by David Jordan. Motion carried unanimously.
4. Approve additional $3 an hour for hours worked during Pow Wow weekend
Sponsor: Ed Delgado
Motion by Brandon Stevens to approve additional $3 an hour for hours worked during Pow Wow weekend as identified, for hourly retail employees, seconded Greg Matson. Motion carried with one opposition:
Ayes: Tina Danforth, Vince DelaRosa, Greg Matson, Patty Hoeft, David Jordan, Brandon Stevens
Opposed: Melinda J. Danforth
For the record: Tina Danforth stated I am supporting this given that other employees will be given the same consideration.
For the record: David Jordan stated the reason I was for it, because they are all Tribal members of the Oneida Tribe and this is like a Christmas to a lot of traditional members of this Tribe and if they have to work…I granted it for the purpose of that reasoning.
Motion by Tina Danforth to recess for lunch at 12:05 p.m., seconded by David Jordan. Motion carried unanimously.

Travel
Travel Reports
1. ICDGB Block Grant Training, May 29-30, 2012, Chicago, IL
Sponsor: Vince DelaRosa
Motion by Patty Hoeft to approve the travel report, seconded by Melinda J. Danforth. Motion carried unanimously:
Ayes: Melinda J. Danforth, Tina Danforth, Vince DelaRosa, Patty Hoeft, David Jordan, Paul Ninham, Brandon Stevens
Not present: Greg Matson
2. Manufacturing Matters Conference, May 8-9, 2012, Milwaukee, WI
